MUSGROVE'S HAT IS HURLED INTO RING

Formally Enters Race For President in Opposition to Senator Underwood

L. B. Musgrove, of Jasper, shortly before 8 o'clock Saturday filed personally with Chairman R. B. Evans of the state democratic executive committee declaration of his candidacy for president in the March primary, in which he will oppose Senator Oscar W. Underwood. At the same time Mr. Musgrove gave to the press a formal declaration of principles upon which he will make his race. His statement reads as follows:

A serious and unprecedented situation confronts the people of Alabama. The right of the people to select their own representatives, not hitherto denied in free America, has been foreclosed by an act of the recent legislature. The reactionary wet political element in Alabama, of which Senator Underwood is the chief exponent, and from which Alabamians thought they had freed themselves, secured the passage in the legislature of Alabama, on September 13, 1923, after Senator Underwood had announced his candidacy, a law by the terms of which no other name can be placed on the ballot if a citizen of Alabama qualifies for the race.

This law was frankly admitted by its proponents to deliver the Alabama legislature into their hands. They were not willing to risk the voters of the state in selecting their own delegates. These politicians must know, as does everyone throughout the country, that Senator Underwood can neither be nominated nor elected president of the United States. They will, however, if they are allowed the opportunity, ride off your delegation to some reactionary and wet candidate who would not represent the progressive democracy of this commonwealth.

In order to meet this situation, at the urgent request of citizens of Alabama from every walk of life, I have qualified as a candidate for election as the democratic nominee from Alabama for the presidency. Not only am I a native of this state and a life-long resident as well, cherishing its history and traditions, if I am elected, I nominate the democrats of Alabama and I will appoint under the terms of the law, as delegates, only such progressive and dry democrats as will properly represent the good people of this state, to the end that your voting strength shall not be traded off to the rats, to Wall street, Tammany, Al Smith or any other reactionary element of the party.

N ENJOYABLE OUTING

The editor and wife are under many obligations to Mr. and Mrs. Thos. A. Berry for a most delightful auto trip on Sunday afternoon.

We motored up the B. & M. highway and Jimmison and were agreeably surprised to find the road in splendid condition.

The air was warm and spring like. Mr. Curry is a chauffeur after our heart—not a wind burner but just a safe and sane man of good sense and judgment at the wheel.

NOW WHAT?

At the meeting of the state republican committee in Birmingham last Saturday, the black and tan element, under the leadership of O. D. Street, succeeded in effectively putting the steam roller over the lilly white contingent represented in Alabama by Pope Long.

They refused to submit the election of presidential delegates to the vote of the people in a primary and called a hand-picked convention for that purpose, to meet in Birmingham in May.

The real issue in the matter was whether or not the lilly white faction, under Long, should be given a chance before the voters and, evidently, they were afraid to risk the white republicans of Alabama or to give them an opportunity of expressing their disapproval of the social equality party.

Coolidge is leading the black and tan hosts as their choice for president while Hiram Johnson is the candidate of the lilly white faction.

Alabama will have 16 votes in the nominating convention and Street was in duty bound to deliver them to Coolidge, so he could not afford to take any chances.

Now comes the question. Monday morning bright and soon, Hiram Johnson filed his name with the secretary of state as a candidate for president in the presidential primary. He has ignored the action of the executive committee in declining to have a primary, and announces himself as a candidate in the primary.

What will be the outcome of this situation. Two sets of delegates will result, of course, the question is which set will be seated. It will precipitate a fight between the white and black wings in the presidential convention and will inevitably force the republican party to declare to all the world where they stand on the subject of negro equality.

MRS. H. S. SHAW AT HOSPITAL

The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Shaw will regret to learn that she is confined to her bed at the hospital.

She has been in declining health for some time and her case finally developed to where an operation was deemed necessary. She was carried to the local hospital and Dr. Benedict, a noted Birmingham surgeon called in to perform the operation.

We learn that she underwent the ordeal safely and is now doing fine on her way to recovery. Her many friends unite in hoping to speedily see her out again with her health entirely restored.

EXCUSE EVAN

Guess you all had noticed a change in Evan Parrish. He seems to have banished his boyish ways and assumed the staid and steady solemnity of a patriarch. But there is a reason and it rests in a tiny cradle down at his house and is in the shape of a dainty little miss who came there, for a protracted visit, last Thursday.

It affords us pleasure to say that both the mother and babe are doing nicely.

Of course, you will excuse Evan now that you have the facts.

HOW TO CATCH HAWKS AND OWLS

So far as our knowledge and experience extends the following true story, given us by Mr. C. L. Hayes, who resides in the northwestern part of the county, is not only unique and wonderful, but is also valuable to any one who is troubled by owls and hawks in their poultry business.

In one year Mr. Hayes has disposed of 33 hawks and 11 owls and has made such a clean up that his poultry runs at large in perfect safety now.

Of this number, 29 of the hawks and 7 of the owls were caught in steel traps, while he disposed of the others with his trusty shot gun.

The manner of setting these traps is what you need to get on to. He sets a pole, some 10 or 15 feet tall, up in the open field and on top of these poles he sets a steel trap without bait. The invariable habit of the hawk and owl is to find some suitable point of observation, in an open place, where they can see in every direction and avoid the danger of being slipped up on by any kind of an enemy.

These polls furnish them with an ideal point of lookout, so they naturally fly there and light, with the result that the trap catches them by the foot and the trick is done.

Mr. Hayes has tried out this system and finds that it is a most unequalled success and actually eliminates every hawk and owl that resides in the territory. We would suggest that our friends in the country make a note of this and if they are troubled with hawks or owls they get some traps and put an end to the expensive nuisance.

CAPITAL PAPER SAYS LEASING BLOTS STATE

The convict lease system in Alabama continues to attract unfavorable attention to that state, and really to give it a very black eye.

The Washington Post, having heard from Birmingham that the fight against the system was making progress with the promise of eventual success, editorially declares today:

"From Birmingham comes the report that the movement to abolish the 'convict leasing' system now in effect in Alabama is headed towards successful conclusion."

"It is hoped so. Such a system is repugnant to American ideals and institutions and reflects great discredit on any state that is guilty of it."

"Recent exposures in 'convict leasing' sections have revealed horrors at which the humane everywhere have revolted. Those who know the system know that such horrors are inherent in it."

"Alabama and other states that tolerate convict leasing cannot act too quickly in stamping out a system that is a reproach to their civilization."

MRS. WILBANKS DEAD

On Thursday afternoon, December 27th, 1923, as the hands of the clock slowly passed four the sweet soul of Mrs. Nettie Bailey Wilbanks faded away. Of all the tender care that was given, God saw he had a place more precious for her in Heaven.

She is survived by her husband, G. T. Wilbanks, Clanton; also three sons, Thos. E. Wilbanks, Montgomery; Jack and Wheeler Wilbanks, Birmingham; and four daughters, Mrs. F. E. Riquett, West Point, Ga.; Mrs. J. M. Martin, Clanton; Mrs. E. L. Hartley and Miss Carl Wilbanks, Montgomery, besides a host of other relatives and friends.

The remains were laid to rest in Clanton cemetery Friday afternoon after a beautiful short service at the Clanton Baptist church conducted by Rev. H. G. Williams of Cincinnati, Ohio, who happened to be visiting relatives and friends in Clanton.

"Lead Kindly Light" and "My Father Knows" were beautifully rendered by a quartette composed of Messrs. Percy Pitts and Jesse Jones, Mrs. Jno. T. Ellis and Miss Della Latham.

Pall bearers were Dr. E. E. Upchurch, Jno. T. Ellis, W. H. Sartor, J. Watts Moore, J. P. Lawrence and Andrew N. Miner.

Sometimes when we read the Union-Banner we are forcibly reminded of that trite scriptural injunction which says: "Ephraim is joined to his idols, let him alone."

JEMISON NOTES

(By R. B. Johnson)

In one of the niftiest and fastest games of the season, last Friday week, Dec. 21, as old Sol was invisible and a heavy mist of rain from the clouded elements above threatened the entire game, the Jemison High School basketball team added another victory to their credit by handing defeat to the Clanton County High school quintette by the overwhelming score of 20 to 10.

The entire contest was seasoned with thrills and pierced with excitement, while each team was encouraged by constant cheering and steady applause of their respective schoolmates. The game opened as it to terminate in a close score, but as the second half began, (as the two teams were deadlocked in a tie, 5-5) the Jemison High players broke loose from their opponents and sealed the game to their record by looping the ball galore. Gary Ross the star center and Calvin Lenore, a note-worthy forward stands out foremost in pitching field goals, each getting three. Hard luck confronted the stellar little forward, Leonard Glass, as he made two difficult pitches, each going through ruled out as time was called just as the ball was going through. He also starred in pitching foul goals, by looping 3 out of 4 shots. Fulton Lenore and Charles Glass also displayed some neat guarding.

Much credit is due Coach Grant for the able direction of his team. He drills them regularly in pass work and arduous plays; something the Jemison School sadly lacked last season. He has taken the un-experienced boys which were green in a measure, and developed from them one of the fastest High School teams in Central Alabama. So far this season they have played seven and won all, hence you readily see that his untiring efforts have proven fruitful. Coach Grant formerly played on the varsity team of Marberry High, consequently he is thoroughly familiar with the game. He is constantly pouring incentive into his players and is always there with might and main. His interest in athletics seems unlimited. His careful supervision of the team wins both fame and honor for the school and athletics. Jemison High School is truly gratified over having such a competent director as Coach Grant proves to be. His eager desire is to see his team pass through the entire season with a string of unbroken victories.

The Jemison High School resumed operation here last Monday, after a series of Christmas holidays. Several students were absent the first few days, but practically all have returned by now, with zeal to finish the second semester with a high percentage on their work. Each seemingly enjoyed the few days rest and freedom from their school tasks, but they have returned refreshed with a strong desire to make the year's work profitable. Several pupils are compelled to remain home on account of an epidemic of measles now threatening the town.

On last Saturday evening at 7 o'clock Misses Ollie and Elsie Busby gave a delightful entertainment, which all that were present enjoyed very much.

Miss Mittie Hyman has returned to Hartselle, where she is at the present engaged in teaching.

Mr. Erman Shaw left last Friday night for Birmingham, after a few days vacation which he spent with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Shaw.

The bird and rabbit hunters through this section have certainly put in full time this week seeking the wily denizens of the forest and field. Many a swift-footed bunny and the elusive bob-white have fallen prey before the numerous hunters that invaded the fields. One set of hunters came into town with 21 rabbits from their day's hunt.

Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Summers and daughter, Eleanor, made a pleasant visit to Mulberry community (their former residing place prior to moving to Jemison last Saturday).

Mr. Houston Rodgers and wife are now visiting relatives in Alabama City. Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Sims of Birmingham were visiting the former's parents here during the Christmas holidays.

Mr. Curtis Webb entertained a few of his personal friends last Wednesday p. m.

Messrs. Seymour Reynolds and Byron Atkinson have gone to Birmingham to procure work.

The Jemison High School basketball quintette will lock with the Thorsby Institute team Friday evening, 3:30, on

SHUT UP YOUR DOGS

Owing to the fact that an epidemic of hydrophobia is passing through this section it has been ordered by the town authorities that all dogs be kept shut up for a period of 60 days.

Several cases of hydrophobia have developed in and around Clanton quite recently and there is grave danger in allowing the dogs to run at large.

This order is put out merely as a safeguard and they hope for the hearty cooperation of the public.

Look out for any dog that looks peculiar and give him a wide berth; children especially are in danger.

UNDERWOOD VS. McADOO

At the present time it looks like the real race for the democratic nomination for president will be between Senator Underwood and Mr. McAdoo.

Don't understand us to say, however, that the nomination is obliged to fall to either one of these men, for, in truth, we rather doubt it at present.

That they will do the bulk of the campaigning we think is a foregone conclusion and that each of them will go into the convention with a large number of pledged delegates we think is equally true, but on that very fact rests our belief that neither of them has much show at the nomination.

The delegates belonging to these two prominent leaders will not be likely to flop to the other. Their campaigns will develop such wide political ideals of the two that delegates pledged to either of them will never agree to go over to the other side. So a deadlock will result and, before a nomination can be effected, a compromise candidate will have to be in as a dark horse and to him will go the nomination that both the real candidates fought for.

That is our prediction at this time. The Al Smith delegates may swing over into the Underwood camp, but if they do, there will be a bunch of independent delegates from the middle northwest who are intensely anti-Al Smith and they will naturally offset the danger of that move by throwing their strength to McAdoo. Thus, we predict, the nomination of either of these men will become impossible.

We realize that we are making this prediction a long time ahead, but you watch it and see if some man you have not given a serious thought to don't get to be the next democratic nominee.

You are only a first cousin to the African ape. The wise (?) men have discovered that our long-tailed ancestor lived in England 4,000,000 years ago. We feel relieved: We did not want to be kin to anything that came from Africa because we are a good old Southern democrat.

The Thorsby court. All who can, come and view this game, as the Thorsby team is anxious to shatter the hopes of the Jemison High's mark of a record of unbroken victories.

WEST CHILTON

Christmas has come and gone, but seems that every one enjoyed the holidays and children were up early all over the country, shooting fire crackers.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Harris seemed to have enjoyed the holidays even if none of their children come.

Mr. H. C. Batton and wife of Silsbee, Texas, visited his parents and sister, Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Batton and Mrs. C. C. Gay, during the holidays. J. D. Batton of Bessemer also visited home folks.

Quite a crowd went out fox hunting Friday night but failed to get a race. Mr. O'Neal was out inspecting cattle during the holidays.

Quite a number were out squirrel hunting and reported having 15 squirrels up one tree, killing ten and five going in a hole. They declare this to be a fact.

Messrs. Hugh and Palmer Barnes of Texas were home for the holidays visiting home folks, Mr. and Mrs. Shelby Barnes.

J. D. and C. C. Gay Jr. attended the Christmas tree at Dr. Martin's Christmas night.

Mrs. Moon and children of Tuscaloosa visited her sister, Mrs. R. R. Fuller.

Mrs. Osborn and children spent part of the holidays with relatives and friends in Perry county.

Mr. T. A. Gay and wife, Mr. F. H. Batton and wife, H. G. Batton and wife, Jim Gay and family, Mr. W. B. Davis and family and John T. Gay of Wilton took Christmas dinner at Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Gay's.

Miss Vida Fuller of Tuscaloosa visited her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Royster Fuller.

Mr. E. E. Todd, civil engineer for the E.-E. Jackson Lumber Company, was looking over some of their land last Thursday and tracing out lines.

Mr. and Mrs. William Marshall of Dallas County were pleasant visitors to Mr. and Mrs. Lonnie Eaves last Saturday and Sunday.

We all enjoyed the pretty warm weather of the past week, but many of us would like to see some real old time cold weather, so we could kill hogs.

Wishing the editor as well as the News' many friends a happy and prosperous New Year.

BANKER RUDDER ILL

The sad news reached us Tuesday that Banker Rudder, of Marbury, had been stricken with paralysis and is now in a Montgomery hospital in a very precarious condition.

This is the most serious blow that could have hit that entire section. Mr. Rudder is the friend of everyone and especially the school children. He has been the life of the splendid High School at Marbury and was always in the front rank of every movement that benefited humanity.

We earnestly hope he will be spared to his friends and will regain his normal health.

Just about the time the roads begin to get passable along comes another rainy spell and down we go into the mud again. Traveling now sure is hard on New Year's resolutions.

Bet you haven't got used to writing it 1924 yet.

Try to live as straight as you think the other fellow ought to and you will get along fine.

Dame Rumor seems to have employed a side kick called slander to help out in the holiday rush.

A little broken glass bottle tells its own sad story of the fate of somebody's new year resolution.

"Let your light so shine" that other fellows seeing your car will have no excuse for smashing you up.

The way it looks now Hiram Johnson will have no opposition in the republican-presidential primary.

The very extraordinary plenipotentiary from Russia failed to make a touch on the treasury at Washington.

There is rarely ever a case you would recognize in the court house as the same one you heard about on the streets.

We did not make any New Year resolutions because we feared we would not have an opportunity to break them.

We want to be in time, so please remember when you plant your tomatoes to put our name in the patch in big letters.

If people would try to do right, one justice of the peace and two lawyers would be all that any county would support.

After all, 1924 promises to be a real interesting year from a political standpoint. "Cotton Tom" can sit back and enjoy the fun this time.

Many of the tourist cars that pass through here carry a pretty fair sized farm along with them in the shape of mud gathered up by their cars.

Young men, the Federal government wants 2000 more volunteers for service in the aviation department. If you are ready to kick off, here's your chance.

When a person takes his first step in crime he will spend all the balance of his life in committing more crimes to hide that one.

Quite often recently we have been reminded of the old saying, "that if you will only give a crook rope enough he would hang himself."

We must be through with ancient war methods. We notice that the government has effected a bargain sale to Mexico of a lot of our war junk left from the last war.

People manifest just about as much sense in "running to court" with every little personal grudge as they do in going right on to hell with the straight and narrow path right before them.

We hear whispers now and then of an old time dance taking place, but they are always very careful to let it be known that they do not want any publicity. Have they got all of that bad?

Boys, the medical department of the Federal government has given out warning that some of the "Extracts" put out are made up with wood alcohol as a basis. We don't mean to insinuate at all.

All thinking people will see in the announcement of Hon. L. B. Musgrove of Walker county for president the natural and legitimate result of trying to deliver the electorate of Alabama like a bunch of lettuce.

It is said the next great war will be fought in the air and under the seas. Good. That will remove the scene of activities out of the way and the rest of us can go right on with our business and bootlegging.

Some of the girls who paint are real artists and they pass along looking sweet enough to eat, while others need years of education along that line to keep them from looking so frightful that they give one a nightmare.

FORGIVE THEM, THEY KNEW NOT WHAT THEY DID

The "Tree of Knowledge" planted by the last legislature, when they undertook to hog-tie and deliver the free electorate of Alabama, safe and harmless into the hands of any one man, has bloomed and brought forth the inevitable and legitimate fruit that everybody else, except the legislature saw from the first.

The zealous friends of Mr. Underwood, in their zeal to guarantee an undivided set of delegates for him from his own state, dealt his campaign all over the nation a most disastrous blow and succeeded in bringing about a very serious fight on here at home, when if they had just kept their hands off and not attempted to legislate him into the white house, we doubt very materially that he would have had opposition in Alabama at all.

The greatest bone we have to contend with, politically, in these days of ultra up-to-dateness is the mania that seems to possess all of our law making bodies that they can regulate, coerce and control the individual likes and dislikes, habits and mental processes of every person in the land.

To a large extent they have succeeded in invading even the home life of their constituents and got by with it, but an effort to boldly manacle their votes and deliver them in advance to any man or cause is going a step farther than even their supposed license and jurisdiction will stretch. In this instance the people called a pre-emptory halt and the man they so ardently wished to legislate into victory was done untold injury by their enthusiastic effort to deliver signed and sealed, the votes of the free people of Alabama.

Whether Mr. Underwood can discomfit this egregious blunder of his over-zealous supporters and get by with the endorsement of his home state remains to be seen.

The fact remains, however, that the passage of that profoundly silly resolution has forced upon Mr. Underwood a hot fight at home where otherwise we doubt that he would have had opposition at all.

In the case his opponent should win out, (and that is not at all impossible) Mr. Underwood will be forced into the nominating convention to face a really McDadoo delegation from his home state.

Slick politicians generally succeed in putting the knife into their constituents on all occasions, but the day has not arrived yet when they can deliver their ballots in advance to suit their own whims.

WHO CAN REGISTER

The idea seems to prevail to quite a large extent that unless you have paid your poll tax you are not entitled to registration.

This impression is altogether wrong. The payment of your poll tax has nothing to do with your rights to registration privileges.

It is important that you register anyway whether you have paid or not and don't allow the chance to go by without availing yourself of the privilege.

You can not vote unless you pay your poll tax, neither can you vote if you have paid it, unless your name appears on the registration list. So you see, it is important under all circumstances that you register.

The Registrars will be on their rounds now very shortly and we beg you to bear this fact in mind and to get your name properly on the list.

Let's vote the weather man a vacation. His reputation is being shot all to pieces by the curious antics of the weather. He hasn't made a score in two weeks and now he has lost the coldest wave that ever started south. He needs a rest.

Ex-Gov. Walton, of Oklahoma, is now under nine indictments as a law violator, four of which indictments are for penal offenses. That's a pretty fair record to make when he was only governor a little less than two years.

Mr. W. T. Hand of Jemison was in Clanton a little while Monday morning. The many friends of Mr. Hand regret to see him in such feeble health again.

STATE REPUBLICAN SITUATION MIXED

Following the recent conference of the faction led by Long and Thomas, and the announcement as to the presidential candidacy, Chairman Atkins of the regular organization made reply in sharp tones.

Frank S. Rea, secretary of the Republican club and of the Long-Thomas faction, answers the Atkins communication as follows:

"It is indeed an ill wind that blows no one good. The presidential primary law, while intended primarily for Senator O. W. Underwood, undoubtedly does give the Republicans of Alabama an opportunity to hold a primary in which President Coolidge, Senator Johnson and all other candidates, whether residents of Alabama or not may have their names placed on the ticket and let the 75,000 Republicans of Alabama express their choice. Outside of selfishness and fear of the result what excuse can Street and Atkins offer against a primary? It is certain that these gentlemen will never willingly permit the Republican voters of Alabama to pass judgement upon the way they have conducted party affairs in this state or express a choice for president. They insist upon a convention, the delegates of which must be passed upon by a bought and paid for committee controlled by deputies of 'Brother-in-law Snead,' the Kennamer brothers, known locally as the 'Gold Dust Twins,' and a few postmasters, so they meet in solemn conclave behind closed doors undisturbed by public opinion.

"The labored defense of Streetism would be amusing, if it were not so ridiculous. He would have us believe that the unselfish Street had secured nothing for himself. Let's see. He secured for his brother-in-law, Snead, of Marshall County the co-leadership of internal revenue, with 100 deputies, one of which is the son of Chairman Atkins. He secured the appointment of his kinsman to the postoffice at Jacksonville. He secured for his next-door neighbor, Charles B. Kennamer, the U. S. attorneyship. He secured for Thomas J. Kennamer, a native of Marshall County, and a brother of Charlie, the U. S. marshalship. The only reason Street did not grab one of these places himself was because he was waiting for bigger game, a federal judgeship, the one great ambition of his life. We have no fight to make against officeholders per se, but we do most emphatically oppose the selfishness that awards three of the four major federal positions of North Alabama to the one county of Marshall in order to give Street a strangle hold upon a federal judgeship, if a vacancy should occur.

Chairman Atkins tries to explain Street's poor race of last year by saying he was knifed. It was because Republicans were disgusted with family politics. Who knifed him in his home, county of Marshall, where Harding received 3,900 votes and Street only 1,300, and where the Democratic majority in 1920, with Street not on the ticket was less than 100, and in 1922, with Street heading the ticket, it was 1,800? In Chairman Atkins' own county of Cleburn, why was it the county Republican ticket won by several hundred majority and Street lost the county by several hundred? Did Atkins himself knife him? How about Jefferson County, where Street received only 424 votes and Harding received 7,126? Mr. Atkins, do you think it helped the ticket any when you and Street selected one W. H. Armbricht to preside over the state convention in 1922, when both of you knew said Armbricht had been elected a delegate by a mass meeting held in a negro hall, advertised in a negro paper, with a negro secretary of said mass meeting, and that said negro signed the credentials of said Armbricht?

"The said mass meeting, as you knew, also elected a county committee for Mobile County consisting of 12 white men and 12 negroes, which shows how they felt as to racial equality. Why did you and Street, with 75,000 Republicans to pick from, select this Armbricht, not only to preside over the state convention, but also place him on the state ticket with Mr. Street?

"There is no wonder that our party was wrecked and our vote decreased from 75,000 to 30,000. Had it not been for the straight tickets voted on account of the county tickets, Street and Armbricht would not have received 5,000 votes.

"The white Republicans of Alabama are 'not for self, but for Republican expansion.' Then why not let the Republicans express themselves in a primary?"

BREAKS IN JAIL TO GET WARM BED FOR WINTER

CHICAGO, Jan. 2—"I am drunk Arrest me," Policeman James Brown demanded confirmation of this announcement a Emil Miller, 47 years old staggered into a police station Wednesday. "Sure I am—whoopie," Miller shouted lustily. When taken before Justice Schwaba the confessed drunk asked for 90 days in jail. "Too much," the judge replied. "I fine you $10 and give you 30 days." Miller admitted he wanted a warm bed for the rest of the winter.

Some of the merchants in Clanton are grateful for your patronage. See their announcements in this week's News.

No, we don't fly at each other's throats in Chilton county, do we? Some people will attempt to deny anything but history goes right on making just the same.

When people grow so lop-sided with prejudice that the truth affects them like a red rag does a mad bull they are really objects of pity.

Mr. A. J. Baxley of Mt. Creek was an appreciated caller at our office last Tuesday.

The papers tell us one day that the Mexican Federal army has wiped up the earth with all of the rebels and the next day they tell us that Obregon and his army have been annihilated. We wish some reliable party would settle the matter by letting us know whether or not there is a revolution in Mexico. The wonderful radio system is even less reliable than the wires.

It is conservatively estimated that 85 percent of the lawsuits filed in court could have been satisfactorily settled out of court if an effort had been made to do so. Going to court is the least satisfactory and the most expensive way there is for settling difficulties.

Underwood and Musgrove are going to have another battle royal, but with a decidedly different line up from what they had before. At this time the result is doubtful. Both seem to have about an equal look in for the delegates.

IT DRIVES OUT WORMS

The surest sign of worms in children is paleness, lack of interest in play, fretfulness, variable appetite, picking at the nose and sudden starting in sleep. When these symptoms appear it is time to give White's Cream Vermifuge. A few doses drives out the worms and puts the little one on the road to health again. White's Cream Vermifuge has a record of fifty years of successful use. Price 35c. Sold by Upchurch Drug Co.

The New Touring Car $295 F.O.B. DETROIT

A Striking Value—at $295

Considering the improved appearance of the new Ford Touring Car, one would naturally expect a proportionate advance in price.

Larger scale production, however, has made it possible to incorporate in this new type touring car a number of decided improvements without increasing its cost to the purchaser.

A comparison extending over a long period of years will reveal the fact that the present price is actually the lowest at which the five-passenger open car has ever been sold.

The Ford Touring Car stands today, as it always has, a most remarkable value in the motor car field.

Every reader of this paper should file that page away and keep it. There is more information on that page than you could acquire by hard and constant study in years.

You can take that page and be the best informed man or woman in your community and the important thing about it is that it is absolutely reliable. You can learn more from that page than $1000 worth of ordinary education would teach you.

You are getting more than 500 percent on your dollar a year subscription at one time.

Look at it! Read it! Refer to it for your facts. Settle your arguments by it and be the best posted man on recent history in your community by keeping it and studying it in your idle time.

It is a full and complete history of all the important events that transpired in 1923 with accurate dates.

The Chilton County News is pleased to be able to give you all this year book of important data

HIGH SCHOOL OPENS

The Chilton County High School opened for business again Wednesday morning with Prof. Peterson acting principle in the absence of Prof. Pegues.

Although the weather was very unpropitious a good attendance of pupils were on hand.

We hope the remaining months of the term will be harmonious in every respect and that every pupil will be able to "pass" when the final test comes.

A FINE RECORD

Dividends amounting to over $100,000.00 will be distributed to holders of Alabama Power Company Preferred Stock on January first, in accordance with the action of the Company's Board of Directors who declared the fifteenth regular quarterly dividend at their last meeting.

The Alabama Power Company markets its own Preferred Stock through an Investment Department maintained for the purpose. The stock was first placed on the market in June 1920 and Citizens of the State have each year manifested their faith in the Company by increasing their purchases. Thomas Bragg, manager of the Investment Department, reports that during the year now closing more stock was sold than during 1920, 1921 and 1922 combined. Alabamians purchasing nearly $3,000,000.00 of Power Company Preferred during 1923.

Mr. Bragg predicts that during 1924 the record of this year will be surpassed and Alabama Power Company Preferred will continue to lead in the Customer Ownership field.

Clever Di

Diogenes was strolling in the dark places with his lantern, when he was stopped by one who inquired:

"Sir, are you the Athenian Nut who is looking for an honest man with a lantern?"

"I'm him," said Diogenes. "Who are you?"

"I," said the inquirer, "am your honest man."

"Liar!" shrieked Diogenes. "Get out of my way! No honest man was ever conscious of the fact!"—Richmond Times Dispatch.

NOTICE

Each share holder connected with the Thorsby central is requested to be present at a meeting to be held at Thorsby Saturday, Jan. 5th, at 2 p. m. Some important business to be attended to. Please be present.

LEON B. POPWELL, Pres.
R. W. SCOTT, Sec.

Mr. Leon Mullins, who is now in the employment of the Alabama Power Company and located at Dadeville, spent a few days during the holidays with his relatives and many friends here.

Claude Pipes, who is attending the University of Virginia, was home during Christmas. He is a son of Mr. and Mrs. H. T. Pipes. He expects to graduate at that famous institution next year.

Mr. J. H. Anderson of Cherokee Bluffs was in Clanton one day last week. Mr. Anderson was a teacher in Chilton for a number of years. He has scores of friends in this town and county who are always glad to have him visit our town and county.

Miss Lorene Parrish of Birmingham spent the holidays with friends and relatives in Clanton. Miss Parrish is a student of Wheeler Business College. She is a young lady with a bright future.

TAKE YOUR CHOICE

There is one thing you can say for Clanton, especially during the last few days.

If you can't get the gospel preached here to suit you then, we fear, you are destined to travel the wrong road when you leave this world.

Besides the regular services at the orthodox churches here every Sunday, we have been having a gospel of some kind preached on the streets, from many and diverse preachers, from one to four times per day, for the past week.

Now, if you cannot find you a road to a better country than this out of all this varied list of directions you better give it up.

SOME DOG

A man was strolling down the main street of town, holding a pointer in leash. He met a friend and entered into conversation with him. The talk turned from one thing to another, but at last the discussion centered on the merits of the dog.

"Yes, sir," said the owner, "that dog can smell a bird a mile away."

"Indeed!" said his friend, incredulously.

He glanced at the pointer and was surprised to see the dog sniffing nervously.

"That dog acts as if a bird was under his nose, and there isn't a bird anywhere around here," he said.

The owner looked and was perplexed.

Upon seeing some other men in conversation, he approached one of them and inquired: "Pardon me, sir, but have you a bird in your pocket?"

"No," answered the man.

The owner of the dog was indeed puzzled, but, after a few moments of deep thought he approached the man again and asked: "Excuse me, but what is your name, sir?"

"Partridge."

Told Too Much

It was the maid's first day in her new situation, and when the first caller came to see her mistress, as instructed, she informed the visitor that her mistress was not at home. "When will she be back?" inquired the lady.

"I don't know, ma'am" answered the girl; "she's not gone out yet!"—London Weekly Telegraph.

Intrinsic Value

One day a struggling artist received fifty dollars. He ran to show it to his wife, yelling "Hurrah!"

"What's the matter, Jack? Did you win a prize at the exhibition?"

"No, no," replied the novice, joyfully. The picture was lost on the train and the railroad company sent me the value!"—Everybody's Magazine.

What's the Use

"Brother Johnson," said the parson, "can't you all donate some small contribution to be fund for fencing in the cultud cemetery?"

"I dunno as I kin, parson," replied Brother Johnson. "I don't see no use in a fence round no cemetery. You see, them what's in there can't get out, and them what's out sho' doan wanta git in."—Everybody's.

What Every Mother Knows

"Pa," said Clarence, "when is Mother's Day?"

"Every day, from sunup till midnight," growled ma, who had just finished the dishes and was sitting down to the family mending.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Mr. S. E. Bruce says you can put up a good brick yard now on the hill near the water works without a mix mill.

If 1924 can't furnish us better weather than he dished out the first day, we can tell him right now that he is going to be very unpopular.

Miss Agen Leary of Thorsby was here Saturday.

Vincent Gragg returned to New Orleans the first part of the week after spending the holidays with his father, Dr. Gragg, and many Clanton friends.

Mrs. Bama Cox returned Monday from a two week's visit to her daughter, Mrs. F. C. Taylor, of Meridian, Miss.

Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Taylor of Meridian, Miss., are moving to West Point, Ga., to make their future home.

Mr. Jno. W. Stanfield and son, Wilbur, of Greenville, formerly citizens of our town, were in the city a few hours last week.

Mr. J. H. Gulleddge of Verbena was in Clanton one day last week on business.

Dr. Joseph Johnson of Chattanooga, Tenn., Brother of Mrs. P. D. Wilson has been visiting her this week.

STILL PROGRESSING

Our neighbor town of Thorsby seems to be moving quietly along, in spite of the bad weather and holiday lull, with her building program.

In passing through there Sunday we noticed in the business district, a large and tasty cement block building in process of construction and several other marks of improvements in the residential section.

With the unity, the pluck and the push manifested by the citizens of Thorsby at all times, it can not fail to become a town of parts and influence before many years. We wish them every success and prosperity and they deserve it.

There had been a blowout, and the father of the family was perspiring and profanely changing tires.

"I don't see why you have to talk that way," said his wife reproachfully. "You act as if it were a total loss. You never see the town in things."

"Well, what good is there in this?" "Why, it tickled the baby so. He laughed right out loud when it went bang!"—American Legion Weekly.

FOR WORKING PEOPLE

The best of workers get out of sorts when the liver fails to act. They feel languid, half-sick, "blue" and discouraged and think they are getting lazy. Neglect of these symptoms might result in a sick spell, therefore the sensible course is to take a dose or two of Herbine. It is just the medicine needed to purify the system and restore the vim and ambition of health. Price 60c. Sold by Upchurch Drug Co.

Our Very Best Wishes

Another year has been buried now in the grave of the past. All in all, it was a real good old year and we have nothing but kindness in our heart for it.

Of course, we have all had our sorrows and disappointments, but we have also had our joys and successes. One thing we are especially thankful for, is the many friends who have so liberally favored us with their patronage. To every one of them we take this opportunity of expressing our thanks individually.

We wish for you all a happy and prosperous NEW YEAR. May success and good health abide with you every day. When you come to town call to see us and let us serve you in any way we can.

Good luck to you all.

LOCAL and PERSONAL

Rev. H. C. Williams of Cincinnati, Ohio, was a Clanton visitor last week.

Mr. R. L. Duffy and family of Mt. Creek were Clanton visitors Sunday.

Mr. E. D. W. Shirley, of Route 8, was a pleasant caller at our office last Monday.

Mr. J. B. Hardy of Maplesville was here last Saturday.

Miss Dewey Branch spent the Christmas holidays with friends in Birmingham.

Mr. W. F. Hudson, formerly of Mt. Creek but now of Birmingham, was in Clanton Monday.

Ho. Reynolds was at home during the holidays enjoying the time with his many friends.

The Jury Commission was in session several days last week working over the jury boxes for the new year.

Mr. C. L. Hayes and his son, C. C. Hayes, of Beat 2, were in Clanton Monday looking after business affairs.

Mr. D. L. Smith of Sylacauga was visiting his brother, Mr. J. P. Smith of Route 6 last week.

Mrs. Grady Heflin spent part of the holidays with friends and relatives at Randolph.

Dr. V. J. Gragg was confined to his bed for several days last week by an attack of flu. Glad to report that he is improving now.

Mrs. Carrie Williams, who moved to Woodwater some time ago, was back visiting relatives and friends Christmas.

Among the popular young men at home for the holidays from the University of Alabama we noted Joseph B. Jones.

Our worthy and highly esteemed son, Mr. J. L. Williams of Route 4, was a pleasant caller at our sanctum Saturday.

Mr. B. H. Nelson, of Verbena, was pleasant caller at our office Saturday. Much like Mr. Nelson are truly the salt of the earth.

We were pleased to shake the hand of Mr. E. Robinson, of Route 1 at our office last Saturday. Mr. Robinson is a democrat in "whom there is guile."

Senator S. M. Adams of Thorshy here last Saturday. Senator Adams rated as one of the strongest members of the present State Senate.

Louise Connaster of Thorshy was her guests for dinner Tuesday Christmas days Misses Sara Kemp and Messrs. Wallace Connaster.

Miss Marzelle A. Montgomery returned to the Woman's College at Clanton Saturday after spending several days with friends and relatives in Clanton.

Russell Lewis and his sister, Margaret of Wetumpka, spent a few days last week as the guests of his aunt and Mr. and Mrs. P. P. Lewis.

Mr. J. R. Mullins and two sons, Mr. and John Durwood, of the City, spent the holidays here with his wife and relatives.

Mrs. James Patton and H. G. Jones were here Monday looking after business matters. These two good men have been live wires in helping to promote the interests of their division.

Mac Parnell, of Washington, D. C., was a Clanton visitor Saturday. Parnell is a daughter of Mr. J. R. Patton of Thorshy. We are more than glad to know of her success in the garment work in Washington.

P. G. Carter, former pastor of Baptist church here, but now of Birmingham, was in town a few days last week. We learned that he came to have an operation performed at the hospital. He will be located as pastor of the church here, Ala., this year.

Mr. J. Deason of the Maplesville community, was a welcome caller at our office last Saturday.

Mr. E. L. Lenoir of Jemison made a pleasant call last Saturday. He is an efficient democratic executive in connection with Beat 14, and a good one.

A WONDERFUL ALABAMA INDUSTRY

The Alabama Power Company is enlarging its Gorgas steam plant by adding an additional unit to this wonderful plant, increasing its power by one fourth.

They are also installing the fourth and final unit at the new Mitchell Dam.

They are erecting the greatest power dam in the south at Cherokee Bluff, on the Tallapoosa river.

They also have the necessary permits and are going to install two more dams on the Tallapoosa, besides having rebuilt and enlarged the old power dam at Tallassee.

Just the other day they bought from the state, at a high price, a track of land lying along the banks of Coosa river, a few miles north of Wetumpka, where they intend to put in Lock 17 with an immense power dam.

This development has cost and will eventually cost hundreds of millions of dollars, all invested in Alabama and adding millions of dollars to our tax assets.

The wonder in all of this is the fact, that even with their rapid building program they can nothing like keep up with the demand for current.

How did we ever get along without this developed energy in the old days? We could not do without it now.

This is a most wonderful industry—the greatest, perhaps, in the world with its potential future already mapped out.

The whole country will eventually be electrified, for a power so potent, so safe, so easily handled and so powerful is destined to become the one power of the future.

SOME CLASS TO ALABAMA POLITICS

We are certainly getting up in the pictures in our state now.

We have no less than four candidates for president of the United States. They line up as follows:

DEMOCRATS:

Oscar W. Underwood, Birmingham.

L. Breckenridge, Musgrove, Jasper.

M. A. Dismore, Birmingham.

REPUBLICAN:

W. L. Chenault, Russellville.

Come on in boys, the water's fine—and the peanut politicians are hungry.

HOSPITAL NOTES

Dr. Gragg has been confined to his bed with a case of flu for several days. He is now recovering and will soon be out again.

Mr. B. C. Jones will soon be able to return home if he keeps on improving at the present rate.

Mrs. I. O. Retherford has been here for some time.

Mrs. H. S. Shaw is doing well and will soon be home again.

Mrs. L. F. Watts, Route 4, has returned home after being here several days.

Mr. George Mullins of Route 3 left one day recently for his home.

Mrs. W. M. Wyatt and baby of Fort Payne returned home one day last week.

CITY SCHOOL OPENS

Prof. Martin, principal of the city school, called "work time" bright and morning and the school opened last Monday. New Year dawned and the school was in full blast at that popular place of learning. Prof. Martin believes in getting all there is out of every educational opportunity.

The many friends of Mrs. Willie Mims, who lives on Route 1, will be glad to learn that she is home now from the hospital at Birmingham, where she underwent a serious operation four weeks ago. She seems to be doing fine and is on the road to a final recovery.

Messrs. Cecil and J. T. Tyus left for their home in Tuskegee last Thursday after spending the holidays with their parents.

Mr. Ben W. Tyus returned to Birmingham Thursday after spending the holidays with his parents.

Mr. J. B. White of Route 6 called at our office Tuesday morning, but he did not bring the cold wave for he paid up his subscription.

CARD OF THANKS

We sincerely thank the good people of Jemison and Clanton for their kindness and sympathy in the sickness and death of our dear wife and mother.

MR. C. F. WILBANKS AND FAMILY.

MT. CREEK NOTES

Mountain-Creek, Ala., Dec. 31, 1923. Editor of the News:

Standing at the open gate to 1924 I wish to send New Year's greetings to the editor and his family, to the Clanton County News, to all loyal democrats and to the members of the Ku Klux Klan. If there be any other who are as worthy as these four, then my best wishes are for them also.

I ask you to correct the statement in your last issue that I am "79 years young." Born on the 11th of Sept. 1846 would count up 77 years with some months added. You may see the reason for this when I inform you that a man in the "Home" who is just my age will be married here on Jan. 4th. See!

I wish that all of the folks could have witnessed the Christmas festivities here on Monday, the 24th. Mrs. Dr. Fowler, the wife of the commandant Dr. J. T. Fowler, had a tree up in the mess hall decorated beautifully and loaded down with presents for the inmates of the Home. These were provided by the Daughters of the Confederacy. I suppose that it will be in order to insert here and now the thanks and best wishes of all to the "Daughters" and to pay tribute to the Commandant and his wife; to the adjutant, Mr. A. J. Dennis and to Miss Mattie Fulcher, the trained nurse at the hospital.

Not one of the Homes provided for the comfort and well being of the men of the 60's can show a better management than that which prevails here.

But, to get back to our nutton. Christmas day dawned with old Sol in all his glory, and the brightness of the day was but a prelude to such joy and gladness as only a most sumptuous dinner could give. I daresay that no table in any home in the state held such an abundance of good things. It did not hold them very long. The "Ode to Our Dinner" written by Owen Meredith, had a full and unlimited endorsement by every one. One man claimed that he "had eaten so much turkey that he felt as if he would have to go out to the top of an adjacent hill and gobble."

Who will be our next president? He will be a Democrat, and if you will not tell, I may whisper his name to you. When it comes to politics you will have to admit that I am some prophet. In 1918 I told you that T. E. Kilby would be our next governor. He was elected and proved to be one of the best the state has ever had.

So when I name the next president you will see the entry into the White House of a man who will measure up to the standard of Woodrow Wilson. And so mote it be.

G. A. HORNBADY.

MOVED TO FLORIDA

The family of Mr. L. A. Calloway left last Friday to make their new home in Havana, Fla.

Mr. Calloway who is with the Robinson Lumber Co., of Clanton, has recently bought, for that company, some 50,000,000 feet of timber down there and has gone down as resident manager of their immense saw milling interests.

Clanton regrets to lose this splendid family and the Baptist church and Sunday School will especially miss Mr. Calloway.

We commend them to the good people down there and assure them that they are fortunate indeed in getting a citizen like L. A. Calloway.

FROM PERSONAL EXPERIENCE

Mrs. Bradford Recommends Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Phoebe, Virginia.—"Having this opportunity I just cannot refrain from saying a word of praise for the Lydia E. Pinkham medicine. I have used them as occasion required for twenty years, and my troubles have also used them, and always with the most gratifying results. During the Change of Life I had the usual distressing symptoms—hot flashes, insomnia, etc.—and I am pleased to testify to the wonderful results I obtained from the Vegetable Compound. I heartily recommend it to any woman and I will be pleased to answer any inquiries that might be sent to me through the publication of my testimonial."—Mrs. H. L. Outside of his fellow man, the mosquito is the most dangerous living creature to man, as more people die each year as a result of its bite than by the ravages of any other animal. The cobra snake of India ranks second in the number of people killed, but this is largely due to the superstitious character of the natives of India, who are afraid to kill the insect.

The Bottle Emperor Returns.

Across the mile-wide lagoon in the still hot dusk the last buccaners of Lafitte listened to the battle in the forest river—the rattle of musketry, and then the boom of the Seraphine's cannonades. And strange as it fell out, the castaways wished for the Spaniards to win. They had no hope of escape for themselves, but their hatred of Crackley's mutineers was stronger than their hereditary feud with the sea power of the Spanish king.

So the fugitives lay and listened to the distant battle for the rescue ship of Bonaparte. At times, behind the fringe of forest swamp, arose the crash of musket fire, and then the bark of the Seraphine's guns. And presently this last ceased; the ragged volleys of small arms burst irregularly, died out, renewed; became single shots blotted out by the tropic silence. The Catalan swung to his feet and tied his bloody head scarf tighter.

"I say it is the end. Murillo's men are swarming over." It seemed that a faint burst of cheering came from under the landward stars. New Corps beckoned to his fellows. "The captain will want the word back at the lady's shelter tent. He will send her and the young gentleman to intercept the Spaniards' boats when they come out the pass to regain the frigate. Now, watch for the fire behind the trees—see the red ghost of a good ship!"

But presently the captain, himself, and Beluche, the admiral, came through the deep sand and great hummocks to this outlying point of the reef.

"You make out that the affair is done?" inquired the former. "No, there is a shot."

They waited silently. The low murmur of the gentle surf on the outer fringe of sand was all the sound upon the utter calm of the night.

"It is over," muttered Bohon. "I would have given my right hand to have seen Crackley cuttased and flung to the sharks. And Jarvis, the fool—glibbing them to the last! The waster! had his sea fight, eh?"

The leader's dark face winced. He raised his hand as if to still this jesting about the jester of the rue Royale, the Emperor of the Bottle, who, at last, did sit in the chair they had ordained for an emperor himself.

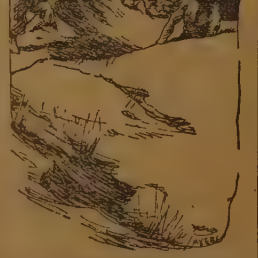

And now, from the sea, there came a single signal gun. The frigate was invisible, standing off the shoals, but they knew a thousand enemies were there.

"Come, sir," said the chief in quiet authority, "the longboat around the point for the English woman. They shall row to meet the Spaniards in the pass—she shall plead that she and Monsieur de Almonaster were the prisoners of the mutineers."

When he had gone from the men who hastened at his bidding, he came upon Mademoiselle Lestron on the highest point of the sand before her shelter-canvas. She was alone, and she saw his quick glance about.

"Monsieur de Almonaster has gone to the beach—I sent him away," she said quietly.

"Away? Do you see that light, Mademoiselle, against the forest? It means the Spanish boat crews are returning. They have taken the Seraphine in the river's mouth. You can guess what has happened—there is no man living who was upon her."

"The ragged man," she answered intently. "The man who sat in the emperor's cabin and kissed the bracelet I left there?"

"The bracelet?" He was surprised; he had not known of this.

"It belonged, once, to Marie Antoinette," she went on passively. "The queen gave it to a member of my family for a service before they put her to the guillotine."

"Why, then, did you not speak when we left the ship? He—he—the man would have given it to you."

"I did not like to," she murmured. "He had his lips to it." Then she was silent, looking at the empty sea, the savage land.

"I inquired of Monsieur de Almonaster . . . he laughed painfully, and would not answer. I could not see the man's face that night. Nor when he jesting on the quarter-deck. But always it has seemed that some laughing spirit was near me, on the Seraphine—a ghost far off from me, yet ever holding me in his fancy. Is it not strange? I cannot shake this feeling off."

"It is strange," he answered. "But come—you are going now."

"Monsieur Sazarac!" she cried sharply. "Why do you not speak?"

"Of what?" he said simply, in wonder.

"Ah, I do not know!" The stars showed the paleness of her face, her luminous eyes wide up to him. The web of silence that had been woven about her was a mesh that neither tears nor challenge had yet pierced.

"I, too, am a nameless ghost," he smiled, "the ghost of a man who might have been! Come, now! Monsieur Sazarac bids you respectfully—but firmly to go. You will obey—Monsieur Sazarac is accustomed to being obeyed. . . . The hands of Monsieur Sazarac have been stained with the blood of those who chose not to obey. Is that enough about Monsieur Sazarac, Mademoiselle?"

He turned away to her little tent. She heard him giving instructions to the silent black steward who had been charged to her service.

The tiny light against the unseen forest shore was growing plainer. She heard a brushing in the coarse grass. Raoul de Almonaster drew out of the straight and stopped by her with a comment. Apparently he did not notice Monsieur Sazarac at her tent seeing to her few belongings.

"He came to you, did he not?" murmured Raoul. "It is the last moment. I gave him this to speak to you, Louise."

"Why, what should he speak?" she whispered. "But then—he would not!"

The younger man misinterpreted. "He loves you, he would not speak. Eh, well! It is my honor to keep from him—and from you. I was his first confidant—from the very first. When he was about to challenge Carr, because of you, I offered to second him at the Oaks. From the first, he spoke of you—and he had my pledge of honor. Ah, but I did not know then who the lady was—the pawn of his game at Maspero's—the lady he must retrieve from the General Monsieur Sazarac—at the parting of the paths, one to peace, even, perhaps, to honor for a wounded name—those this to serve you, though he knew it meant the abyss opened for him! Is not that a love, Mademoiselle, that would hold the friend of Sazarac to his honor?"

"Tell me," she whispered swiftly, "the ragged fellow in the emperor's cabin—his jests, his love—"

"A dead man, telling neither love nor jests—"

"Then the young man turned hotly on her. 'See, here! The boat is making ready! Well, if Sazarac has your heart, Louise, I will not go!'"

"Oh, no!—no!—no!" she breathed. "Monsieur—"

The figure of Monsieur Sazarac loomed against the stars before them.

"Pardon," he said smoothly. "It is the time for the longboat."

"It is damnable!" De Almonaster sprang to grasp his sleeve: "Sir, a woman's part for me! I will not go!"

"I will not go!"

Monsieur Sazarac looked from him to Mademoiselle Lestron intently. It was as open to them as a blown rose to the sunshine—De Almonaster would not creep away, saved by a woman's skirts among the Spaniards, and ever after see in her eyes that she was holding in memory another man who died for her.

Monsieur Sazarac smiled, rubbed his slender, bronzed hands. "Come—my children!"

"There is the boat," muttered De Almonaster suddenly. "The blacks at the oars, and Clark at the tiller. The tide is coming out—it is an easy pull. Here is my handkerchief for the true flag on a boat-pole." He bowed quietly: "Mademoiselle Lestron is going to the Spanish captain's care."

"Sir?" said Sazarac, coolly. "You—to that boat?"

A stealthy stir of steel and leather came in the silence. They saw the point of De Almonaster's rapier flash dimly and then held to the sand.

"Monsieur Sazarac, I had the idea long ago that, at some hour, you and I should fight. It was as inevitable as anything could be. It was written by these stars at the birth of each of us . . . as it was written that we each should love a woman whom it has been given us in our lives, to protect. Mademoiselle Lestron to the boat—then, draw, with me, Monsieur!"

The older man did not stir. Twice, then, in so short a time, he must decline a challenge because of her! It was very odd—he laughed slowly.

Mademoiselle had seemed dumb for the moment. Then she sprang, with a hand raised before De Almonaster's blazing eyes and impetuous arm.

"Well, then," went on Monsieur Sazarac quietly, "first, the lady for whom we must fight—to the longboat, Monsieur de Almonaster."

Her cry of terror echoed.

There came then, a slow uncertain trudging through the reef grass. The figure of a man quite close. It was stooped, and presently it staggered or stumbled, rather ridiculously, it appeared, over an empty scabbard which got between its knees.

"Jarvis!" cried De Almonaster, and sprang to him.

"Eh—Raoul!" The voice came weakly but gathered strength as if from some choked but over-mastering purpose: "Well, I came to find you! After that he staggered back and would have fallen if De Almonaster had not eased him to the sand. Then he rubbed a bloody hand across a bloody face and drawled sleepily: "Swords out—what's the matter? I say!—what the devil? He twisted about painfully. 'I'm run through twice. I think—'"

The captain had come swiftly to him. "Jarvis!" He knelt and sternly sought the other's eyes. "Monsieur de Almonaster, will you get the brandy from the tent? What is this, Jarvis? What of the Seraphine? How came you here?"

"She is coming out on the tide," said Jarvis thickly. "The dons think to save her as a prize. Four boats are towing. Name o' G—d! Jean!—I had my fight!"

"Tell me this," retorted the other coldly. He looked about. The figure of the woman was dim by the tent

"Swords Out—What's the Matter? I Say!—What the Devil?"

She was assisting De Almonaster at the chest of bandages and scanty supplies given them by the mutineers. "Jarvis! You deserted me—but, tell me of the Seraphine!"

"I, alone, escaped. Crackley's men fought like wild savages when the end came. The last of us took overboard to the jungle when the Spaniards swarmed aboard. They beheaded Black Mike on a gun-block, and hanged Budge to the shrouds with a fire under him. They chopped old Mariano, arm by arm and leg by leg—and Crackley shot himself to keep away from them. I was the last who fell in the river reeds. They did not find me, Jean, and when I got sense after these wounds, I crawled to the water's edge. I found a dinghy with three dead Spaniards in it, and heaved them out. Then I floated with the tide. It bore me to the reef—I knew you would be here somewhere. Curse me, it was a fight! There must have been a hundred of them and we did for half!"

De Almonaster forced the brandy to his lips. "Thank you, Monsieur," murmured the painter of the rue Royale. "This thrust through my shoulder—I would not have had it, but, after breaking a don's head, I saw a bottle roll across the deck. I must after it like a cat at the cheese, and some other king o' Spain's man put a saber to me. Eh, I dropped the cognac with cork undrawn—got around and fought again. What luck one has!"

He sighed wearily. His eyes closed. The English woman came nearer, and then at a sign from Monsieur Sazarac, she went apart from them. It would not do for the babbler to talk too much in her hearing. And so, once more, the ragged lover with the new waistcoat did not see the lady of the camellia, nor she him; for when his eyes opened there were but the stars above, and the two men's faces watching close to his.

"Come, gentlemen!" He struggled to a sitting posture between them: "I came here with an idea! A most excellent idea!"

"Jarvis," retorted the captain quietly, "you are dying."

"Eh, bien! Are you a physician, too, Monsieur Sazarac, as well as a bully swordsman, a fellow of pearl-laid pistols; a delicate hand at the cards—and wondrous speeches on a lady's staircase?"

He sat up straighter and shook himself. "Dying? Now, see!"

He kicked out both mud-swathed legs, clapped his hands, put a thumb to his nose and wiggled his fingers at the stars. "Let me up," he drawled absently. "I am to tell you what to do. Where the devil is the boat, and our blusterers? Name o' G—d!—buccaners snoozing in the grass, and John Jarvis in a bloody set-to!"

And despite their protests he did get to his feet unsteadily. About all they could see were his two eyes sticking out of a muck of wet tangled hair. But these seemed to smile comfortingly.

"Jarvis, and his deck o' blood," he teased. "Now, come. The Seraphine is towing out the pass. There is hardly a man on her except the wounded and the officers, for they have every arm at the sweeps in the small boats. I say—we shall retake her, gentlemen!"

pects of Passage of Mellon Tax Bill With Democratic Help.

BY EDWARD W. PICKARD

GEORGE COPELAND of New York, Democrat, has practically pledged support to the tax reduction plan Secretary Mellon in a letter to a number of his constituents. He believes it possible to carry out a reasonable bonus measure, also, he also "heartily favors" the distribution leaders think they can carry out on other Democratic senators favor the tax bill. These are the names of Tennessee, Randall and of Louisiana, Glass of Virginia, Bruce of Maryland, Walsh of Connecticut, Edwards of New Jersey, Wood of Alabama and Kendrick of Maine. Owen of Oklahoma and of Delaware also may join this.

It has been expected that advocates will be cast by Norris of Iowa, LaFollette of Wisconsin, Hart of Iowa, Frazier and Ladd of Dakota, all Republicans, and and Johnson of Minnesota, and also of the nine Democrats. The bill, those "practicals" of enough to defeat it. More some of them may fall into the majority leaders consent to a whereby the maximum surtax are cut to 35 or 40 per cent, in of 25 per cent, as proposed by Mr. Mellon. Already some of the bloc in the house, notably Representative Dickinson of Iowa, indicated that they would accept of this lesser reduction, and it by the house, ways and means they will so frame the bill. In the house will there be effective to the proposed reductions of tax rates. Mr. Mellon's recalculation for a 25 per cent reduction of tax on earned incomes is certain to be embodied in the

ANY OF STATE HUGHES the staff of the Russian Red sympathizers in this country, the pot. Mr. Hughes had re-an article in the Freemasonry, to uphold his assertions in Russian propaganda in the states. The editor of the sheet, 147, challenged Mr. Hughes to the date on which the article had. The secretary not only ate—November 7, 1922—but made public a translation of the article, which proves to any fair-minded person the intimate connection between the soviet government and the Communist Internationale. Indeed, Steckloff himself repeatedly asserts this "close organic and spiritual bond."

The foreign relations committee of the senate is to investigate the Russian recognition question, and the Departments of State and Justice are prepared to demonstrate to it that the efforts of the Russian Communists to bring about a revolution in this country have never abated, and that obviously it is impossible that our government should recognize a government that is constantly aiming, however futilely, to overthrow it.

YOUNG Lieut. Osborne Wood, son of Gen. Leonard Wood, has become "front-page news" through his sudden rise to riches by speculation in the New York stock exchange. Because the lieutenant is a regular army officer, stationed in the Philippines, some persons have suspected that he made his money improperly by speculating in stocks connected with the islands. Representative Fear of Wisconsin is urging a resolution for a congressional inquiry into General Wood's conduct of Philippine affairs and will likely seek to have it embrace the lieutenant's actions. However, the War department already has looked into the case of the young officer, and while Secretary Weeks directed that he should cease his stock operations, he also found there was no necessity for an inquiry. Lieutenant Wood dealt in American securities, following the tabulated advice of a New York agency, and is believed to have made at least $700,000. He is coming back to the United States soon to resign from the army and enter training for the diplomatic service. The whole story, as now known, contains no reflection on the integrity of the young officer.

MEXICO'S revolution is still going strong, so far as can be ascertained from a comparison of the reports from both sides. The main threat of the rebels against Mexico City from the south, and the federal forces seem to be concentrating to meet it. Oregon has a big advantage in machine and war materials and his plants are turning out great quantities of ammunition; but so far as manpower goes, the two sides may be more equal. The government is said to be short of funds, but it is now collecting the January taxes, and it received an advance of $5,000,000 from the Doherty oil interests. From the capital comes a story that President Gomez of Venezuela has offered to send men and a million dollars to the rebel leaders.

The revolutionists are in control of Yucatan, Chiapas, Tabasco, Campeche, Oaxaca and Vera Cruz, and parts of Colima, Jalisco, Guerrero, Morelos and Nayarit. They assert that Obregon's escape toward Vera Cruz is closed and that he is trying to break through the Guadalupe line held by Estrada. The president announces that federal troops under Cardenas have got in the rear of Estrada's forces between Guadalupe and Guzman, cutting his communications with the port of Manzanillo.

TRAGIC mystery shrouds the fate of the huge French dirigible Dixmude with her crew of fifty, which for days was drifting about the Gulf of Gabes and the deserts of northern Africa, out of fuel and unable to make a landing without disaster. At this writing the French officials admit that the airship almost certainly is lost, but they are still hopeful for the safety of the men. Probably the Dixmude was blown down in southern Algeria, and it is believed some of the crew at least escaped with parachutes.

GREAT BRITAIN has made a representation to Greece concerning the expulsion of King George, and while its nature has not been made public, it is believed to be a remonstrance that may amount to a threat. Meanwhile the Greek revolutionists and liberals are trying to decide on a form of government, and have finally persuaded Venizelos to return from Paris and give them the benefit of his wisdom. He has declared, however, that he will not accept the leadership of the new government. The enemies of this skillful statesman profess to fear that he will try to restore the monarchy. This may be true, since he desires to retain the friendship of Great Britain.

One of the first acts of Admiral Coudourolis after assuming the regency was to turn over to the American Near East relief a model hospital which the government is erecting on one of the finest sites in Athens. A portion of the hospital was built with funds collected by Admiral Coudourolis from Greeks in America.

CHARLES G. DAWES and Owen D. Young who will represent America on the committee of experts named to investigate Germany's fiscal condition for the reparations commission, conferred with President Coolidge last week, and on Saturday they and their aides sailed from New York. The second committee, which will examine German funds in foreign lands, will meet a week later. The American member is Henry M. Robinson, bank president of Los Angeles.

Premier Poincare is growing more and more lenient toward the Germans and is expected soon to agree to hand over to them the operation of the Ruhr and Rhine-Ruhr railways, merely maintaining formal control of the transportation system. He also is likely to consent to an amelioration of the customs control barrier between occupied and unoccupied Germany.

SCARCELY in accord with the statements of those who assert that France is running herself in the budget for the next year, submitted to the senate by its finance commission. It shows a surplus of $63,000,000 francs, the receipts being given as 23,950,000 francs and the expenditures as 23,320,000 francs. The favorable balance is obtained by a steady increase in tax collections, attributed partly to the activity of business through low exchange, which is tending to increase exports.

M. Berenger, reporter for the finance commission, directed the government's attention to the rising living costs and the necessity of doing something to stabilize the franc, the depreciation of which is regarded as out of tune with France's favorable commercial and economic balance sheets.

AN ATTEMPT to assassinate Prince Regent Hirohito of Japan was made on Thursday by a youth dressed as a laborer. He fired one bullet from a cane gun which just missed the prince's head. Hirohito proceeded calmly to the upper house of the diet, read a speech to the members and retired. The assassin, who was arrested, is believed to be insane, but the authorities are conducting a rigid investigation and are guarding all Socialist centers. Home Minister Goto resigned, assuming all responsibility for the attempt on the life of the regent.

POPE PIUS in secret consistory appointed two Italian cardinals and two American bishops. The latter are Mgr. F. J. L. Beckman of Cincinnati as bishop of Lincoln, Neb., and Rev. Alphonse J. Smith of Indianapolis as bishop of Nashville, Tenn.

FORMER Secretary of the Interior Fall has filed with the public lands committee of the senate a detailed statement of his real estate and cattle investments. It declares that a $100,000 loan advanced to Mr. Fall by E. B. McLean, the Washington publisher, enabled him to purchase additional ranch holdings in recent years in New Mexico.

Mr. Fall said he never had approached Mr. Sinclair or Edward L. Doherty for a loan, advance or other assistance. Referring to a shipment of blooded cattle to his place by Mr. Sinclair, Mr. Fall said he had insisted that the live stock be paid for at full market value.

Harry F. Sinclair was a witness before the committee, which is investigating the leasing of Teapot Dome and other naval oil reserves, but he refused to testify concerning "private business transactions." A ballot in the committee resulted four to three in favor of "compelling" the witness to reply to all questions, but when adjournment was taken, "subject to the call of the chair," the members had not discussed any program designed to carry out this decision. Mr. Sinclair was excused until the next meeting, when he promised to supply data relating to corporate and co-partnership groups which have grown out of his possession of the lease.

Winter Find You Tired and Achy?

Do You Suffer Constant Backache—Feel Old and Worn Out? Then Follow the Advice of These Good Folks!

DO YOU get up these winter mornings feeling tired, weak—achy all over? Are you so lame, stiff and miserable it seems you can never get back in trim? Does your back ache with a dull, constant throb? Sharp, rheumatic pains torture you at every step?

Then you should be giving some attention to your kidneys!

Winter, you know, is danger time for the kidneys. That's because exposure to colds and chills wears down body resistance and throws an unusually heavy strain on the hard-working kidneys. The kidneys are apt to fall behind in keeping the blood-stream pure, and poisons accumulate that well kidneys would have filtered off.

Racking backaches come with stabbing pains; muscles and joints ache constantly; there are headaches, too, with dizziness and distressing kidney irregularities. Nerves are "jumpy"; one feels old—all worn out.

Give your weakened kidneys the help they need. Use Doan's Pills—a stimulant diuretic to the kidneys. Doan's have helped thousands. They are recommended by grateful users everywhere. Ask your neighbor!

"Use Doan's," Say These Good Folks:

S. P. BEXLEY, retired farmer, 602 Fifth Ave., E. Cullman, Ala., says: "I caught a heavy cold and it settled in my kidneys. My kidneys became so weak I was greatly annoyed by the unnatural passages of the secretions. My back pained me and the lameness across the small of it made it hard for me to work. When I stopped, stitches of pain seized me through my back. I used a box of Doan's Pills and they rid me of kidney weakness and lameness in my back and I felt better than ever."

MRS. J. B. WOOD, West End, Guntersville, Ala., says: "I took cold and it settled in my kidneys. The worst trouble was the too free action of my kidneys. I was subject to spells of backache and my back got lame and weak. I couldn't do very much hard work about the house for I tired quickly and was obliged to sit down many times during the day to rest. Dizzy spells were frequent and quick floated before my eyes, blurring my sight. One box of Doan's Pills cured me."

END THAT COUGH NOW OR IT MAY END YOU

You Can't Afford to Ignore Such Symptoms While Cheney's Is Ready to Help You

Of course a cough is not a disease but merely a symptom.

"It may simply annoy you and those around you, but if nothing is done to stop it there is no telling what complications it may lead to."

The time to eradicate that cough is at the first warning and the way is by taking Cheney's Expectorant, which will correct the cause. Cheney's Expectorant searches out the basic trouble, whatever it may be, drives out the noxious germs, soothes the inflamed surfaces and tissues and clears out the air passages so that breathing is made easier.

Cheney's Expectorant has been before the public for sixty years and grows in popularity year by year. A bottle of this remarkable remedy is an insurance against common every day colds, coughs, nasal troubles, whooping cough, the grip, influenza, bronchitis, pneumonia, catarrh, asthma, croup, quinsy and other throat and lung affections.

Down in Southern Missouri Mose White, a colored farm hand, appeared at a neighbor's back door one morning and asked for the loan of a mule to do his employer's plowing.

"Well, suh," replied Mose, "dat mule sit in the shade all day, jes' won't work."

"What's the matter with him? Is he sick?"

"No, suh," was the answer, "dat mule ain't sick. He jes' think he's a gentle man farmer."—Harper's Magazine.

LEGAL NOTICES

THE STATE OF ALABAMA, Chilton County.

Mary J. Thomas, et als, Complainants vs. George Thomas, et als, Defendants. Circuit Court in Equity.

In this cause it is made to appear to the Register by the affidavit of Victor J. Heard that the cross-respondents, Lulla Thomas, Addie Clackley and Mrs. R. G. Martin are non-residents and that Lulla Thomas and Addie Clackley's addresses are Atlanta, Georgia, that Mrs. R. G. Martin's residence and Post Office address is Temple, Texas, R. F. D. No. 1 and that their residences and addresses are otherwise unknown and further information in regard to same cannot be ascertained after reasonable effort: That Becky Dennis, who was last heard of in Winston County, Alabama about three years ago, and that her place of residence and Post Office address is unknown or if she be dead the names, residences and Post Office addresses of her heirs are unknown and that her address or her heirs addresses cannot be ascertained after reasonable effort: That Margaret Dennis who was last heard of in Marion County over forty years ago, place of residence and Post Office address is unknown, and if she be dead the Post Office address, or residences or names of the heirs of the said Margaret Dennis are unknown and that neither her address or the names and addresses of her heirs can be ascertained after reasonable effort: That the heirs of Jim Thomas, deceased, son of J. L. Thomas, deceased, are unknown, that their names, residences and Post Office addresses are unknown and that neither their names or addresses or residences can be ascertained after reasonable effort: And further that in the belief of said affidavit all of said cross respondents are over the age of 21 years:

It is, therefore, ordered by the Register that publication be made in the Chilton County News, a newspaper published in the County of Chilton, once a week for four consecutive weeks, requiring that the said Lulla Thomas, Addie Clackley, Mrs. R. G. Martin, Becky Dennis or her heirs, Margaret Dennis or her heirs, and the heir of Jim Thomas who was a son of J. L. Thomas, deceased, to plead answer, or demur to the bill of complaint in this cause by the 14th day of January, 1924, or, in thirty days thereafter, a decree pro confesso may be taken against them.

Done at office in Clanton, Alabama, this 14th day of December, 1923.

For Three Score Years And Ten The L & N Has Served You

For seventy years, the L. & N. Railroad has served the people of the South.

Beginning in a humble way, this Railroad has grown into one of the great transportation systems of America, operating a network of 5,000 miles of track running from the Ohio to the Gulf, entering and serving thirteen states, a dozen or more large cities, and the vast urban and rural population between, and giving constant employment to more than 50,000 men and women.

It has materially assisted in the building of the splendid agricultural and industrial territory developed in the heart of the Southland.

The L. & N. has never failed to pay every dollar due its workers, its creditors, its bondholders, and during a majority of these years has paid dividends to its stockholders.

This Railroad owns and pays taxes on property valued at more than three hundred and seventy million dollars—and is constantly adding to this investment.

The L. & N. enters its seventy-first year, bigger and stronger and better able to serve.

In order that you may know more of the accomplishments of this Railroad, as well as the problems which confront its management, these illustrations, prepared especially for you, are published in this newspaper.

Snug Comfort for Winter Drive

Those whose business needs require a car of the roadster type will find this Buick four-cylinder roadster with its winter enclosure ideally suited for cold weather driving. New Year Greeting

The good old year of 1923 has become now a memory of the past. With all of its joys and sorrows it is buried and, as the days go by, it will become merely a misty dream.

We have all had to face some trials and sorrows, but in the main, it was a kind and gracious year to us all. In bidding it good bye, I wish to express my sincere thanks to the many friends and customers who have loyally stood by me with their friendship and patronage and have enabled me to wind up the old year with a feeling of satisfaction with my success and with a steadfast hope for the future.

I wish for you one and all, the successful culmination of your brightest hopes for the New Year. May good health, happiness and prosperity attend you through the days to come. May 1924 have for all of us happy surprises and untold blessings.

I am deeply grateful to every one who has favored me with their patronage during the year just gone and most respectfully ask that you will continue to give me the opportunity to deserve your confidence and trade.

DIFFERENT KIND OF POUNDING

C. C. Wilkerson and wife received a real pounding the other day. They don't believe that either of them was seriously injured or even that their feelings were become hurt. M. A. Gore drove up to their home and began to discharge a wonderful cargo of substantial household needs and necessities. The surprised Mr. Wilkerson and his wife discovered that they were undergoing a "pounding" in a different kind of way. They were not angry, but they were grateful for this demonstration and the testimony was given to them as a real housewife's and precious possession of friends.

He was kind enough to have the house built for them when he was a young man. He was kind enough to have the house built for them when he was a young man.

He made a bright spot in the life of human events and is to become the theme of a real and tragedy of every day life. He was kind enough to have the house built for them when he was a young man. He was kind enough to have the house built for them when he was a young man. He was kind enough to have the house built for them when he was a young man.

WHAT IS THE DUTY OF A NEWSPAPER?

IT SHOULD UPHOLD GOOD MORALS AND DECENTY.

Should Try to Build Up and Not Destroy; Should be the Champion of Law and the Ardent Supporter of Religion and Education.

One of the most essential qualifications that is necessary in the editing of a newspaper is a studied and cultivated ability to discriminate between live, interesting and legitimate news items and the blaring forth with apparent relish and gusto of any and all of the filthy and lecherous items of blackmail and slander, that can be dug up and leached out of the putrid slum that is exuded by, at many times, the excited imagination wrought up by the distorted tales given out by rumor and that always grow and wax more deadly as they pass from tongue to tongue. We do not feel like it is the proper attitude for any decent and self-respecting newspaper to grab up all of the morsels of slander that flash in the atmosphere, nor even the unfortunate lapses that may really occur, where whole families of innocent people will be humiliated by the publicity, and to spread them before its readers as sweet morsels of "news."

If that is the sphere in which a newspaper is expected to move, then we have widely missed our calling, for nothing is more disgusting to our sense of common decency than to see the embarrassing stories that affect only a very few individuals, paraded before the public with an apparent intent to injure entire communities. This is carrying the license of a newspaper into fields where its usefulness would seem to cease and where, insofar as its influence could extend, it would become a most decided menace to its community, and instead of being an asset it would become a disastrous liability.

The intention of a newspaper should always be constructive. There is no place in a respectable newspaper where personal spite should ever find lodgement and no newspaper worthy the name, ever attempts to take advantage of any citizen, or set of citizens, publicly or otherwise and assume that they have no rights social, or political before the law. If there is anything in the world that should animate the editor of a newspaper more than anything else, it should be a spirit of tolerance and fairness and a desire to inflict as little suffering as possible by its utterances.

A real newspaper never arrogates to itself the role of judge and jury nor proceeds to try and condemn and sentence. It never distorts the facts nor allows its imagination to frame up a case. It prints the truth and right there it stops until time, or the due process of law has written a verdict. It will not be made a tool of by anyone but will contend for right and justice even for its enemies.

It should endeavor, at all times, to aid in building up its town, county and country. Work for its industrial benefit and for its moral uplift and never parade before the public the personal peccadilloes that may temporarily disturb the social welfare but which should be settled quietly by the interested parties and not played up before the outside public as typical of the conditions that prevail.

RURAL SCHOOLS TO CLOSE IN FEBRUARY

It is certainly to be regretted that the Rural Schools will have to close out this year on Friday, February 8, but such is the case.

No blame attaches to anyone for this state of affairs, as we understand it, but it is just a case of no money to go on.

It is to be hoped that the future will provide for our schools better and we are satisfied that it will.

It is the desire of all good citizens to see a nine months opportunity afforded every child in the land for acquiring an education.

The school tax outlook for our county in the future is much more promising than it has ever been in the past.

SENT TO ASYLUM

Dr. Junkerman, who has been located at Thorby as a dentist for several years, was carried to the insane asylum at Tuscaloosa this week.

No further particulars than that he was passed upon and ordered carried to Tuscaloosa by the proper authorities have reached us. The sheriff had him carried over there.

THE HIGH SCHOOL

The County Board of Education accepted the resignation of Prof. Ira Pegues during this week as principal of the County High School.

Prof. J. A. Peterson, who was assistant principal under Prof. Pegues, is in charge at present and there is no reason why the school should not progress and prosper under his management.

It is certainly to be hoped that the unfortunate situation that resulted in the resignation of Prof. Pegues, will not be allowed to militate to the detriment of the institution.

In another column will be found a statement from Prof. Pegues that gives all of the needed publicity to the regrettable occurrence that took place after he had resigned and a supposed agreement had been reached.

BACK HOME

Dr. Ezell and family who went over to South Carolina to eat Christmas dinner with "Pa and Ma" returned last Thursday.

They report a most pleasant time, with beautiful weather, until the day they left for home, when a fierce sleet and snow storm had fastened its grip on that section.

PUTTING ON ROOF

Workmen are at work this week putting the permanent roof on the new Methodist church.

This roof will be of metal and will last a hundred years or more. It is also going to make an artistic finish for that splendid building.

Other work will be resumed on the building soon as the weather will permit.

It's just like fooling with a buzz saw when you interfere with an officer in the discharge of his duty. You can get in bad before you know it.

MR. PEGUES MAKES A STATEMENT

He who steals my purse steals trash, but he that robs me of my good name takes that which can not help him but the taking does me irreparable injury.

For one to criticize my teaching troubles me none at all. To assail my character, the only capital God has given, is an entirely different question. I challenge the man or woman who says I have had any immoral relations with any high school girl or any other girl to produce prime face evidence, not "hear say" or "he says" or "she says." The person who claims to have seen me through the office window in a position unbecoming a gentleman, is absolutely mistaken. That person may be honest in what that person thought that person saw, but that person lied. Any person who fails to present direct testimony of my unbecoming acts, is hereby branded as a dastardly, cowardly, infamous and pusillanimous liar.

I went to Thorby last Tuesday night and asked Mr. Billingsley to bring the County Board together, to question every high school pupil and teacher, since they alone are in a position to speak intelligently on the question. All others were going on "hear say." After seeing Mr. Billingsley I caught the train for Montgomery to see the State Department of Education. The fact that I was not back Wednesday morning seemed to have set on fire those who are always trying to find a note in someone else's eye. Friends of mine sensing the tenseness of the situation and knowing that mad men have no reason, got word to me at once not to return until a few had had time to think. The person lies who says I left because I was scared. Those who advised me to see the State Department of Education know that I was afraid to go because of what people might think of my going.

I am not a coward, but I consider myself able to discuss any matter calmly and avoid a fight with any person of reason. I have too much sense to be drawn into a scuffle where two are present against me alone. If the other should shoot, both would swear the killing was due to accidental discharge of a gun in the scuffle. I repeat, I am not a coward, but have no desire to be killed in a way to give the murderer an alibi. I will get into the ring with the boxing gloves against any man my size who has slandered me. Let him now speak or forever hereafter hold his peace.

Volunteers have been poured out about some letters I wrote. Those letters may show my personal fondness for that pupil, but they certainly show no immoral act or immoral intent.

I gave one girl a present, yes, I gave two girls and one boy a present each. That is a helluva lot of evidence isn't it? Only a depraved mind or a personal enemy would think anything of that fact.

Before I came back to Clanton I wired Mr. Middleton to guarantee fair play. He did his best and had assurance of it, but I lacked a helluva lot of getting it.

Respectfully,
IRA PEGUES.

TREES DAMAGED

By a private letter from down on the Gulf coast in the midst of the Saturna orange belt, we learn that the freeze did quite a lot of damage to the trees.

As yet, they cannot tell to what extent they are killed, but the worst is feared.

The temperature was down to 19 above there Sunday morning with continued cold all day and Sunday night.

IN THE GRIP OF REAL WINTER

The Week-End Cold Wave Was the Most Severe in Years. Disasters to Autos and Water Connections Will Total Thousands.

Last Saturday things began to happen rapidly to the mercury in the little glass tubes and it seemed to get frightened and want to hide.

By Sunday morning the little elongated thread had almost disappeared from view and the volatile liquid seemed to shiver in the very bow of the glass.

The lowest official reading of the temperature Sunday morning, by Mr. J. B. Downs, the local weather reporter here, was just a shade more than 5 above, though there seems to have been considerable difference in the severity of the cold wave in the different parts of the town.

At the depot the lowest reading was 6 above, while Mr. C. Penn Jones, a prominent hardware dealer who lives at the Hotel Wilson and occupies an upstairs apartment in the northwest wing of that building, hung his thermometer outside a window facing the stiff northwest gale and it dropped down to 6 below zero. In several other parts of town we hear of zero readings also.

From our individual experience, as the icy shivers ran up and down our spine, we would have made a good witness for a thermometer that wanted to put out a reading of 100 below.

The damage to automobiles from the sudden cold wave has been terrible. Radiators have burst in great numbers and we hear of a good many cylinder blocks that froze and broke to such an extent as to be absolutely ruined. It is estimated that it will be several weeks before the garage men will be able to catch up with the repair work made necessary by the freeze.

The water works service in almost every home has suffered more or less damage. In some instances the havoc has been almost a total elimination of the pipes and connections, while in others the damage is only slight.

A number of homes that were equipped with a hot and cold water system connected with their cooking ranges have suffered serious loss.

Several of these hot water tanks blew up Sunday morning when the breakfast fires were lit, completely wrecking the ranges and, in one or two cases, doing considerable other damage.

Mrs. B. L. Jones, who happened to be near her range when the explosion occurred was considerably burned about the face and hands, though not seriously.

At the home of Mr. Guy Roberts, his little brother, Raymond, had just passed out of the kitchen when the blow-up came and had a very narrow escape, as the range was narrowly demolished and pieces of it blown in every direction, some parts knocking out a window and going some distance on the outside.

So far as we have learned, the tire department did not suffer particularly. The mains are all planted deep in the ground and the fire hydrants are so constructed that they are practically freeze proof.

Clanton was fortunate in passing through the polar weather without a single fire alarm.

BANKER RUDDER DIED SUNDAY

Mr. A. T. Rudder, banker of Marbury, whose illness we referred to recently, passed away at the hospital in Montgomery Sunday.

The state bank examiner has taken over the bank to liquidate it and it will be permanently closed. This is a sad blow to that community and one from which it will be hard to recover.

Mr. Rudder was unmarried but he was a great lover and benefactor of children. To him more than anyone else is due the success that has been with the Marbury High School. He was always doing something to further the interests of the school, as well as the entire community.

We sorrow with these good people there in their irreparable loss.

MR. R. J. JONES IN SANITORIUM

The many friends of Mr. R. J. Jones, of West End, will be sorry to learn that his health became so impaired that it has been necessary for him to go to a sanatorium for treatment.

He is now in Montgomery for treatment, and his friends here all hope that his recovery will be rapid and that he will soon be at home again as good as ever.

QUIT CHANGING

Monday evening we saw the "new moon" on its first appearance for 1924.

Our inference is that it had just been going through the ordeal of "changing."

Now we would like to remark right here, if it requires all of the cold wind and ice for it to perfect a "change" that was visited upon us this time, we would be glad if it could be satisfied to make out without "changing" until, at least, July 4 this time.

Being considered of the masculine gender we can not conceive of how he causes so much trouble by merely changing. If the "man in the moon" was a woman we would not venture a protest, but as it is, enough of a thing is enough.

FORD TRUCKS FOR SALE

I have 5 or 6 Ford Trucks, in good condition, with dump bodies that I will sell at a real bargain. Will sell them either with or without the dumps. For full particulars and terms, call on or write,

C. B. COX,
Clanton, Ala.

It would be impossible, at the present, to estimate the loss occasioned by the cold wave here, but it will run away up into the thousands.

Monday morning dawned with a rise of 15 points by the mercury and was followed by a beautiful day of bright sun shine and very little wind.

The freeze will probably do away with some of the insect pests that have become so numerous, but so far as the boll weevil is concerned, it will have little, if any effect. The boll weevil has been shown to be immune so far as cold is concerned. He is already hibernated now for his long winter sleep and the elemental changes will not effect him until the balmy suns of next spring wake him from his long rest from wickedness.

In Memoriam

It was with deepest regret that we learned of the untimely death of Banker A. T. Rudder, of Marbury this week.

Mr. Rudder was an astute man of business, Competent, Conservative and Safe.

His community has suffered an irreparable loss and the Bankers of Alabama will miss and mourn him for the years to come.

He was a man who was primarily a friend to humanity, whose greatest happiness was to do good to others. All of his wonderful talent as an organizer was given freely in the cause of education and the splendid High School at Marbury is a living testimonial to his memory.

We extend our sympathy to those good people of that community and gladly dedicate this humble tribute to him as an esteemed friend and honored man of affairs.

ALABAMA NEWS HAPPENINGS

A Resume of the More Important Events of Interest Condensed To An Epitomized Form.

The state highway department will advertise for bids on another link of the paved highways which is to connect Birmingham with Montgomery before the expiration of the month of January, according to information. The new section will be in Chilton county, and will extend half way across that county, from the Shelby county line to Lomax, a distance of 17 miles. The entire distance through Chilton county was considered too much to be handled as a single project, being 34 miles, and was divided into two sections, to be handled as separate projects.

Rabbits have been scarce in the market at Huntsville all this season and people in the country declare that there are not many of the little animals to be seen. Some of them claim that the rabbits were almost exterminated during the summer by the profuse use of calcium arsenate and other poisons that were spread in the cotton fields to exterminate the boll weevil and cotton caterpillars and that the poisons got on other vegetation as well as cotton, the rabbits ate it and died. Whether or not this is the explanation, very few rabbits are being seen this season, it is declared.

Held in the Tuscaloosa county jail charged with the killing of an unidentified girl, whose body was found in a burned negro church about four miles from Tuscaloosa on the Watermelon road, Alf Winchester has been indicted by the federal grand jury on three charges of violation of the federal narcotic laws. One charges the selling of narcotics, the other dealing in narcotics and the third charges having narcotics in his possession. The indictments came following investigations by the grand jury and it is said they were based upon information supplied by three named persons.

R. B. Pinson, a 72-year-old farmer, who lives on the Elston place a few miles west of Anniston, has demonstrated conclusively that farming can be made profitable in this section by clearing from a small farm $259.60 with an outlay of less than $10. Mr. Pinson had on his credit at a local bank on the first day of the year that amount of money from his 1923 operations, besides 50 bushels of corn, two and one-half tons of hay, 90 dozen bundles of oats and a large number of chickens and plenty of produce about his home.

The state board of agriculture has adopted uniform grades, the same as those applied to by the federal government, for cabbage, sweet potatoes, Irish potatoes and peaches, effective Feb. 2, and adopted tentative grades for strawberries. The board will meet Jan. 25 at Mobile, that city being selected for the meeting owing to the large trucking industry in its vicinity. The board on this occasion will make a survey of the salsuma, potato and cabbage areas of Mobile and Baldwin counties.

The Curry community, 10 miles north of Jasper, is a fast growing section of that part of the state. The new Curry consolidated high school was one of the first in north Alabama. This school would be a credit to any of the county high schools in the state. One of the features of this school is the vocational training, consisting of real farming, which provides practical agricultural experience. The Curry district is composed of seven large school districts, being the largest district in the state.

The Oak City Furniture factory, with a capitalization of $25,000, Tuscaloosa's newest manufacturing enterprise, has just started operation and commenced making porch swings at the rate of 150 to 200 per day. Eight thousand are to be manufactured in the present lot and this will keep the plant busy for some time. The output of manufactured goods will be gradually increased, according to the demands and will be shipped to all parts of the country.

The annual meeting of the Cleburne Farm Bureau will be held in the courthouse in Hedin Saturday morning, Jan. 12.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. McCurdy, who recently celebrated the sixtieth anniversary of their wedding, have moved to Anniston with their daughters. He is 92 and she is 91.

Hearings on the general citation issued by the Alabama public service commission to all carriers on fertilizer rates will be held at Montgomery January 14.

Because of some question as to the title of 40 acres in the heart of the city of Flomaton, Ala., Representative Lester Hill, of the Second Alabama district, has introduced a bill in Congress giving a perfect title of the equitable owners. There is some doubt, according to information possessed by the representative as to whether the government in fact owns it. It has been in possession of suitable owners for many years. As it is in the heart of the business section, it is very valuable property.

The road from Gadsden to Springville, via Attalla, is now practically impassable, and about 40 automobiles are said to be stalled, according to an automobile man. He reports that the cars were abandoned after many efforts to get through. One man traveling to Mississippi, after burning out his connecting rods several times, parked his car in a nearby barn and took a train. The number of abandoned cars is being increased daily. It is reported.

The Associated Charities has been organized for Colbert county, with Mrs. H. L. Halsey, president, and Miss Fay Wells, secretary-treasurer. The committee on investigation is composed of W. T. Burkett, chairman; R. H. Beasley and Mrs. George Jenkins. A meeting will be held at an early date, and it is expected this organization will be the avenue through which charity will be dispensed in Colbert county.

The farmers of Lowndes county have concluded their holiday celebrations and have begun preparations for 1924's crop by clearing the ditch banks, reopening ditches, strengthening terraces and repairing outhouses and fences. Occasionally the familiar sound of "Gee" and "Haw" can be heard where the land for spring oats is being prepared. It is estimated that about the same acreage for all minor crops will be planted.

The Madison county farm bureau has practically doubled its membership during the past year and now numbers more than 700 of the most progressive farmers of this region in its ranks, according to a statement made in the secretary's office. The second year of co-operative selling of cotton was a successful one as the first of the sales have been made with prices much higher.

Plans are being formed by the American Legion for avenues of memorial trees on two of the principal roads leading in and out of Birmingham. Each of these trees will be dedicated to one of Jefferson county's dead, who either fell in France or died later of the effects of wounds received.

A number of first year students in the State Secondary Agricultural School, who were taking non-vocational agriculture during the first term, have asked permission to change to the vocational agriculture course the second term, thus making the largest number of boys in the vocational department in the history of the school.

A few files and boxes of ammunition stored at nitrate plant No. 2, Muscle Shoals, during operations at the plant, have been shipped to Augusta, Ga. All military equipment has been removed from the reservation. This is the result of orders to clean up the plant of all unnecessary equipment.

Magnificent total of $45,250,000 in bank clearings, an increase of $5,000,000, was reached in Anniston during the last year, according to figures given out by the three national and one state bank. An increase of $1,488,127.90 in deposits over the previous year was also shown in the unofficial estimates.

Copies of the revised game and fish laws of 1923 have been received from the printer at the office of the state conservation department. They will be sent to anyone requesting same. I. T. Quinn, state commissioner of conservation, announces.

R. B. Wallace, of Browns, has filed suit in the circuit court of Dallas county for $1,000 damages against the Alabama farm bureau for alleged failure to carry out their specified provision in a contract to handle and market hay.

J. F. Anderson, manager of the Hays Co-operative company's plant at Attalla, lost his left foot when he fell across a circular saw. It was cut off just above the ankle. Mr. Anderson was directing some work near the saw when he stepped back and touched it.

J. C. Harrison, well-known news paper man of Montgomery and formerly warfare work director of the state convict department, has been appointed deputy state prison inspector by Dr. Glenn Andrews, state prison inspector.

The cross-tie and lumber markets in Cleburne County is practically at a standstill, on account of the bad condition of the roads, which are almost impassable.

The number of prisoners committed to the state penitentiary for the calendar year 1923 showed a decrease of 126 over 1922, according to figures from the office of Roy L. Nolen, associate member of the state board of administration.

Birmingham headquarters of the United States Good Roads Association, the Bankhead National Highway Association and the United States Good Roads show are actively working for attendance at the annual meeting of these organizations at Albuquerque, N. M., May 26 to 31.

Don't Fuss With Mustard Plasters!

Musterole Works Without the Blister—Easier, Quicker

There's no sense in mixing a mess of mustard, flour and water when you can easily relieve pain, soreness or stiffness with a little clean, white Musterole. Musterole is made of pure oil of mustard and other helpful ingredients, combined in the form of the present white ointment. It takes the place of mustard plasters, and will not blister.

Musterole usually gives prompt relief from sore throat, bronchitis, tonsillitis, croup, stiff neck, asthma, neuralgia, headache, congestion, pleurisy, rheumatism, lumbago, pains and aches of the back or joints, sprains, sore muscles, bruises, chilblains, frost-bite, colds of the chest (it may prevent pneumonia).

To Mothers: Musterole is now made in milder form for babies and small children. Ask for Children's Musterole. 35c and 65c jars and tubes.

LESSON FOR JANUARY 13

THE LONG SOJOURN IN EGYPT

LESSON TEXT—Gen. 47:1-12.
GOLDEN TEXT—"The Lord shall preserve thee from all evil; he shall preserve thy soul.—Ps. 121:7."

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—From Slaves to Prime Minister.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Joseph and the Migration to Egypt.

The seed promised Abraham, through which the world was to be blessed, was fulfilled in the giving of Isaac. Of Isaac's two sons, Jacob, the younger, was chosen. To Jacob was given twelve sons. They became the heads of the Twelve Tribes of Israel. Joseph, a son of Rachel, Jacob's beloved wife, was especially loved by his father. Because of the partiality shown by Jacob, Joseph's brethren hated him. This hatred was fanned into flame by his making known to his brethren certain dreams. Therefore, when his father sent him to inquire after the welfare of his brethren, they sold him as a slave to Midianite merchants who in turn sold him to the Egyptians. Under a false charge, made by Potiphar's wicked wife, he was cast into prison. Through the interpretation of a dream of one of Pharaoh's servants, and later Pharaoh's dream, Joseph was providentially exalted to be Prime Minister of Egypt. He put on a great conservation scheme, which provided against the bitter famine which came upon all that country. This sojourn in Egypt taught Israel in a new way to trust God, welded them into a nation, transformed them from a nomadic to a settled life, and gave them acquaintance with the material advancement of their time.

1. Joseph Presents His Father and Five Brethren to Pharaoh (Gen. 47:1-3).

1. Pharaoh's Invitation (Gen. 45:16-19). Jacob and his sons were in Egypt by Pharaoh's invitation. Joseph went out to the land of Goshen to meet them. Though now occupying an exalted position, Joseph was not ashamed of his father even though he was a plain country man.

2. Joseph's Tact (vv. 1, 2; cf. 46:30-34).

(1) In introducing his father and brethren in a personal way, thus capitalizing his own influence in favor of his kin. Pharaoh had high regard for Joseph; therefore would do much for them for Joseph's sake. God does much for us for Jesus' sake.

(2) In having his father and brethren come to Goshen (Gen. 45:10). Since possession is "nine points of the law," they were already in Goshen before asking Pharaoh for permission to occupy it (v. 4).

(3) In coaching his brethren (Gen. 46:34). He taught them beforehand what to say, because he knew how awkward they would be in the presence of the great king. Our Joseph, Jesus Christ, teaches us how to pray and what to pray for.

(4) In choosing five, not all (v. 2). In all probability he chose the five who would make the best appearance. He knew the great importance of first impressions.

3. Their Request to Pharaoh (vv. 3, 4). Joseph anticipated Pharaoh's questions and put the proper words into their mouths to use in making their desires known to Pharaoh: "Let thy servants dwell in Goshen."

4. Pharaoh's Response (vv. 5, 6).

(1) His gracious offer. They were to enjoy the best of the land according to their choice. He dealt with them very liberally.

(2) Positions of trust offered to capable men among them. He knew how capable Joseph was and surmised that some of his brethren might be likewise gifted. This gracious offer was because they were related to Joseph.

11. Jacob Blessing Pharaoh (vv. 7-10).

Though Pharaoh was the great king and Jacob now a supplicant at his feet receiving natural blessings, yet morally Jacob was above Pharaoh and therefore conferred blessings upon him. This humble saint of God is higher in dignity than earth's greatest king. Jacob discloses his own estimate of the earthly life of the believer. He calls it a pilgrimage of short duration.

111. Joseph Nourishes His Father and Brethren (vv. 11, 12).

1. He placed them in the best of the land, according as Pharaoh had commanded (v. 11).

2. He nourished them (v. 12). Since there was no bread in all the land to be obtained except as dispensed by Joseph, he distributed to them according to their needs. Our Joseph, Jesus Christ, supplies all our needs according to his riches in glory.

Need of Prayer.

Deeper than the need of men, deeper than the need of money, ay, deeper than this spiritless life of ours is the need of world-wide prevailing prayer.—Robert E. Speer.

Steadfast.

What men may think or say or do cannot silence him who is filled with the grace of God.—S. J. Patton.

A Means of Escape.

He is always the coward's way out of difficulty.—Christian Cynosure.

ABOUT MEN ONLY

A man who never accomplishes anything looks the part.

Only the successful man is in a position to value the world's praise at its true worth.

Death seems the only sure relief from the many troubles men stir up for himself.

If you lend a man grass seed he is sure to come around later and borrow your lawn mower.

The quickest and surest way to make an enemy of a man is to outdo him in anything.

Knowledge acquired by the college graduate often hampers him in his efforts to earn a living.

He is truly the prize idiot who keeps still in his humble little place and expects promotion and looks for reward.

A man never realizes how old-fashioned his clothes are until he beholds his son's glad rags on his return from college.

The city chap who thinks he can make his garden pay should be put in a cage with the man who thinks he understands women.

APROPOS OF NOTHING

Our friends see our faults and minimize them.

Insights of a school of journalism should be the question mark.

Being your own boss means a lot of deference to the whole world.

In concealing one's age, one has to be careful in one's reminiscences.

Never argue that something can't be done. Human intellect is too nearly infinite.

When a man says, "He talked to me like a Dutch uncle," he means that he was scolded and he liked it.

There are thousands of poets; and nearly every one utters a few lines which the greatest would have liked to own.

A man may smile and smile, and be a villain still; and likewise he may laugh and laugh, but there is a detectable quality in his mirth.

Power From the Waves.

Professor Trischetto, an Italian, predicts that if his recently invented model is adopted it will make it practical to get power from the waves of the ocean.

The extraction of power from the ocean's movements—waves and tides—has long been the dream of inventors, as such a source of power is practically inexhaustible; but heretofore the models have either been failures or so expensive to operate as to be impractical.

Prof. Trischetto, however, claims that with his device he can generate 10 horse power from each square yard of ocean surface used.

An interesting sidelight on the Professor's invention is the fact that he has been refused aid by his own government and has announced his intention of offering his device to English capitalists when it is perfected.

Inventions Must Wait.

In his new book, "We and Our Work," Joseph French Johnson reflects thus a possibly current opinion about the inevitableness of the inventor:

"Many people imagine that a life Edison could invent almost anything and anywhere."

"That is not true. If Mr. Edison lived in 1800 he could not have invented a single invention for which he is now justly famous."

"The science of physics was not advanced far enough in 1800 to enable anyone to invent the electric light. Much has been said about Marconi and his genius in inventing the wireless."

"But back of this invention! work, continued for many years. English and German scientists, showed how the waves of the spread."

"Marconi himself has acknowledged his debt to these men."

Yes, even the inventor of the popular refrain, "Yes, We Have Bananas," might have had to wait the discovery of the banana plant.

Like Mother Used to Make.

A young husband criticized the cuts his bride served him for her fast, employing the usual stereotyped comparison. Instead of weeping, some brides would, she got busy as a result of her work she set him the next morning a plate of biscuits alleged to be the real thing. "Now you've got it," he exclaimed lightly as he sampled the new. "These are exactly like mother to make. How did you happen to get on the recipe?" "It's no secret," said his wife, with glittering eyes. "I put in also instead of sugar cold storage eggs, dropped a bit of alum in the flour and adulterated the milk. Remember, sweetheart, mother lived before the enactment of the pure-food law."

Grant Parrot of the Rockies.

Science now knows that there lived in the Rocky mountains a parrot, with a massive beak, raucous voice, which might have sounded like a megaphone for through the ancient marshes of historic America. The bird, seven feet tall, and its huge beak two and a half feet long. Of there is no question. One nearly complete skeleton exists, and fragments of others, including skulls have dug up. Perhaps 8,000,000 years elapsed since this mighty fowl left the earth. Although so mighty, the giant parrot was neither so big nor formidable as another great whose remains have recently been up in Patagonia. The latter was a cursorial (running) bird of prey, a monster of the heron family. It was by far the biggest bird that ever lived, and probably with success large-sized animal, a remarkable fowl, says one, and had a head bigger than that of a with a huge beak as sharp as a it stood eight feet high on its clawed feet. Its neck was as thick as a horse's neck, and its limbs were as strong as a horse's. Like the giant parrot, its wings too small to be of any use in flight.

SPEAKING OF FUEL.

They stared at him unbelievably. He threw out an arm, kicked the encircling scabbard from his knees and blundered on:

"Listen there must be of you! Six muskets Crackley gave to you—and you have pistols and cutlasses around. Sixteen, fair-armed and desperate, and a longboat in the dark! If you remain here Murillo's men will leave you to the buzzards tomorrow—I know, I heard them say there were men of Lafitte alive on this reef!"

"They know?" muttered the chief.

"They guess! I say, we can retake the schooner!—the prize guard on her is nothing—the teniente in command can suspect nothing! Once they lay her stern the frigate there is no hope for any of you—"

"We were to send Mademoiselle to the frigate in the longboat," murmured Raoul.

"Throw her to the sharks—they're kinder than Murillo's men! The Spaniards think the schooner was bound to the rebel republics of the South. They will spare none who had to do with her—they blot out every life that could tell of her taking!"

He swung an empty pistol holster and tottered back and forth. Monsieur Sazarac tapped De Almonaster on the shoulder.

"It is the truth. It is a chance. Monsieur, our affair—we shall have to postpone it. And d—n your hot head! . . . Will you understand nothing?"

"Give me this action! Let me be the first to board the Seraphine—I shall show you, Monsieur Sazarac, if I am one to be sent away under the protection of a woman!"

"Nom de Dieu! And for that you would fight me!" breathed the other softly. Then he turned away, hastening to the outlaws down the sand spit.

Jarvis had sat down again. He watched the light in the south—the Napoleon ship, drawing slowly out on the ebb-tide, with the Spanish king's men at the tow-lines.

"If they get a wind," mumbled Jarvis, "we are undone. Then I might as well have stayed and died in the grass. I came to save you all—"

"John!" cried De Almonaster, "what madness seized you to turn upon him at the pinch?"

"I saved you all—"

at once, in her presence, he became a ghost of a man, pursuing his tattered mask of a Sazarac.

Certain it is that, after the leader had told of the thing to be done, and of Jarvis' coming to them, there was such a puzzled, and then a shouting acclaim for the plan, that every one forgot the author of it.

"By Blackbeard himself!" roared Bohon, "It is a scheme that Jean Lafitte would have loved!"

They scattered to the bushes for their few arms and ammunition boxes. Others were working the longboat from the shoals to where the adventurers could wade as she settled with the load of them in deeper water.

There was hushed laughter, grim confidence, a founting, nudging loyalty to the quiet leader. Two huge fellows carried Mademoiselle Lestron from the sands to the boat, in a chair formed of their brawny arms. Then they pushed the longboat slowly, stealthily out to catch the run of the ebb-tide.

"Sazarac," whispered De Almonaster. He was on a mid-thwart with Mademoiselle Lestron at his side. His hand sought hers in the close press of the adventurers crowded in the longboat. She did not resist . . .

but she did not return his pressure. She was merely calm, watchful, trusting to the skill and courage of Sazarac.

"There's her top!" above the mist, blessed the Catalan lookout. "Lase off."

"And up and to the Seraphine's Deck. There Sild a Dozen Silent Figures."

A wind—a touch of air—is fatal to us. In, lads—I hear their halibuts above us. Come, there's her bulk in the fog!"

De Almonaster felt a pressure on his hand. He bent his head.

"Monsieur—your pistol. Give it to me—I will not fail in their hands alive—if we fall!"

"We will not fail," he whispered moodily. "Why—with Sazarac?"

She wondered if the silent leader at the stern had caught this bitter tribute? There was no more speech for any of them. The girl was staring now, between the press of crouched figures, at the great limp disorder of the snowy sails; it seemed but another moment when the muffled air blades shot the longboat fair under the schooner's stern. Old hands trembled on long unused weapons; there seemed a muttering and a nodding of heads. . . .

and then a slight jar, the snap of a hook on a wooden rail, and up and to the Seraphine's deck there sild a dozen silent figures, cutlass cords in teeth, fingers to triggers.

De Almonaster writhed with impatience awaiting his turn. A terrified howl had arisen from some wounded sailors lying in the schooner's waist, who first caught sight of the swarming figures in the land mist.

The huge Johanness was the first to reach the wheel. The two officers of the king of Spain had hardly turned surprised faces at the footfalls as they died gasping under his two cutlass swings. The helmsman cried out and an iron pie crashed to his teeth.

And amidst a battle was arising. Frightened howls, incoherent commands from fleeing petty officers; while above it, now, came the wild yell of the gulf buccanniers in other days and evil.

"A-Barrataria! A-Barrataria! Lafitte! Lafitte!"

To that cry these castaways had swarmed chains and shrouds of many a ship now long missing in the ports of the world.

Save for one obscure figure, the longboat held none except Mademoiselle Lestron. She shrank lower, closing her eyes against the screams and shots of the battle which had thickened forward. The towing boats had turned on the hawyers; they were coming back. The Spanish king's men arose at the bow, attempting to climb and save their helpless comrades.

The shots and cries and tramping went on, and the girl shuddered at the sounds. Who was whining, what had happened to her friends, she could not tell. But slowly there was a stir in the bow-thwarts. A tall man arose, rubbing his eyes as if awakened from a dispiriting sleep. He stared about—she could just see him dimly in the starlight, and then he climbed awkwardly, with frantic haste but slowly after all—to the boarding ladders.

He got over the rail with some difficulty, and then stopped as if considering what he should do next. Louise's startled eyes could not make out his face but his uncouth movements seemed familiar. . . . If she could only see his eyes—whether they were light or dark—or the contour of his face, perhaps, she could know. . . . then he staggered and fell.

The girl upstart. The cries and imprecations seemed growing in volume, coming nearer, as if the attackers were being driven back. But she began to climb the nearer boarding ladder. When she came over the rail she saw first an indistinct group of struggling men forward, with here and there the flash of fire; and then, near her on the deck, under the dim light by the main companionway, a man crawling along.

At the companionway he got to his feet with some trouble and disappeared below. The girl ran back of the after-housing to get away from a dying Spaniard at her feet. There she found three other bodies, and the smooth planks were slippery under her feet.

She fled the other way from these horrors and then found herself by the open skylight of the main cabin.

It was brilliantly lighted there. Apparently all the fury of the two battles for the Seraphine had never penetrated to the heavy splendor of rosewood, silken tapestries and ormolu encased mirrors of the emperor's suite. For at the emperor's table sat the ragged man she had seen there once before. He was in the huge, carved, pretentious chair at the head of the board.

He rather shone with blood from a scalp wound under his matted hair. Also she saw that he appeared to be picking over the bones of some remnants of a dish that must have been prepared for Crackley's lieutenants earlier in the day. At any rate the lone guest showed disappointment. He reached for the cognac, and then lit a long red pipe he found on the board. Then he sat back and smoked, listening to the distant sounds of the battle forward and above on the decks of the Napoleon ship.

Mademoiselle Lestron turned away with fearful curiosity. She encountered a bustling group coming past the main-mast. Panting, stumbling, smoke-grimed men, among whom she saw the tall Sazarac. He sprang to the side as if to see to the safety of the English woman left in the longboat.

"Monsieur!" she cried, and ran to him frightenedly.

"There is no man of them left in arms!" he shouted, with a brightening eye. "The port watch went overboard at our rush, swimming for their boats. Beluche is tumbling their wounded to a yawl that remains. Mademoiselle!" he bowed to her, "you will go below away from these abominable sights. Come—the Seraphine is won!"

"No—no!" she gasped in horror still. "No—not yet!"

Sazarac turned from her for an instant to the wheel where an altercation seemed arising. Old Dominique had taken it; he was shouting, with his eyes aloft. "She is drawing at the top!" the fat seaman bawled. "A man to her shrouds! A man—give me one man!"

A silence had come, strangely silent after the fury. A grown or two, a coughing follow forward in the le scuppers. Dominique was howling once more.

"D—n! She's drawing! We'll be on the sands with this! A seaman for Dominique! Where are ye all?"

The Count de Almonaster suddenly appeared past the tangle of cordage along the starboard rail where dead men were twisted into rope and grimed sail cloth. He threw away a broken small sword and came on.

"Mademoiselle!"

"I am not hurt," she said faintly. "You—Monsieur!"

The roaring of Dominique, the alderman of New Orleans, cut him off.

"Come me!—fat—heavy as a lout—and here a sea fight such as my old eyes have dreamed! A ship of blood! A ship of death!—twice in one day has she been cleared of the dead louts fallen on her!"

Forward, indeed, a man was heaving corpses to the phosphorescent waters. Yet the ship seemed curiously still. She was drawing on, with Dominique hauling at the wheel; slowly, and with a sighing fill of limp canvas, a weary clatter of blocks . . . sailing, somehow, in unseemable disorder, but out of the rippling shallows.

And to the west a heavy gun broke with a spurt of fire. They heard the shot ride sullenly into the sand spit on the port quarter.

"A man aloft!" bawled Dominique. "Break out w' stays! What's the matter w' ye all?"

Two had gone aloft. Clark, the young English lad, and Gorgio, the Catalan. The latter was crawling up slowly, a hand to shroud and cat-line. By the light they could see him faintly. Grim, bloody-faced, responding to his last order.

SYSTEMATIC HOUSE-CLEANING PLAN

Vacuum Cleaner Saves Time and Labor.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Save labor in the weekly house cleaning by having a definite plan, the United States Department of Agriculture says. When this is done, the same work will not need to be repeated. For example, when rooms near together are to be cleaned on the same day, it is often easiest to get all of them ready, then clean them all, and finally put them all in order.

Dust Small Things First. Small pictures and bric-a-brac should first be dusted. If not removed from the room entirely they should be placed in a pile and covered. Furniture, mirrors, and pictures should be dusted and covered with cloths. Draperies and portieres should be taken down or pinned up. Radiators, registers, grates, stoves, or fireplaces should be cleaned.

Walls, ceiling and baseboards should be brushed and dusted, and floor and floor coverings cleaned according to the kind. The object of sweeping and dusting is to remove dust, not to scatter it. In sweeping, the strokes should be firm and even. Keep the broom or brush on the floor most of the time instead of flitting it through the air. The dust cloth should be held in a fairly compact mass, so that the surface to be cleaned is wiped or polished and at the same time the dust is held by the cloth. While the dust is settling, remove spots from the woodwork and wash windows if necessary.

The covers may then be taken from pictures and furniture. They should be shaken out of doors if possible. Then the room and furniture should be dusted thoroughly, beginning at the top of the room and working down.

Use of Vacuum Cleaner. When a room is cleaned with a vacuum cleaner, the order of proceeding is different. The room is first dusted, then the vacuum cleaner is used on upholstery, hangings, walls, and carpets or rugs, and finally the floor is dusted. By this method of cleaning fewer articles need to be moved, no dust is scattered, and more dirt is actually removed. A vacuum cleaner, therefore, saves time and labor.

WOMAN HEADS HOME ECONOMICS BUREAU

Dr. Louise Stanley Is Recipient of Unusual Honor.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

For the first time in the history of the United States Department of Agriculture a woman, Dr. Louise Stanley, has been recently made chief of a bureau—the newly created bureau of home economics. The desirability of appointing a woman to this position will be appreciated when it is understood that the work of the Department of Agriculture is intended to serve the needs of the whole farm family in agriculture and home economics. While many of its bureaus give their attention to matters which chiefly concern the farmer, such as crops, live stock, soil conditions, insect pests, or general advantage of the whole family, and that what a mother does should be recognized and appreciated. At the same time, with more information as to what other housekeepers and scientific workers have found out about good household management, the proper feeding of the family, the best utensils and equipment to buy or the most durable materials for clothing, every mother can render better service to her family with less effort on her own part. To supply information on all such questions and to make investigations which will lead to continued improvement in household methods, the new bureau of home economics was established.

Printed leaflets, known as "Farmers' Bulletins" and dealing with a great many topics of interest to housekeepers, may be had free upon application to the United States Department of Agriculture. Those on food subjects contain good recipes which have been thoroughly tested.

For the present year the new bureau of home economics will continue work already begun in nutrition, food preparation and other household problems. After next July scientific studies will be made to learn how the family income should be spent, what woman's work in the home is actually worth if wages were paid, how to select clothing and dress materials to best advantage, how to choose the most nourishing foods, how much housing ought to cost, the best kind of equipment to buy, such as furnaces, hot water heaters, stoves, refrigerators, the best plan for a kitchen. As these studies are completed information relating to them will be circulated in the newspapers and magazines and in the form of farmers' bulletins.

COOK RABBITS LIKE CHICKEN

Those Raised Especially for Market Are Apt to Be More Tender Than Wild Ones.

Rabbits may be served in any way chicken is liked—fried, fricasseed, smothered, baked in a casserole, in pie, croquettes, or hash. While wild rabbits are often relished, those especially raised for the market are apt to be more tender and will cook in less time. The bureau of home economics, United States Department of Agriculture, recommends the following way of preparing an excellent casserole of rabbit:

Clean and disjoint the rabbit into as many pieces as desired. Sprinkle with salt and pepper and dredge with flour. Fry to a delicate brown, preferably in sausage or bacon fat, though any clean cooking fat may be used. When the rabbit is done, put the pieces in a casserole and pour over them a gravy made from four tablespoons of flour and fat in which it was fried, blended with four tablespoons of stock or boiling water, seasoned well with salt, pepper and Worcestershire sauce. If the casserole is prepared early in the day it may be reheated in the oven for dinner. It should be boiled in the casserole from half an hour to an hour, or until the meat is very tender.

How about last Saturday night for an insect exterminator?

The further 1924 goes the poorer opinion we have of its judgment in weather.

The next thing we expect to hear of ex-Klansman Clark is that he has called a convention to abolish the United States.

If there are any more presidential aspirants in Alabama let them make it known by the usual voting sign of the order.

Judge Weakley figured in a Senatorial primary race once. Does the candidacy of Dinsmore remind you of anything?

Last Saturday the mercury was 22 at 7 a. m. and down to 20 at noon. A drop like that in the forenoon is a rare thing in this country.

President Coolidge is realizing now what Shakespeare meant when he said: "Heavy lies the head that wears the crown."

We don't imagine that managing a campaign for a candidate is half as lucrative a job as handling the spigot of the "barrel."

Underwood, Musgrove, Dinsmore, Chenault and Hiram. The peanut politicians are slobbering at the mouth with the prospect of juicy pickings.

As long as the free cats and drinks hold out the Mexican revolution can be depended on to hold out. The winner will be the side that furnish them the longest.

Why is it that game and fish have steadily become more scarce since the legislatures began to "protect" them? Not knocking, just asking for information.

The depths of human depravity can neither be measured nor weighed. With some people the damnation of their own soul seems to be a cheap price to pay for a little piece of political pie.

Senators Heflin and Borah are going to defend Senator Mayfield, of Texas, in the malicious fight to unseat him. That settles it. We know Mayfield is in the right by the kind of men who are backing him up.

The Union-Banner seems to think it is the duty of the Ku Klux Klan to enforce the law here. What is the matter with our republican officials? We thought the sheriff and his deputies were doing fine.

The Saviour successfully answered a crowd once by saying: "Let him who is without sin cast the first stone." Another suggestive quotation at times is: "He that lives in glass houses cannot afford to throw rocks."

The effort some people make in trying to sit on the political fence and gather fruit on both sides makes us laugh. In trying to occupy two stools people have been known to miss them both and land on the floor.

Every newspaper man tries to please his readers, we suppose. We thank the Lord that we do not have to pander to an appetite hungry for scandal, vituperation, mud-slinging and general filth.

C. C. Brooks, assistant examiner of accounts for the state, has discovered that a great number of state enforcement officers have been charging the state to exorbitant car expenses. Not to be wondered at. In as loose a system as that you could expect nothing else.

If the democrats of Clanton and Chilton county are as low down and crooked as Editor Wyatt painted them last week it is a little remarkable that they pay about 75 per cent of the tax, do about 90 per cent of the business and operate, we believe, every bank in the county. Were it not for the patronage the democrats give him, the pages of his paper would be almost as blank of advertising matter as the Congressional Record.

SEND US YOUR JOB WORK

PECULIAR JOURNALISM

Our neighbor, the Union-Banner, seems to become more and more disturbed and wrought up as the time approaches for an investigation of the county ballot box. In fact, certain developments among the real beneficiaries of that peculiarly misfit "party" they have succeeded in holding together in Chilton County, would indicate that they were endeavoring to build a "smoke screen" around the real issues and, like the cuttle fish, attempt to escape real legal issues by distorting and clouding the perfectly clear and legitimate legal investigation with a series of criminal prosecutions and questionable disturbances that have no bearing whatever on the legal or illegal voting done in the last election.

But it looks like the editor of the Union-Banner, in his blind "party" enthusiasm, has permitted his bitter hatred of anything that truly espouses the cause of democracy, to betray him into an unfortunate position in more ways than one.

The following quotation from his last week's issue is an inexcusable and wanton insult, thrown squarely in the faces of the very people who give him at least 90 per cent of his business, aside from the emoluments paid him through the county treasury, and 75 per cent of that is democratic money. This looks like a gratuitous and perfectly uncalled for desire on his part to insult his best patrons:

The way that the political coterie of Clanton tries to smuggle dirty tricks of their own bunch is indeed amazing. If the clique here had their way about it, one of their bunch could commit the most heinous crime imaginable, they would cover it over and the next time they got a chance they would honor him with the highest office within their power. But let some lie get hatched out about a Republican and see what they do their best to make of it. They talk it at every opportunity, and every time one of them gets through with it it sounds ten times worse than it did at first.

Then again he pitches into the city court with insinuations that apparently would place any individual in contempt. Listen and note the peculiarly suggested errors and misstatements of the following clipping:

Only a few months ago, Mr. Kendrick sold to Baker & Taylor his interest in this store, and it is said that Mr. Kendrick still kept some of his papers and probably a few other articles in the store. Mr. Kendrick was supposed to have turned over to Baker & Taylor his keys to the building, but somehow he still had one of the keys in his possession. Mr. Kendrick attempted to explain why he had the key and why he entered the building, but his explanation was not very satisfactory. However, the officers agreed to let him go until morning and that they would investigate the matter further. The next morning the owners of the store and the officers of the Town of Clanton were told about what happened.

The thing rocked along until Saturday of last week, when Mr. Kendrick was tried in Mayor's court before Mr. J. B. Atkinson. We learn that Mr. Kendrick was turned loose and still remains in the employ of the town as night police.

Whether or not anything more is going to be done about the matter, we are unable to say, but from the action of the Mayor's court it seems to be settled.

Now, the question arises, can the town of Clanton afford to let a thing like this go by without giving the matter a thorough thrashing out? It seems that the town has been attempting to keep the affair covered up and has tried to ooze out of it without hurting anyone's feelings.

After the alleged arrest of Mr. Kendrick the whole matter was allowed to rest and nothing done in regard to it at all for a period of two weeks or more. Then follows a prosecution that, we believe, sets a precedent in Alabama law enforcement, when these officers of the county, whose allegiance, jurisdiction and authority are all vested in the state and county courts and laws, on their own violation, sought out the mayor of the town and got a warrant, returnable to the Mayor's court, for the arrest of this man whom they had charged with a very grave penal offense.

Any unprejudiced person is obliged to note the indications pointed out by these entirely new and unprecedented departures from the customary rules governing such cases and the Editor of the Union-Banner, in his haste to gather in the supposed laurels that might accrue in this terrible expose of the crookedness of Clanton democrats, adds a very strong additional suspicion to the suggestion that there may have been "method in the madness" that dictated that prosecution of this case.

Again, it does not clearly appear who it was that was attempting "to keep the affair covered up." According to the statement, Mr. Kendrick was in the hands of the sheriff and his deputies. Does the Banner intend to charge that they were in collusion to hush the matter up? They are all members of the republican party and surely he does not mean to insinuate that they would connive with the damnable democrats in compounding a felony.

It is immensely distasteful to us to be forced to enter into such a discussion as this, but "forbearance ceases to be a virtue" at times, and we do not believe that the high standard of decency that we wish to always maintain, will be smirched particularly by this statement of the real facts, and by this defense of some of us good, honest and pure minded citizens as live anywhere on earth.

So far as the Kendrick case is concerned we will say this. He was duly arraigned and tried in open court, by the very tribunal selected by his accusers, and before a judge who is an open, clean and honest republican gentleman, and every opportunity was given his accusers to make out a case against him but they utterly failed and, while Judge Atkinson is a staunch republican and we are equally as staunch a democrat, from our acquaintance with him, of several years standing, we resent any insinuation or expression that would reflect on his honesty as a man or his absolute fairness and impartiality as a judge.

It is reported that the bid will be let in a day or so for the construction of the B. & M. highway from the Shelby county line to Lomax.

A. P. I. JOINS POWER COMPANY IN PLAN TO ELECTRIFY FARMS

THREE YEAR TEST TO PROVE FEASIBILITY BEGINS AT ONCE AT EXPENSE OF POWER COMPANY

"WILL PUT ALA. IN FRONT"—DOWELL

Experimental Lines Will Be Built at Several Points in Alabama—Research Work to Start at Auburn Polytechnic Institute.

Auburn, Ala., Jan. 7.—(Special)—Definite arrangements have been completed between the Alabama Polytechnic Institute and the Alabama Power Company whereby research work of a more comprehensive nature than ever before attempted will be conducted to find practical means and methods of supplying Southern farmers with hydro-electricity, according to announcement made today by President Spright Dowell. Sufficient funds have been appropriated by the Alabama Power Company to cover the costs of experiments over a three-year-period during which research work in electrifying agriculture will be done and practical studies will be made on farms located in different sections of Alabama.

Discussion and consideration of this project have been in progress for some time and, now that the agreement has been signed, actual work will begin immediately.

As explained by Dr. Dowell, the Alabama Power Company will furnish electrical engineers who will work in co-operation with agricultural engineers of the Experiment Station. They will determine how electric power may be delivered to the farms of Alabama, and utilized in farm homes and in farming operations to provide the same benefits enjoyed by city dwellers. Under agreement, the Alabama Power Company will build experimental lines at points in the state, representative of agricultural sections of different types where the application of electricity to agriculture is believed to be most feasible. The investigation will be carried on under expert guidance after conditions in these communities have been studied and their needs ascertained. President Dowell has received assurance of the co-operation of the farmers which will be necessary for the success of the plan.

In conjunction with the work in rural sections, the Experiment Station here will be completely electrified and the several departments will make a careful study of the possible uses of electricity in all agricultural activities.

The work at the Experiment Station as well as that throughout the State will be under the immediate direction of the Department of Agricultural Engineering. Each department of the Experiment Station will co-operate with the Department of Agricultural Engineering in conducting the work. In the Animal Husbandry Division a study will be made of the possible use of electricity in operating feed grinders, corn shellers, hay bales, clipping machines, groomers, ice cream freezers, cream separators and all other equipment used on a live stock farm. A special study will be made of the use of electricity in operating incubators, brooders, egg graders and egg candlers on poultry farms.

The electrification of canners, dehydrators and vegetable curing machinery, sweet potato curing, spray mixers, spray pumps and fruit grading machinery will be studied by the Horticultural Department. Electricity in the operation of fertilizer mixers, ensilage cutters, seed graders, peanut pickers, gins, small grain harvesters, limestone crushers and other general farming machinery will be considered. Over one hundred uses of electricity on farms have been listed for investigation.

In commenting on this program Dr. Dowell said: "Alabama is an agricultural state and one of the main purposes of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute is to serve the farmer. This is one of the most important experimental projects undertaken by the Experiment Station. Work along this line has been done in a minor way in other states but our purpose is to make a thorough and comprehensive study which will reveal all fundamental facts involved. We want to determine how the 256,000 farmers of Alabama, as well as those in other states can receive the benefits of the use of electricity now enjoyed by the city dwellers. It places Alabama in the front rank among the states of the Union in work of this kind."

IT DRIVES OUT WORMS

The surest sign of worms in children is pale faces, lack of interest in play, fretfulness, variable appetite, picking at the nose and sudden starting in sleep. When these symptoms appear it is time to give White's Cream Vermifuge. A few doses drives out the worms and puts the little ones on the road to health again. White's Cream Vermifuge has a record of fifty years of successful use. Price 35c. Sold by all druggists and grocers.

JEMISON NOTES

(By R. B. Johnson)

Before a large crowd of basket ball fans, last Friday evening the Jemison High School quintette gained a stronger hold on their record by trouncing the Thorsby Institute aggregation by the time of 28 to 10.

Taking the lead soon after the game started, the Thorsby team was soon overwhelmed, never to regain the lead. Although the score board registered a close score till the second half began, the J. H. S. was not content to be held so tight by a team that it has twice defeated this season.

Calvin Lenore starred in pitching goals, getting 9 points to his credit. Gary Ross and Astro Wright tied for the second honors. Each looping 5. Wright made one pitch for the basket near the center which added much to the game. One noted feature of the game was Charles Glass retaining the ball near his opponents goal and working his way clear across the court and ringing a field goal, being closely guarded.

Charles Glass and Fulton Lenore held their opponents in their control throughout the game, allowing neither to have an open shot. Friday's victory was the 8th for the Jemison High out of eight contests played.

The Jemison team is comparatively fortunate in having a fine set of cheerers, being led by Miss McCollum. Jemison meets Marbury high next Friday night, 8 o'clock, at Marbury, Loxley who can be strongly urged to go as Coach Grant is anxious to see what mark his team makes against his former school team. Any team desirous of a game with Jemison High communicate with Prof. Lawrence or Coach Grant.

The epidemic of measles which has been threatening the town for the past month, seems to be raging in full force now, as several new cases have been reported the past week. Several pupils are detained from their school work on this account.

Misses Kate and Emma McNeill, two of the primary teachers of Jemison, entertained the basket ball team, as a few other, intimate friends last Friday evening, 7:30 o'clock. A delightful time was reported by all who attended.

We deeply regret to learn that our friend Mr. Herman Shaw met with an accident several days past which resulted in a broken and mangled arm. He is at the present in farming home, but is expected home in a few days.

Mr. Sam Cressell, last day of Jemison, is at present working, a Birmingham.

Mr. Paul Marney is at the present visiting friends and relatives in Schenectady, N. Y. We are glad that he has about recovered from the pain of a broken leg, which was the result of an automobile accident near Memphis, Tenn.

Miss H. G. Jetticus has recently been visiting in Birmingham.

Miss Elizabeth McNeill recently entertained Miss Jane Anderson of Putnam. Miss Anderson was one of the teachers at Jemison, 1922-23.

Mrs. Sam Cressell showed a loyal interest in the Jemison School by donating 22 books to the library. The books are of the type that is most useful to History and English classes as reference books. But they are both serviceable and instructive to all who care to read.

Prof. Leo Langston, now engaged in the teaching profession near Clanton, dined with Misses Marie and Gladys Flummer, near Thorsby, last Sunday.

The Jemison B. V. P. U. was compelled to postpone their trip to Oak Grove last Sunday, on account of the disagreeable weather that was at that time prevailing.

Mrs. John Adams accompanied her son Walter to Birmingham while he was en-route to Clemson college where he is attending school.

Mr. Carl Simms of Birmingham is visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Allison Simms.

SHOCKING REVELATIONS RELATIVE TO POLISH COLONY OF 60,000 IN DETROIT, MICHIGAN.

There was printed in The Birmingham News Friday an editorial from The Chicago Tribune, based upon conditions in the Polish settlement of "Hamtramck"—a city of 60,000 Poles within the city of Detroit. These people are demanding that none but the Polish language be taught in the schools. They "boomed" down a local justice of the peace who attempted to speak in English. They were violent in their denunciation of a Federal judge for sentencing some of their number for liquor violations.

And finally they have voiced their demand for "Polish rule" instead of American rule, within that utterly foreign city.

It makes the blood boil in the veins of native Americans. It brings the hot flush of shame that we have been so complaisant as to permit such a condition of things to occur; that we have sat idly by and seen cowardly politicians swing the gates to this country wide open, and year after year refuse to close them, because those cowardly Congressmen feared "the foreign vote."

Make them fear the American vote! Let them know that Americans have become awake to the danger. Thank God, there are more real Americans than there are foreigners here as yet—but the real Americans must speak up!

And yet, why become excited over Hamtramck—that alien sore within Detroit, when New York is but a collection of cities quite as utterly foreign? There is an Italian city within New York where English is never heard and where American ideals are not known. There is a Russian city, an alien colony, a poison, and the means where they are teaching belshevism and communism to the school children, even. There are various other colonies and cities. New York is not an American city. It is a mongrel aggregation where Americans are in the minority. Other Northern cities are the same, to a less degree. Detroit, for instance. There are vast foreign colonies in Cleveland, in Cincinnati, in Chicago, in Milwaukee, in Kansas City—in Duluth; in many other places.

It is time for the people of American descent to serve notice in unmistakable terms upon Congress that a drastic alien exclusion law must be passed. It is time to insist also upon a more speedy and liberal deportation law—and begin to send these people out who are convicted of breaking our laws, or preaching sedition and the destruction of this government—it is as important to begin sending undesirable out as it is to prevent more of them from getting in.

Their ways are not our ways, and apparently the bulk of them do not care to learn our ways. If this dilution of the body politic keeps on, the American people as a people will inevitably be so mongrelized as that this will no longer be a nation—but a loose dumping ground divided up into different nationalities.

Congress reassembles soon—it is time for real Americans who have the love of their country at heart to begin to urge upon their representatives in Congress to take action.—Birmingham News.

TAX EXEMPTION FARCE MUST END

Will Congress adopt Secretary Mellon's program for tax reduction which includes a reduction in income tax and the doing away with future issues of tax-exempt bonds?

The President and the people are in favor of tax reduction. The politicians, through their blocs and parties in Congress, are pulling and hauling to try to gain personal prestige through delays and log rolling in the tax reduction program.

A constitutional amendment to do away with tax-exempt securities passed House of Representatives last winter but died at expiration of Congress. It is now necessary to pass it again. This takes valuable time and shows waste and expense resulting where public officials play politics instead of expediting the business of the nation.

At the present time it is estimated that the income from approximately $30,000,000,000 in capital invested in government tax-exempt securities, escapates all forms of taxation. The fact that cities, counties, states and nation can issue tax-exempt bonds drawing a low rate of interest has caused a reckless increase in public debt and has furnished the loop-hole for billions of dollars to escape taxation.

After an amendment to the United States' constitution is passed permitting the taxation of income from future issues of public bonds, it will be necessary for legislatures of the various states to ratify the measure. For this reason, quick action in Congress is essential in order that state legislatures which are in session or which will be in session in the near future may be able to act on the measure and put an end to the present obsolete system which is an invitation for the reckless piling up of debt on one hand and lawful tax dodging on the other hand.

It would seem as if Republicans, Democrats and Progressives would be on common ground when it comes to a measure of this kind which would assure in the future that every person would pay his share of income tax. It is not possible for Congress to cut out politics and get down to business on this measure?

Our Very Best Wishes

Another year has been buried now in the grave of the past. All in all, it was a real good old year and we have nothing but kindness in our heart for it.

Of course, we have all had our sorrows and disappointments, but we have also had our joys and successes. One thing we are especially thankful for, the many friends who have so liberally favored us with their patronage. To every one of them we take this opportunity of expressing our thanks individually.

We wish for you all a happy and prosperous NEW YEAR. May success and good health abide with you every day. When you come to town call to see us, let us serve you in any way we can.

Good luck to you all.

LITTLE INNOCENT ANGELS

Mable Normand, and Ethel Purviance, two famous movie stars at Hollywood, after putting over a 24-hour drunken orgie in the room of a bachelor libertine of their acquaintance, wound up the performance by getting the man perhaps fatally shot by the chauffeur of the Normand female.

It seems that the chauffeur was also a partaker of his mistress's favors and became jealous and went to force her to leave the bachelor apartments. His methods of inducing her to go with him were rather unconventional to us outsiders but probably were very proper in Hollywood. He grabbed her by the leg and tried to drag her away. The other man objected to his forceful methods when the chauffeur demonstrated his rights by drawing a gat belonging to his mistress and shooting the other man through the lung.

The wounded man was rushed to a hospital and the day following the Normand female followed him there and had herself operated on for appendicitis—or something.

These are the kind of disreputable and shameless female characters that the American public pay over $50,000,000 yearly to go and look at on the screen. Owing to the fat salaries they receive and the especially "fat pick up on the side" they can command by their good looks, they are able to pull off the most glaring, shameless and high class licentious debauchery of any people in the world, and they seem to delight in making their revels just as nasty and nauseous as the occasion will allow.

If movie manager, Will Hays and the movie censors all over the country do not demand the absolute exclusion of such brazen red light devotes as these from the screen, then all of the picture going people of the country should rise up and refuse to attend any show that permitted either of these characters to smile, cavort and smirk in the faces of decent people.

COL. J. F. THOMPSON SPEAKS

STATE OF ALABAMA,
Jefferson County.

Before me the undersigned authority, personally appeared J. F. Thompson, who being by me first duly sworn, deposes and says:

That in company with J. J. Pickens and W. T. Hand, I went to the Record Room in the Court House at Clanton, Alabama, to work on the poll tax records on Friday morning, December 14th, 1923. Shortly after our arrival, Omar Reynolds came in and stated that he would like to put some one in there to watch, as Mr. Hand had been in there before, looking at the books, and gone out and made statements that there had been names rubbed off. Prior to this time not one discourteous, unpleasant or unkind word had been spoken by any one, in fact Mr. Hand had not spoken to either of the clerk, in the Probate Office. Mr. Hand was with me in the record room at work the entire day mentioned, except when he left for the train, but returned in about two or three minutes. I told Judge Reynolds on Wednesday, December 19th, in the office of Grover Walker, that it was not Mr. Hand, but I was the one who asked the Clerk for the information relative to the names on the poll list. There was nothing unusual or unpleasant resulted from my inquiry. Mr. Hand was at work on the other side of the table and took no part in the inquiry I made. I was present and heard all that was said by Mr. Hand to Mr. Gore, Mr. Hand did not say that the bunch of crooks had charged him with being crooked, neither did he say that Reynolds was not only crooked, but all on the other side, what he said was, that none of the bunch believed I would do anything crooked. Mr. Gore misunderstood this and they had some words.

We hurried home with our trophy and the madam prepared it for dinner and the madam prepared it for dinner ciled to go to jail if Sheriff Tom feeds on stuff like that.

We all certainly enjoyed that feed and we extend to the sheriff our sincere thanks for the treat.

THIS WOMAN RELIEVED FROM SUFFERING

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. A Remarkable Story

Dover, Del.—"I wish every woman would take your wonderful medicine as it has done so much good to me. I had cramps and faint spells and very bad pains. One day I was over to my neighbor's house and she told me I ought to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. So I went to the store on my way home and got a bottle, and took the first dose before supper. I have been taking it ever since, and you can hardly believe how different I feel. I had just wanted to lie in bed all the time, and when I started to brush up I would give out in about ten minutes. So you know how badly I felt. I used to go to bed at eight and get up at seven, still tired. Now I can work all day and stay up until eleven, and feel all right all the time. My housework is all I do in summer, but in winter I work in a factory. I have told a good many of my friends, and I have had three come to me and tell me they wouldn't do without the Vegetable Compound."

Linens Carry Own Gardeners.
Nearly every large line making a business of carrying passengers carries one or more gardeners. Without them it would not be possible for such liners as the Majestic, the Mauretania and Aquitania to be such floating palaces or floating gardens. Huge quantities of cut flowers and many potted plants are used on these liners on every voyage. They have discovered that roses are not good sea travelers at all, regardless of expert care, but that chrysanthemums and carnations thrive on the rolling main.

Indigestion and Liver Trouble.

Bowling Green, Ky.—"I don't just remember how many years I have used Black-Draught," says Mr. Frank Burnett, a painter and song writer, of 200 Park street, this city, "but I've used it longer than I've known my wife—that is over thirty years—and I've found it a wonderful friend."

"When a young man," he says, "we kept Black-Draught in our home and I would take it for headache, indigestion and liver trouble. It did me good. I used it on until we married, and then my daughters grew up and they used it, and we hardly know how to get along without it."

"I am a painter and the paint affects the stomach. When I need anything for stomach trouble, I take a good dose or two of Theodor's Black-Draught and I am all right. It relieves indigestion and cleanses the liver best of anything I ever used."

Theodor's Black-Draught has been a well-known, successful liver medicine for over eighty years. Made from selected medicinal roots and herbs, and containing no dangerous mineral drugs, it is nature's own remedy for a tired, worn-out liver.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Sale of U. S. War Material to Government of Mexico Loudly Protested.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

SURPLUS war material is being sold to the Mexican government, the first shipments of arms and ammunition having already been received at Mexico City. President Obregon sent a special emissary to Washington to ask this favor, and the granting of it was approved by President Coolidge on the recommendation of Secretary of State Hughes, though the amounts to be sold will be far less than Obregon requested.

Opposition to the transaction has promptly appeared in both house and senate and is not confined to the Democrats, though the opponents of the administration perhaps are loudest in their denunciation. Representative Fairchild of New York, Republican, jumped to the front with a joint resolution to write into the permanent law of the country the prohibition of the sale of arms or ammunition to any foreign government, which was the policy of the late President Harding.

"The sale to the Obregon government is astounding," said Mr. Fairchild. "I am surprised it should ever be thought of. There is no essential difference between furnishing firearms and furnishing men to fire the arms. This act constitutes just as much interference and amounts to just as much slaughter."

Senators Norris, King and others were only a little less outspoken in their opposition to the sale, and Senator Hiram Johnson in his Cleveland speech Thursday, opening his Ohio campaign, did not neglect to include the episode in his indictment of the administration. The Democrats have evolved the theory it is a political move, pointing out that the diplomatic peace with Mexico is to be used in the coming election as one of the great Coolidge accomplishments. If a revolution upsets the government that has just been recognized, that recognition could hardly be counted as an administration asset.

It is understood Secretary Hughes takes the stand that political difficulties in Mexico, Central America and South America should be settled by the ballot rather than by the bullet; that this government should at no time encourage revolutionary movements that seek the overthrow of regularly constituted governments, and should not reject appeals for aid similar to the one made by the Obregon government.

There has not yet been anything like a decisive battle between the federal and revolutionary forces in Mexico, but both sides are exceedingly active. The former, according to dispatches from Mexico City, are now advancing on Vera Cruz from the south, west and north. The rebels have defeated the army of General Cardenas in Jalisco, that commander being wounded and captured and General Navarro being killed. Cardenas was lured into a trap and the resulting fight was bloody and desperate. This was the most serious reverse the Obregon forces have sustained and opened for the insurgents communication between Guadalupe and the Pacific ports. The rebels announced Thursday that they were beginning an advance on Puebla and Mexico City from Vera Cruz.

said to be ready to seize the rich coal region about Pernik which Serbia covets. Bulgaria wants an outlet to the Aegean across Greek Thrace, and Serbia wishes to gain possession of Saloniki to make up for the loss of Fiume to Italy. In order to save that port it may be that Greece will feel compelled to support the Belgrade ultimatum to Bulgaria.

In Greece the stage is set for the establishment of a new form of government. On Wednesday, after Colonel Plastiras, chief of the revolution, had delivered to the national assembly a vigorous justification of his actions and retired to private life, the cabinet resigned and all powers were handed over to the assembly. Next day M. Venizelos arrived to assist in settling the country's affairs, and was given a tremendous ovation. As to whether Greece shall be a republic or a monarchy, Venizelos has said he favored a plebiscite but his republican supporters and most of the army officers insist this shall be determined by the assembly. British influence, which is strong in Greece, is supporting the royalists and the Bank of England has just refused to float a Greek loan mainly because of opposition to a republic.

THERE is no longer any doubt that the big French dirigible Dixmude was lost in the Mediterranean during a storm, for the body of her commander and fragments of wreckage have been picked up by fishermen. The disaster has caused much of a political scandal in Paris, the air ministry being bitterly attacked.

In this connection it is worthy of note that Captain McCrary, commander of the American dirigible Shenandoah, is outspoken in his opposition to the plan to use that airship in arctic exploration next summer. He believes it to be unsuited in construction, equipment and cruising radius for such a trip as has been planned. The builders of the Shenandoah do not agree with McCrary, but they advocate the use of hydrogen to obtain greater buoyancy and advise making a direct dash from Letchworth to the polar region instead of the long detour by way of southern California.

CONGRESS has resumed work after the holidays and the house ways and means committee is again struggling with the treasury tax reduction bill. After this has been disposed of, which may be about January 15, the committee will take up the soldiers' bonus measure. Chairman Green believes no part of the revenue measure should be reported until after action is taken on the bonus bill. The Democrats have not yet decided on their program in relation to the revenue bill, but the farm bloc through Representative Dickinson of Iowa has offered a compromise, agreeing to accept a cut in surtax rates from the present maximum of 50 per cent to a maximum somewhere between 37 and 42 per cent. He thinks nearly all the Republicans in the lower house except the La Follette radicals would support such a reduction and that many Democrats also would favor it.

REPRESENTATIVE UPshaw has made up his mind that liquor drinking by congressmen and high government officials must stop and that there must be no more leakage of booze from the stores of foreign diplomats into bootleg channels. Consequently he has embodied these ideas in a resolution and introduced it in the house, following with a speech in its support. He thinks the state department should "respectfully request that all foreign governments discontinue sending to this country diplomatic and consular representatives who exert a demoralizing influence upon our official and social life by dispensing from their residences and offices intoxicating liquors prohibited by our laws to American citizens." He also suggests that all federal appointees be required to make a pledge of total abstinence and that all intoxicated congressmen should be ousted.

NOW Leonard Wood, Jr., son of Gen. Leonard Wood, and his associates in four oil companies are under fire because it is said many ex-service men lost money by investing in the stock of the concern. The federal government is inquiring into the matter, and it also may be aired in congress when Congressman Frear's demand for the investigation of the administration of General Wood in the Philippines comes up. It is likely the latter inquiry will be enlarged to include the actions of both of the general's sons.

SECRETARY OF LABOR DAVIS has transmitted to the senate and house immigration committees a draft of a new immigration bill providing for extension of the quota restriction to all countries in the western hemisphere, and for various modifications of the present entry requirements. The Italian government has made representations against a proposed provision that would restrict each nation's quota of immigrants to 2 per cent of the number of its native born citizens in this country in 1890. This stipulation Italy describes as an unjustified discrimination to the detriment of a friendly nation.

ON THE eve of the assembling of the new parliament the British do not know just what to do in the matter of a new government. King George has demanded that the Labor party be given its chance, notwithstanding the declaration by its leader, Ramsay MacDonald, that the monarch's right to dissolve parliaments should be curbed. But the prospect of a Labor or Socialist government is having a bad effect on the money market and the pound sterling has had a decided decline. Consequently there spring up last week a strong demand for some sort of a fusion of the Liberals and Tories to keep the Laborites out of office, and as it seems impossible to find any other Conservative leader willing to take the job, it may be that Baldwin will be induced to hang on to the premiership with the promise of Liberal support, though he is represented as eager to resign. In the Labor party there is growing friction between the intellectuals, who include its leaders in parliament, and the trades unionists, who assert they have done most of the work of building up the party and therefore are entitled to most of the offices if the party takes over the government.

PREMIER YAMAMOTO of Japan and his cabinet resigned following the attempt on the life of the prince regent, and Viscount Kiego Kiyoura, president of the privy council, was asked to form a new government. He announced two days later that he was unable to form a ministry as he could not get the support of any political party in the diet.

FRANCE and Belgium have sent to Berlin identical replies to the latest German note, and the tone is quite conciliatory. The German government being assured that the two countries are willing to co-operate with the Germans in establishing a system of administration in the Ruhr and the Rhineland. The armies of occupation already have been greatly reduced, and only sufficient soldiers will be left in the Ruhr to preserve the customs boundary for the application of taxes on exports for the reparations account. The chimneys of the Ruhr are smoking again, for the German and French industrial magnates have entered into agreements independent of their governments and are exchanging coke and iron ore.

Henry M. Robinson, the Los Angeles banker who is the third American representative on the reparations commission, committees of experts, conferred with Secretary Hughes and the President in Washington and is now on his way to Europe.

E. W. CLARKE, "Imperial giant," has issued a call for a national congress of the Ku Klux Klan in Atlanta, February 26. He asks the klansmen "to gather together and prayerfully consider methods to eliminate existing evils, or else to follow the example of the founder of the original Ku Klux Klan, and have the courage and manhood to sever ways and means for the immediate disbandment of the organization."

DESPITE the protest of Secretary Hughes, the Turkish government insists that full customs duties must be paid on the vast quantities of food, clothing and medical supplies that Americans have contributed free for the destitute in Turkey. Consequently the Near East Relief has withdrawn entirely from Turkey.

The Economical Quality Car

Chevrolet prices are not the lowest on the market, yet Chevrolet economical transportation averages lowest in cost. This average cost considers the purchase price, interest on investment, depreciation and all operating and maintenance costs.

A detailed comparison with any other car in the low priced field will convince you that Chevrolet is the best buy because of its superior quality and because the purchase price includes full equipment.

More than a million Chevrolets are now in use. Twelve huge plants are now building them at the rate of twenty-five hundred per working day. Nearly one-half million Chevrolets were bought in 1923—far exceeding in number the sales of any other quality car.

Rosicrucians Secret

Order of 14th Century

Rosicrucians were a secret society alleged to have been founded in the latter part of the Fourteenth century by Christian Rosenkreutz, a German mystic, who dwelt for a time in India and Egypt, where he had a profound knowledge of the occult arts.

Rosicrucians, like the alchemists, pretended to transmute metals, to prolong life and to possess knowledge that was occurring in distant times. They first became known to the world early in the Seventeenth century, through the publication of documents said to have been written by them; but according to many critics, their existence was entirely doubtful.

Rosicrucians were also called brothers of the Holy Cross, from the notion that the name is derived from "crux" (cross), and "rosa" (rose). However, says that the word "crucian" comes from "crux" (the cross) and "rosian" (rose). "Dew was condensation by the ancient chemists as the powerful solvent of gold, and in alchemy is the synonym of because any figure of the cross has the letters L X V ('light')."

Diameter of Universe Is 10,000 Milky Ways

The diameter of the universe is the length of 10,000 milky ways. And this milky way yardstick is 30,000 times the distance that light, traveling 186,000 miles per second, covers in one year. Light comes from the sun to the earth in about eight minutes.

This is the conclusion of Prof. Archibald Henderson of the University of North Carolina, given in a communication in Science, the official organ of the American Association for the Advancement of Science. He assumed that space and the universe are constructed according to Einstein's general relativity theory.

"It would take a ray of light, traveling at the rate of 186,000 miles per second, 1,000 million years to go around the universe," Professor Henderson says. "To go around the universe it would take the fastest airplane three quadrillion years; the fastest automobile five and a half quadrillion years, and an express train, traveling at the rate of sixty miles an hour, eleven quadrillion years."

Plant Industry Shows Progress

Fight on Diseases Made by Selection of Highly Resistant Strains.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The year's work of the bureau of plant industry described in the report recently made to the secretary of agriculture shows much progress in solving the problems of plant production, the control of diseases, the breeding of improved varieties, the introduction of promising seeds and plants from foreign countries and the development of methods for the utilization of perishable crops, such as fruits and vegetables.

Much of the work done is of the kind which brings its greatest returns after there has been time for the commercial development of discoveries.

In combating plant diseases a great deal of progress has been made through obtaining highly resistant or immune strains by trial and selection. In this way strains of wheat have been secured which promise to be valuable in sections where bunt has damaged this crop. Varieties resistant to flag smut are being developed, and this disease is no longer considered the menace it was thought to be a few years ago.

Attempts are being made to grow strains resistant to both flag smut and rosette. In the study of such a disease which damages both wheat and corn, it has been discovered that wheat seedlings are more resistant when grown at comparatively low soil temperatures and that corn seedlings are more resistant to it when the soil is warm. Barberry eradication was carried on extensively in co-operation with a number of states for the control of black stem rust, and up to the present time nearly 6,000,000 bushes have been eradicated. Chemicals are being used successfully to destroy the bushes in places where digging is not practicable.

New Crops Developed.

New varieties of oats have been secured in co-operation with state experiment stations and a number of them are being distributed. The root and stalk rot of corn have been found to require special soil management for their control; in some cases proper fertilization and amendments are all that is required, while to control the parasite types crop rotation is needed in addition. Some new forage crops are being developed and improved varieties of common crops have been developed, and new methods are being tried for handling them. New and rare field seeds are being brought into the country, tried out, increased and distributed to growers.

Lack of space in a brief article puts a limit on the details which can be given on the various lines of work carried on with the many important crops. Valuable results have been obtained in the treatment of "tobacco scab" soils and means have been found for the prevention of a condition known as "sand drown" by the use of magnesia. Various phases of cotton production have received attention, including cultural methods and special varieties to help in the control of the boll weevil. Trials of cotton classing in the field and breeding to maintain the purity of Egyptian cotton grown in the Southwest.

Extensive work has been done with fruits and nuts, studies have been made of the possibilities of growing binder twine fiber in Porto Rico, the Virgin Islands and the Philippines. The improvement of citrus fruits is now being greatly increased through the use of bud selection from trees with performance records, a method developed by the department, and means have been found for the control of stem-end rot of citrus fruits. Through work being carried on in the Southwest the infant date industry is being greatly stimulated, and there is a new interest in the production of figs. The fruit and nut industries are being helped not only through the introduction and development of better varieties and methods of growing, but also through studies of handling and shipping the products. It was shown that berries produced in the Northwest can be shipped greater distances successfully if handled more carefully and precooled. A series of tests have shown that nuts of various kinds can be kept from two to three years if held at a temperature as low as 32 degrees.

Plant Diseases Combated.

The principal vegetables reported on were potatoes, sweet potatoes and peas. Improvements have been obtained through the selection of seed stocks, the development of improved varieties and in the control of diseases. In the field of forest trees work has been carried on with white pine blister rust, which is now spreading in the Northwest, and in the East with chestnut blight. The Chinese chestnut has been found quite resistant to the disease. In addition to these two important trees which are menaced, it is reported that another valuable tree, the Douglas fir, is in danger of canker, which occurs on these trees in Scotland and which already may be in this country.

Among the many other problems given attention in the report are wood conservation, the effects of length of day on plant responses, soil bacteriology, the prevention of alkali injury on irrigated lands, sources of crude rubber, explorations in many parts of the world for new plants and seeds. Among the promising new fruits given special mention are Barouli olives, Fuyu persimmons and several new avocados. Another new plant is Menzies citrals, of the mint family.

Cloth Coverings Good Against Mild Frosts

Heat Generated During Day Is Conducted to Surface.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Coverings of rather heavy cloth laid directly over garden truck or other low-growing plants are effective in protecting against moderate frosts, the United States Department of Agriculture reports. The heat from the ground and the plants in thus conserved, and the losses of heat by radiation from the plant to the sky are cut off; moreover, the air movement is so slight near the ground that there is little tendency for the cold outside air to be forced under or through the covering.

The temperature of the surface of the cloth exposed to the sky is lowered by radiation and may fall to a low point, but as both the cloth itself and the air underneath it are very poor conductors of heat, the temperature of the covered plants falls much more slowly. The heat that has penetrated a few inches into the ground during the day is slowly conducted to the surface during the night and aids in keeping the temperature under the cover above the freezing point.

It is evident, therefore, that coverings of this kind should be placed early in the evening when a frost is expected, before much of the heat accumulated in the soil during the day has been lost. Tin cans or other metal coverings should not be used to protect plants from frost. Metals are good conductors of heat and are also good radiators unless very highly polished. Therefore the temperature is likely to fall more as low under a covering of this kind as in the outside air.

Vitamins Essential for Laying Hens in Winter

That green feeds are of great importance in the rations for laying hens is shown by the results of an experiment conducted by the University of Idaho poultry farm.

A lack of vitamin fat-soluble A in the ration was found to cause disease resembling roup. The eyes became swollen, the throats became full of small yellow patches, and post-mortem examinations showed a deposit of white material resembling powder on the liver and kidneys. Ten birds out of twenty-five died in one pen from this trouble. In an adjoining pen receiving cod liver oil, none died from this disease. Cod liver oil is an excellent source of vitamin A. However, cod liver oil cannot be recommended as poultry feed. It is necessary to furnish the birds feed containing this important vitamin, if maximum results are to be obtained. Alfalfa, peameal, lettuce, cabbage and spinach are all high in this vitamin. Besides, chard, dandelion greens, carrots and clover cuttings are good green feeds for maintaining the health of the flock during the winter months.

Essential Winter Feeds for Average Hen Flock

Too many poultrymen rely almost wholly on grain feeds during the winter. Green food, beef scraps, milk by-products and mineral matter are too often omitted altogether or fed too infrequently and sparingly. Oyster shell, prepared grit and charcoal, ready for the fowls at all times, provide mineral matter. Cabbage, beets, mangles and sprouted oats make excellent green foods; hung an inch higher than the head compels needed winter exercise. Any fresh vegetables, even raw potatoes, are a whole lot better than nothing of the kind at all.

For animal food, beef scraps serve the purpose splendidly. Milk by-products, when low priced, are used with excellent results and probably with greater returns, comparatively, than when fed to farm animals.

Vigorous Gobbler Will Care for Fifteen Hens

If good gobblers are scarce there is no reason why two neighbors cannot keep their turkey hens on the same farm until such time as they have been served by the gobbler. One service from the gobbler is sufficient to fertilize all the eggs that will be laid at a succeeding egg-laying period. However, when the turkey hens quit laying another service will be necessary before the subsequent eggs of the second laying period are fertile.

A vigorous gobbler will only serve about fifteen hens.

It would be somewhat less troublesome to transfer the turkey tom rather than the turkey hens. After one neighbor is positive that the gobbler has covered all of the hens on his farm the tom could be moved over to the other neighbor's farm.

Most Effective Ration to Increase Egg Yield

The most effective ration for feeding hens and pullets as found at the Ohio experiment station consists of mash, ground corn 6 parts, bran 3 parts, meat-scrap 6 parts, by weight. In addition a scratch ration of shelled or cracked corn is fed so that the fowls will consume twice as much of the grain as mash.

This ration decreased the cost of feed per dozen eggs more than 20 percent as compared with other rations and increased the production per pullet more than 50 percent. The tests were made to determine the amount of meat-scrap laying rations should contain.

THAT LITTLE COLD MAY START A BIG TROUBLE

Stop It Now With Cheney's Expecto-rant and Save Needless Suffering.

That little cold you took yesterday may seem a small matter to you now; but if you don't do something to check it and get it out of your system there's no telling how it will end. Many a severe, if not fatal, case of pneumonia or tuberculosis began in just the same way.

How foolish then to take any sort of risk by neglecting that cold till it fastens itself on your vitals, and becomes so deep-seated that nothing but the most severe treatment will serve to get you back to health.

You can stop it now with Cheney's Expecto-rant. A dose every few hours will knock it right out and end the trouble almost before it has begun. It expels the germs from your system and you feel fresher and stronger and better.

Three generations of people have been brought up on Cheney's Expecto-rant and have an abiding faith in its efficiency because they know what it will do.

Cheney's Expecto-rant expels the cold by reaching and correcting the cause. It is equally effective for coughs, bronchitis, croup, whooping cough, and all other affections of the throat and lungs.

THE CITY COURT LAST SATURDAY

Mayor Pro tem J. B. Atkinson had quite a crowded court day last Saturday. Something like fifteen cases were called, the defendants being charged with minor violations of the city code in regard to fireworks and pleas of guilty and light fines settled these all up.

The cases attracting most attention was the City vs. W. T. Hand and the City vs. Judge L. H. Reynolds charged with an affray. The court adjourned from the city court room to the court house for this case as the attendance was so large they could not be accommodated in the smaller quarters of the city.

After the submitting of a great deal of testimony by the attorney for Judge Reynolds and the sifting out of all days.

the facts, the court discharged both defendants in the case.

Mayor Pro tem Atkinson has been having quite a strenuous time in the Mayor's Court during the illness of His Honor, Dr. Gragg, having caught the holiday court business all the way through. However, he does not seem to mind it and his administration is excellent.

Nothing like having an able substitute when the regular force is not on hand.

LEGAL NOTICES

THE STATE OF ALABAMA, Chilton County.

Mary J. Thomas, et al., Complainants vs. George Thomas, et al., Defendants.
Circuit Court in Equity.

In this cause it is made to appear to the Register by the affidavit of Victor J. Heard that the cross-respondents, Lulla Thomas, Addie Clackley and Mrs. R. G. Martin are non-residents and that Lulla Thomas and Addie Clackley's addresses are Atlanta, Georgia, that Mrs. R. G. Martin's residence and Post Office address is Temple, Texas, R. F. D. No. 1 and that their residences and addresses are otherwise unknown and further information in regard to same cannot be ascertained after reasonable effort: That Becky Dennis, who was last heard of in Winston County, Alabama about three years ago, and that her place of residence and Post Office address is unknown or if she be dead the names, residences and Post Office addresses of her heirs are unknown and that her address or her heirs addresses cannot be ascertained after reasonable effort: That Margaret Dennis who was last heard of in Marion County over forty years ago, place of residence and Post Office address is unknown, and if she be dead the Post Office address, or residences or names of the heirs of the said Margaret Dennis are unknown and that neither her address or the names and addresses of her heirs can be ascertained after reasonable effort: That the heirs of Jim Thomas, deceased, son of J. L. Thomas, deceased are unknown, that their names, residences and Post Office addresses are unknown and that neither their names or addresses or residences can be ascertained after reasonable effort: And further that in the belief of said affiant all of said cross-respondents are over the age of 21 years:

It is, therefore, ordered by the Register that publication be made in the Chilton County News, a newspaper published in the County of Chilton, once a week for four consecutive weeks, requiring that the said Lulla Thomas, Addie Clackley, Mrs. R. G. Martin, Becky Dennis or her heirs, Margaret Dennis or her heirs, and the heir of Jim Thomas who was a son of J. L. Thomas, deceased, to plead answer, or demur to the bill of complaint in this cause by the 14th day of January, 1924, or, in thirty days thereafter, a decree pro confesso may be taken against them.

Done at office in Clanton, Alabama, this 14th day of December, 1923.

Editor of The News:

Your editorial headed "Forgive Them, They Know Not What They Did" is timely and to the point. As a rule, the democrats of Alabama will claim the right to vote as they see fit. Allow me to suggest that you refrain from prognostications in reference to our candidate for president until you hear a whisper.

We had some most charming visitors at the Home during the holidays. Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Scruggs of Lloyd, Florida, together with three sons, Frank, John and Jack and Susie, their only daughter, motored through the country to spend a few days with Dr. Fowler and his family. Mrs. Scruggs is the sister of Mrs. Fowler.

The trip, covering three hundred miles, was made in fifteen hours without trouble of any sort until they came in touch with Chilton county roads, when within a mile of the Home they ran into the mud near the Baptist church and remained there until a pair of stout mules pulled the car from its resting place.

Their experience caused me to think of that lovely (?) mountain road leading to Knight's ferry on the Coosa River.

In addition to the Scruggs family, Miss Trudie Fowler, who is the teacher of Latin in the College at Quincy, Florida, came over to spend Christmas with her parents, Dr. and Mrs. Fowler. She is a lovely, and accomplished young woman and we are all glad when she comes.

On the 3rd Mr. J. D. Morgan and Mrs. Sallie Dennis were married at the Home, the writer officiating.

On the same day Mr. J. E. Mann, a former inmate of the Home, died at his residence near Mountain and was buried at Marbury.

While not unexpected, the death of Mr. A. T. Rudder has cast a gloom over the people of the entire county. No finer man than he has graced the walks of life. As a business man he made friends of all whom he came in contact. His influence in the cause of education was great and the success attained by the Marbury High School was, in a measure, due to his loyalty. As a member of his church he was efficient and helpful. His place will be hard to fill. While we mourn his departure with joy that he has gone to be with Christ. Peace to his ashes.

BIRMINGHAM'S SHARE

Two police officers, of Birmingham, broke in the house of a lone lady the other night and frightfully abused her until she fainted. She is a widow and a mother and, after ransacking her home, left her helpless. The lady in question is a prominent prohibitionist and has been for years.

The officers claim they were off by a man they did not know there was whiskey in the house.

That is a very lame excuse for first place, and even if it were there is no excuse for them to be brutal in their authority, and abuse and neglect this lady.

Birmingham is equally guilty of shameful offense until they do these things and go on favoring brutal law enforcement instead of honest bulldozing of law.

New Year Greeting

The good old year of 1923 has become now a memory of the past. With all of its joys and sorrows it is buried and, as the days go by, it will become merely a misty dream.

We have all had to face some trials and sorrows, but in the main, it was a kind and gracious year to us all. In bidding it good bye, I wish to express my sincere thanks to the many friends and customers who have loyally stood by me with their friendship and patronage and have enabled me to wind up the old year with a feeling of satisfaction with my success and with a steadfast hope for the future.

I wish for you one and all, the successful culmination of your brightest hopes for the New Year. May good health, happiness and prosperity attend you through the days to come. May 1924 have for all of us happy surprises and untold blessings.

I am deeply grateful to every one who has favored me with their patronage during the year just gone and most respectfully ask that you will continue to give me the opportunity to deserve your confidence and trade.

Your friend,

Will He Withdraw His Endorsement?

Congress is now in session.

Is it the intention of certain members to hamper the railroads by the enactment of further restrictive legislation—especially aimed to decrease the revenues of the railroads—or will they be disposed to grant the railroads a legislative holiday?

The Railroads have accepted the provisions of the present Transportation Act; and although they have not been able to earn the rate of return permitted therein—they are spending more than $1,000,000,000 for the improvements called for by increased traffic.

Nearly all of this billion dollars is borrowed money—borrowed in good faith, with the help of Uncle Sam's endorsement, in the form of the assurance that the Railroads would be allowed to earn a fair return, based on the value of their property; and be able to pay for needed improvements.

Further legislative curtailment of railroad revenues at this time, would result in frightening off private investors upon whom the railroads must depend for new capital; this would serve to stop the construction of needed improvements; the efficiency of the railroads would be destroyed and there would come inevitably a breakdown and bankruptcy of the transportation system; and finally Government ownership with its attendant evils.

Although the L. & N. Railroad has not been able to earn the "fair return" permitted by the Transportation Act, it has, within the past year, contracted to spend for new equipment, second tracks, bridges, etc., more than $35,000,000—thus acknowledging its obligations to the public and manifesting the purpose of the management to fulfill them.

The L. & N. joins the other Roads in asking that they be let alone; that they be not further hampered, by restrictive legislation, in their efforts to keep pace with and to assist in the Nation's needs.

CLANTON, ALABAMA, JANUARY 17, 1924.

CLANTON MAN MAY LET FEDERAL PLUM

Reynolds Mentioned For U. S.
Responsibility; Republicans Active.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12 Special—The rounds that President-elect Coolidge will during the coming week to the Senate the nomination of Grady Reynolds, of Clanton, to be United States attorney for the middle district of Alabama. Persons supposed to be in the running for the appointment are not disposed to discuss the matter, and therefore it is a difficult to get any definite or positive information on the subject.

Alabama Republican leaders are with the Street faction have been months been doing everything to bring about action on the part of the party workers, or further federal patronage. Administration officials are disposed to distribute in their state; and Coolidge is a candidate for the office his secretary, Mr. Sleep, is with being anxious to have the plums passed around as responsible to the share of the delegates in South.

The reason the knowing ones are that during the coming two there is going to be something down in that section so far as in postmaster ships are concerned. A report is in circulation that the Southern Republican local administration to high officials, administration at Washington many Democrats are permitted in charge of postoffices on the expiration of their terms.

thing they are said to be coming is that in the Southern large number of Democrats are retained as postmasters under Republican administrations because that if Republicans were to take the successors Southern Democratic Senators would hold prevent the confirmations. High postmasters of the presidency are now supposed to be as a result of civil service, and under the merits the Republican referees, or most of the Southern states energetic enough to work the place as a general rule to have for woman selected they would be appointed.

The only cases that are held by finally rejected by the Senate charges of a serious nature against postmasters by of the offices. Callers upon President Coolidge was Rev. W. J. Hunt, of Birmingham, president of the United Association of Alabama, of The Colored Laborer, an News.

ANTI-LYNCHING BILL ORDERED REPORTED

Favorable report of the Dyer anti-lynching bill, killed in the last Congress by a democratic filibuster, was ordered today by the House judiciary committee.

The bill, which is essentially the same as the measure which was passed by the House in the last Congress but failed of action in the Senate, authorizes the federal government to take a hand in the punishment of persons guilty of lynching.

Chairman Graham was instructed to arrange for early consideration by the House of the bill, which is sponsored by Representative Dyer, republican, Missouri.

Congressman Jeffers Comments

Mr. W. B. Corley, Chilton County News, Clanton, Ala.

Dear Mr. Corley:

Attached you will find a little story taken from the Washington Star of January 10th which carries the information that the Judiciary Committee of the House of Representatives will again report the so-called Dyer Anti-Lynching Bill to the House of Representatives and will recommend favorable consideration on that bill.

You know what this proposed legislation is, I need not call your attention especially to the fact that in case of any lynching it would provide that our State or county or municipal officials might be charged with negligence, subject to fines up to $5,000 and imprisonment up to five years.

Now we (in Alabama, for instance) have our own State laws covering any negligence of which any of our officials might be guilty in any case of this kind. And our State can and will take care of the handling of this question. Our supreme court in Alabama has unhesitatingly removed sheriffs where negligence could be traced to them in such cases.

Why, then, should the Republican party be so doggedly insistent upon taking this unwarranted slap at the efficiency and the loyalty of every local sheriff, of every deputy sheriff, of every local judge on the bench, of our state supreme court, and of every good citizen whose name is in the jury box of his good county. Would our good American sheriffs and deputies and judges and mayors and citizens in our States and countries accept that sort of an insult in good grace?

Then please note that the attached article points out that counties in which lynchings occur would be liable under the bill for the payment of a forfeit of $10,000 which would be turned over to the family of any person put to death.

This is an unwarranted disciplinary feature aimed at all the citizens of any county in which a lynching might occur; an arbitrary proposal to paste a $10,000 disciplinary fine against their county treasuries. Would innocent citizens and tax payers accept such a disciplinary measure in good grace? Of course they would not.

This proposed bill appears to me to be foolish and childish; it reflects petulance; and I believe that in passing this bill upon us the Republican party is simply handing out a sop to appease the demand made upon them by certain negro societies and the so-called big negroes in certain sections of the North

HOW ABOUT YOUR SPRING FERTILIZER?

This time last year every breeze was odorous with the fumes of guano. Up to this writing not a whiff of the well known concoction has reached our nostrils.

What does it mean? Are the farmers growing wary of this high priced and loud scented adjunct to modern farming? It really looks that way, but we dare say the perfumed stream will begin to flow in soon.

Some weeks ago a few cars of nitrate of soda arrived and were hauled out to the farms, but even that movement has ceased now.

We have talked to several farmers on the subject but they don't seem to be much interested in the situation as yet. In fact, they have not, as a rule, made up their minds in regard to how they will pitch their crops, or what percent they will plant in cotton this year.

On the other hand, an expression from a fertilizer salesman here, seemed to indicate that the big factories have not been able, as yet, to agree on a price for this year.

There is no excuse for the price to be advanced, for neither labor nor the cost of the raw material is as expensive now as it was twelve months ago. If the price is advanced it is to be hoped that the farmers will have the nerve to let the stuff alone for one season.

THURSDAY'S STORM

Among the other disagreeable weather stunts that January has put over on us so far, was the turning loose of a whole flock of little cyclones in different parts of the state last Thursday.

One of these little twisters seems to have passed on both sides of us that day.

Near Goodwater, on the east, the storm took on cyclonic proportions and did several thousand dollars worth of damage besides killing one man and severely wounding a mother and two children.

On the west another disturbance of dangerous intensity passed, blowing down barns and outhouses and a great quantity of timber at White Pond. In Autauga county, one man was killed and three head of stock.

With the good fortune that has followed us so long in that line, Clanton escaped with only a high wind and heavy rain, but, remember, we "knocked on wood" when we wrote that.

The damage from the storm in this immediate vicinity was slight, a fact for which we are deeply grateful.

DOWN ON THE FARM

Thursday morning just as the press began to revolve printing the News, Mr. Pate Parrish, he who is famous as the Watkins Medicine man and also as a democrat dyed in the wool, gave us a nice platter of sure enough old time sausage. Yum, Yum, language can't touch the subject. You know how it is.

The editor and family all thank Mr. Parrish and extend to him our best wishes.

Mr. J. H. Stange, of Verbena R. F. D. was in Clanton last Saturday on business.

who are alleged to be leaders of their race but who are, in my opinion, really false leaders of their people so far as this measure is concerned.

This sort of thing will make the question all the more difficult. It could not possibly help any situation. It is a sop and a sham which the Republicans want to hand out to the negroes; it is a farcical, futile, impossible thing—it will not do.

The South's opposition to this Dyer bill is not based on sympathy for mob violence, but it is based mainly, I believe, upon the fact that it is a childish, disciplinary measure that is unwarranted; that is unjust, and possibly illegal, in its arbitrary provision; that it is a wickedly misleading piece of camouflage; and that it is just a farcical sop and a sham that would do no real good but would be more likely to result in untold harm.

Alabama will manage all right without such a law and every other state in the Union can manage her own matters along these lines without this disciplinary Federal law being necessary.

Yours very truly,
LAMAR JEFFERS, M. C.

ANOTHER SWEET SINGER IN CLANTON

Those who were so fortunate as to be present at the 11 o'clock service at the Baptist church last Sunday had the opportunity of listening to, what we consider, an exquisite musical treat. Miss Madalyn Orr rendered a solo, "Teach Me to Pray" written by George Graff, Jr., and the music by Jessie Mae Jewett, that was sublimely beautiful.

Miss Madalyn possesses a superb voice, soft, though clear and harmonious, of which she has splendid and artistic control. We thank her for our part of this beautiful rendition and feel like we voice the sentiment of the entire congregation at the same time. It was a rare and beautiful treat.

MUSCLE SHOALS

The much talked of Muscle Shoals project has entered a new phase now.

A syndicate of seven power companies have put in a bid to lease the Muscle Shoals works complete, for a period of fifty years, paying therefor the sum of $100,000,000.

Their bid also proposes to furnish all power required for the manufacture of nitrates for fertilizer.

As Henry Ford has not amended his bid so as to conform to disposal of Gorges by the government, we do not know whether he will still be in the market for the Shoals.

It looks like everything would be favorable for Ford to land the project now, if he really wants it, but no one except, perhaps, Ford himself, knows whether or not he ever did have any real intentions of taking over that project.

It is to be hoped that Congress will make some kind of a deal this term that will insure the speedy and definite completion of that great idle unit of power.

A STORM VICTIM

The storm that swept over the western part of the county last Thursday afternoon passed out by White Pond, in Autauga county, where it blew down the barn of Mr. J. E. Hargett, killing him, two mules and one horse in the crash.

Mr. Hargett was 63 years of age and formerly came to this county from Indiana. He was killed about 4 p. m. Thursday and Undertaker Martin was called from here to bring a casket and came prepared to embalm the body. He did so, and the body was held until Monday of this week, to await the arrival of relatives from a distance.

Interment took place Monday at the White Pond cemetery.

JUST AS WE EXPECTED

The following clipping from the Montgomery Advertiser discloses a condition that is almost sure to prevail when people are given an opportunity to "organize," or commercialize the finer and purer impulses of the human heart. The temptation is too great. It is awful to think that the poor of Montgomery were deprived of 75 cents in every dollar contributed by the good people there to care for them.

Charging that 75 per cent of the total receipts of the Associated Charities during the last four months of 1923 were spent for overhead and salaries, and that the benevolent acts of the organization during that time would not justify such expenditures, John D. Cody former officer of the association, precipitated a heated discussion among the members at the annual meeting of the association Monday evening at the Chamber of Commerce. The charges were emphatically denied by Charlie Moulthrop, vice-president, who presided over the meeting.

MR. JOHN L. GORE GETS APPOINTMENT

Ex-Sheriff John Gore has been appointed a Federal law enforcement officer on the Alabama service.

He left last Sunday evening for the headquarters at Birmingham where he will remain a few days and from there it is probable, that he will be assigned to duty first over at Girard, the place made famous by bootlegging activities for the past few years.

Mr. Gore has several years experience in the line of law enforcement and should make the department an efficient man.

MRS. RETHERFORD DIED SATURDAY

Mrs. Nancy Ann Retherford, wife of the late Rev. I. O. Retherford, died at the local hospital last Saturday and was buried the following afternoon at Mountain Springs cemetery.

She was a half sister to Mr. W. I. Mullins of our city and the funeral took place from her residence at 2 p. m. Sunday. Services were held at the house, Dr. C. C. Wilkerson, assisted by Dr. S. J. Ezell, officiating.

The deceased had more than 70 years of life. She was a devoted Christian, and out her three score years and ten, she was, near the seventy-seven mile post on life's highway when death called for her and gave her passage to that "city not built with hands, eternal in the skies."

Mrs. Retherford professed conversion at the early age of 9 years and from that time to the hour of her death, she exemplified the true Christian's life to the last.

Her community has lost a bright guiding star from among its fixed constellation of devout Christians, and she will be sadly missed, as an illustration of a type of Christian fortitude and cheerful obedience to the Master that seem to be growing more rare as the years go by.

Her relations and friends have no cause to weep as those who have no hope, for she is only transplanted to a higher and holier sphere where His beckoning hands will still entreat you to follow.

The Chilton County News begs to extend to every sorrowing heart its need of true sympathy in this sad hour.

A CATAMOUNT, PROBABLY

Last week Mr. Napoleon Willis had a steel trap set for some kind of a pernicious wild night prowler of the swamps.

On going to the trap one day he found a very vicious and dangerous looking member of the cat family attached to the trap by one toe.

He secured assistance, some ropes and a strong box and managed to capture his catch alive and he still has it in confinement. It is 30 inches tall, of considerable length and breadth and a fighter to the very last hair in its tail.

It is too large and vicious for an ordinary wild cat and, from what we hear people say who have seen it, we are of the opinion that Mr. Willis has captured a real catamount, or mountain lion.

Mr. Willis caught what he believes to have been this same varmint some time ago, but it fought its way to liberty that time.

We do not know what he intends to do with it, but we expect he could make a good sale of it to some zoo, traveling show or menagerie. From all accounts of it, it would doubtless be an interesting addition to almost any wild animal exhibit.

TREACE-WELLS

GREAT DEAL OF MOVING GOING ON

For the past thirty days there has been more moving going on than we remember to have noticed before.

Hardly a mail comes in that does not bring us one or more orders to change the address of a paper.

Most any time of day you can see truck loads and wagon loads of people changing their location.

The end of the rainbow is always just ahead and fortune is supposed to beckon just around the corner.

On the other hand, an old truism says, that "three moves are equal to a fire." Also we are told that the rolling stone gathers no moss.

Still, moving goes on and people are always looking for something better.

NEW LUNCH, COFFEE AND TEA ROOM

I wish to say to my friends and the public at large that I am trying to make a living for myself and family, since the death of my husband, by conducting a coffee, tea, chocolate and lunch room at the stand recently vacated by Mr. B. L. Jones.

I need your patronage if I succeed in this effort to make a living and I solicit your trade on these grounds, promising to give you the very best service that close personal attention to every detail of the work will accomplish.

I thank you all,
MRS. CLAUD L. BRANCH.

FAIR WARNING

In conversation with Mayor Cragg and several of the other town officials we are pleased to find them all expressing a firm determination for more rigid city law enforcement for the New Year.

They are not intending to make anything drastic but they do intend to make law violators realize that a city government is in actual operation in Clanton.

The idea of bulldozing, browbeating and getting by with violations of the city code had better be put aside with other 1923 mistakes.

The Town Council have the absolute right to make laws and the Mayor has unquestionable authority to enforce them and the sooner you can eliminate the idea from your head that the city court is sort of a joke the better it will be for your pocket book. "Word to the wise" etc.

ALABAMA NEWS HAPPENINGS

A Resume of the More Important Events of Interest Condensed To An Epitomized Form.

Mandamus proceedings were filed in the circuit court of Lee county by C. G. Carmack, a resident of Russell county, against C. B. Gullatt, mayor of Phenix City, and J. W. Anthony, W. A. Barnes, J. W. Harris, E. L. White and W. M. Bullard as aldermen of Phenix City, alleging that the mayor and aldermen had failed or refused to designate wards for the territory formerly embraced in Girard, and which, by the action of consolidation, became a part of Phenix City and to elect representatives or aldermen from that section of the city as required by law.

The damage to the citrus trees, principally satsuma trees, in Mobile and Baldwin counties, from the freeze, is not very heavy, according to experts. In fact, it is not believed that any of the old trees are hurt and that the young trees are only slightly hurt. Grapefruit trees suffered some damage from the freeze. The damage to cabbage will be very heavy. It is not known the exact figures of the damage to the truck gardens.

John Sparrow, 65 years of age, head of Sparrow Advertising agency and for years prominently connected with newspaper and advertising work in Birmingham, died at 10:05 o'clock Thursday night, Jan. 10, at his residence, 1524 Water street, from a fracture at the base of the skull, sustained when he either fell or was struck by an automobile at the American Trust & Savings bank corner during the wind and rain storm of Thursday afternoon.

The Brundidge Hog Sale association had a very successful sale. Hogs reaching the number of 439 were sold co-operatively. R. L. Metcalf, Hartford, made the purchase of the entire lot, paying $6.65 per hundred weight for top and the prices ranging down, according to grade. The price received by the farmers was only 35 cents under the Montgomery market. R. L. King, farm agent, was in charge of the sale.

On Friday, January 25, citizens from various sections of Lauderdale county will gather at the Florence Chamber of Commerce for a farm conference. Business men, farmers, bankers, newspaper men and the public at large, will be present at which time a program will be outlined for 1924. There will be present men who have had years of experience in the farm work at Auburn. The farm bureau will also be represented.

Burling Brown, negro, was killed, and Tom Garrison, another negro, seriously injured when a sewerage ditch in Montgomery caved in. Brown was buried by the dirt, while only Garrison's head was above ground after the cave-in. The ditch had been excavated to a depth of 12 feet and four negroes were continuing the excavation when about five feet of dirt fell upon them. Two escaped by running.

Elmore County has suffered heavily from the effects of the recent freeze. Many truck growers have their gardens blasted and all heretofore growing stuff are lying blackened and dead. Thousands of beautiful cabbage, some already beginning to head, are lying limp and flat. The continued warm weather during November and December caused vegetation to put on a fresh growth, and when the freeze struck this part of the state, everything was blighted.

Anniston knights of the K. K. K. have accepted an invitation from Rev. J. R. Talley, pastor of the Trinity Baptist church three miles below Oxford to attend the preaching services at that place on Sunday night, January 20. The Anniston klansmen will wear their robes during the services at this time.

It is predicted that Jasper, which has spent more than half a million dollars on hospitals and 200 new homes and business houses the past year, will spend $1,000,000 during the ensuing year for new homes and business houses.

A man's hand was dug up on the Northern Alabama railroad at Nauvoo by bridge builders, according to Chalmers Couch. Thorough investigation was made but no other part of the body was found.

The recent advance in prices seems to be an incentive to the farmers of Lowndes County to give their attention to the raising of live stock for market. Many pastures, which have almost been abandoned for the past few years, are being rebuilt with an added acreage and supplied with the best cattle and hogs.

Mrs. P. F. Snow, of Heflin, has in her possession a Masonic apron which was worn by her father when master of the Zebulon (Ga.) Lodge in 1869. The apron is of silk and the square and compass shows that this old relic has been carefully preserved. The apron, which must be more than 75 years old, Mrs. Snow claims, was sent to her by her mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Jones, of Leoma, Tenn.

Edward V. O'Connor, 53, editor and publisher of the Mobile Times-News, and a correspondent for a number of newspapers and widely known throughout the state, died shortly after 4 o'clock, Jan. 10. He had been ill for two weeks. Deceased was a native of Mobile and began his newspaper career as a newsboy and worked his way up.

With his wedding less than a month off and facing what he expected to be a hard fight to establish his profession in a community hitherto unentered, Charles L. Fisher, 26, chiropractor, was found hanged with a strip of bed linen in his room at the Birmingham Y. M. C. A. Death, according to Coroner Russum, was caused by strangulation, self-inflicted.

A large road roller and scraper built for Madison county by the Bucklow Springfield company, has been added to the county's road building equipment. It is expected that next spring and summer will see more repair and construction work on the roads than has been done in a long time because some of the roads have been almost ruined this winter.

Construction in the near future of a new addition to the Bessemer post office will be advocated by Senator Oscar Underwood and Congressman George Huddleston, according to postal officials and members of the Chamber of Commerce, who have been pushing a request for an additional building.

Alderman J. W. Harris was appointed mayor pro tem, Patrolman Ed McKenny and A. H. Collier were released from the department in order to reduce city expenses, and Mack Hinton was re-elected as jailor and E. L. Newsome as street overseer, at the first 1924 meeting of the Phenix city council.

Farmers of Butler county are thanking the weather man for the exceedingly cold weather that has just passed that section. They claim that the freeze pulverized the land to a great extent thereby increasing its fertility. The freeze also had good effect on the boll weevil destruction, as well as many other injurious insects.

Mobile is going after conventions in 1924 and to this end every civic club in the city has been asked to lend a hand in bringing conventions to this city, according to action taken by the convention committee, Mobile Chamber of Commerce, of which Capt. Leon Schwarz is chairman.

The Sumter County Board of Revenue has offered the position as farm demonstrator to Mr. Bonner, of Columbus. Marion County, Miss. Mr. Bonner was highly recommended to the board, being a graduate of the A. & M. College of Mississippi, and a practical farmer of several years experience.

Judge Henry A. Pearce, of the Dothan circuit, has again been assigned to preside at the trial of Robert J. Lancaster, former national guardsman, at Hamilton, on Jan. 21, according to announcement made by Chief Justice John C. Anderson of the Alabama Supreme Court.

Filling stations and gasoline dealers of Gadsden have started a movement for Sunday closing. They are asking that all places selling gasoline be closed from 10:30 o'clock to 1:30 o'clock on Sundays and it is reported that most of the oil companies are quite willing to change.

During the recent cold wave, according to reports from North Alabama, many sweet potatoes have been lost through freezing. It is estimated that in Walker county 10,000 bushels of potatoes were frozen. One farmer sold an entire truck load in Jasper for 60 cents per bushel.

The excess of escapes over recaptures of convicts from the Alabama penitentiary for 1923 was eight, according to figures from the office of the state board of administration. A total of 59 convicts escaped during the 12 months and there were 51 recaptured.

More than $7,800 was on deposit with the wardens of the various state prisons on January 1, 1924, representing the savings of convicts, according to figures compiled in the office of Roy L. Nolen, associate member of the board of administration.

Mrs. Ciroi Sperry Bourne, of Mobile, wife of former United States Senator Jonathan Bourne, of Oregon, and owner of one of the largest plantations in Alabama, has instituted suit for divorce on grounds of desertion. The couple were married here in 1918.

Violators of the law are on the decline says Sheriff T. H. Chambliss. There were only 13 arrests in Fayette county during December, 1923, and only one for violating the prohibition law.

In a letter addressed to the citizens of Fairfield through the Exchange club, the Southern Bell Telephone Co. promises to relieve the telephone situation there by April 1. The Exchange club had previously sent a committee to look into the trouble experienced in obtaining telephone service.

MAKE BAKING-POWDER BISCUIT WITH MILK

Government Recipe Gives Plan for Substituting Milk.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

In many recipes for hot breads and cake, sour milk or buttermilk and baking soda may be substituted for sweet milk or water and baking powder, or vice versa. To guard against an excess of soda, which causes a yellow color in the bread and a less agreeable flavor, use a scant one-half level teaspoonful of soda to every cupful of sour milk. The soda may be sifted with the other dry ingredients, as is recommended when using baking powder, insuring thorough mixing.

In using either baking powder or sour milk and soda, all materials should be cool, especially the liquid, and in case of pastry and biscuits it is well also to keep the shortening cold, although it is not always necessary.

The mixing should be done as quickly as possible, especially after the baking powder is moistened, to minimize the loss of leavening gas. Biscuits should be rolled, cut, and placed in the pans as soon as possible after mixing. If necessary, they may stand in the pans before baking with comparative safety if kept cool.

The United States Department of Agriculture gives the recipe below for plain baking-powder biscuit which can be made with either sweet or sour milk.

Plain Baking-Powder Biscuit.

8 cupfuls sifted flour	3 tablespoonfuls shortening
1/2 teaspoonful salt	1/2 cupful liquid (milk, water or equal parts of each)
2 teaspoonfuls baking powder

Sift together the flour, salt, and baking powder. Cut or chop the shortening into the flour with one knife or two, until well distributed. Finally, if necessary, rub the mixture between the tips of the fingers until it is like a meal. Add just enough cold liquid to make a soft dough that can be handled on the board, mixing with a knife if possible. Mix quickly and handle the dough very lightly. Place it on a floured board, roll to the thickness of one-half inch, and cut into desired shape. Place the biscuits on a baking sheet or in shallow tins and bake in a rather hot oven ten to fifteen minutes or until thoroughly baked.

NEW IDEA IN KITCHEN ARRANGEMENT

Plan of Progressive Virginia Housewife.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

An unusually progressive housewife of Albemarle county, Virginia, has evolved a totally new idea in kitchen arrangement. She worked out the plan after consulting the county and state home demonstration agents, who reported what she achieved to the United States Department of Agriculture. Instead of placing her sink, cabinet, towel drawers, work counter and rack for small implements along the kitchen wall, this woman had a large square table built in the middle of her kitchen, with a sink and drainboard on one side of it and drawers and cupboards on the other. Lengthwise down the middle of the table between the sink and the cabinet a rack is erected such as one sees in a hotel kitchen. From this rack are suspended the egg-beaters, spoons, skimmers, ladles, cake turners, and other small ware that can be hung up. Above it is an eight-inch shelf for other implements which cannot be conveniently placed on hooks. A slatted shelf below the sink accommodates the dishpan and large cooking utensils, as well as cleaning materials. On the work side of the table is kept a high stool, on which the housekeeper can sit in comfort when preparing fruit or vegetables, or doing other work at which she does not need to stand.

AMBER MARMALADE IS GOOD DURING WINTER

Citrus Fruits Are Handy to Replenish Stock of Sweets.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

When the supply of preserves made from summer berries and fruits begins to run low, the stock of sweets may be easily replenished by the use of the citrus fruits. A delicious marmalade can be made by combining an orange, a grapefruit and a lemon of average size, with sugar and water.

The following recipe has been standardized by the United States Department of Agriculture:

Amber Marmalade From Orange, Grapefruit and Lemon.

1 orange, weighing about 7 ounces

1 grapefruit, weighing about 1 pound 3 ounces

1 lemon, weighing about 3 ounces

Select especially tender, clean, yellow, smooth-skinned fruit, free from all blemishes. The thick-skinned varieties are better for this purpose than are those having a thin, tough peel, since this thin peel is likely to become still tougher, after cooking with sugar and acid.

Wash the fruit well. Remove the skins and slice them very thin. Cook this peel in a quart of cold water, three times for five minutes each, discarding the water after each boiling.

Cut the fruit pulp into thin slices, removing the seeds and "rag" and combine this sliced pulp with the parboiled skins. To each weight or measure of fruit add three times its own weight or measure of water and boil for 25 minutes. Then add equal weight or measure of sugar and boil rapidly for 25 minutes longer, or until the jelly stage is reached. Put at once into scalded jelly glasses, and when cold cover with paraffin.

The amounts of fruit mentioned above make about five pints of marmalade (12 to 14 glasses).

The marmalade should have a clear amber color, not at all of a brownish cast; it should be jelled throughout, and the strips of peel which it contains should be transparent and tender.

When larger amounts of fruit are used, longer periods of cooking will be necessary before the jelly stage is reached, because of the larger amount of water which requires to be evaporated by boiling.

SEASONING SALADS IS EASY

Imagination, Ingenuity and Supply of Ingredients Are Chief Requisites.

Recipes for salad dressing may be found in any good cook book. Recipes are not needed for combining fruits or vegetables into palatable salads, says the United States Department of Agriculture. Imagination, ingenuity and a good seasoning shift are the chief requisites for success in salad making.

One must be able to imagine the taste of various materials in combination, and to reject those that would for some reason conflict. A little ingenuity in experimenting, however, may bring out unexpected and pleasing flavors. The seasoning shift may contain a number of ingredients which give zest to milder flavors.

New Explosive.

A new explosive has been invented. It is a preparation consisting of sawdust and ammonium nitrate, and it is possible to make it to sell at one-third the cost of commercial dynamite, as neither of the two principal materials is expensive.

Honey Bees After Stinging.

Honey bees die within a day or two, and sometimes sooner, after stinging. This is due to the fact that the "stinger" remains in the body of the person stung, and is torn from the bee with such injuries that the bee cannot live. Bumble bees, wasps and hornets do not die after stinging.

Electricity in China.

China, with its 400,000,000 people, has only 4,500,000 light sockets, as compared with the 500,000,000 lights in the United States. Its total electrical generating capacity is estimated at 250,000 kilowatts as against the 25,000,000 kilowatts here.

Earth's Water.

The amount of water within the crust of the earth is enormous, amounting to 565,000,000,000 cubic yards. This vast accumulation, if placed upon the earth, would cover its entire surface to a uniform depth of from 3,000 to 35,000 feet.

MEN AND WOMEN

Trappers are all men; women only wear the furs.

When a woman marries, a man's troubles begin.

The more faith a woman has in her husband the fewer lies he tells.

Some women have as many different complexions as they have dresses.

Allow a man some degree of self-conceit. It may be the only way to keep him heartened.

A man is as young as he looks; and bless you, so is a chorus girl when it comes to getting a position.

A woman in the house who has a good scream is about as efficient a defense against burglars as a pistol.

There is too much of the brotherly love among men that consists in slipping the brother to make him better.

No Damage Done.

After much excitement, the Smiths had at last managed to catch the train.

Now, when they could sit quietly for a while, they began to wonder if they had left anything behind.

Mrs. Smith gave a shriek.

"Oh, Harry," she gasped, "I forgot to turn off the electric iron."

"Don't worry, darling," he replied, "nothing will burn. I forgot to turn off the shower bath."—The Christian Advocate (New York).

Best He Could Do.

As in many large offices, there is in Bank & Co.'s establishment a man told off to attend to the telephone. He writes on a slate any messages that arrive for absent members of the firm.

One of the partners was puzzled by an inscription on the slate, and, calling the attendant, he said:

"Smifkins, what on earth is that? I can't read a word of it. What is the good of scribbling stuff on the slate if people can't read it?"

"Well, sir," said Smifkins apologetically, "the wire was so indistinct."

QUIPS WITH A PUNCH

Everybody owes the world the living that he gets from it.

Fate is so kind to some that they have a right to believe in luck.

If you want to please your friend get through talking so that he can begin.

A man will carry a cane until it becomes a nuisance, and then most men will quit.

Only an accomplished peacemaker can patch up a quarrel so that the patches won't show.

As soon as you get on Easy street, you notice that everybody there has to pay high taxes.

Trouble is the most obliging thing in the world; it will never dodge the fellow who is looking for it.

Men don't understand women because they can't; women don't understand men because they don't have to.

It costs a man a good deal to live up to his ideals. That's the reason many a man can't afford to get married.

Casting the Dead to Hyenas.

To certain tribes of East Africa the dead body is "taboo," and they will not touch it. They took upon the hyena, who is believed to embody the spirit of their ancestors, as a friend, and it is to these scavengers that their bodies are delivered at death, and even before death, many of them being torn asunder and worried while still alive. When a native of these tribes is ill, food and drink are given till the hope of recovery is abandoned, and the patient is put out at night to the hyenas. In many instances when it is suspected that the illness may prove fatal, a string is tied to the tail of the sick one, and so long as there is an answering pull on the string the patient is provided with food and drink each day, but if there is no response to the pull of the string no investigation is made, and the hyenas, never far away, can take their prey.

Tomb of Cyrus in Babylon.

The tomb of Cyrus is in a remarkable ruin, in a tolerable state of preservation, at Pasargadae in ancient Persia. It has been called a pyramid base constructed of huge blocks of white marble, and mounted by a house of the same material, covered with a sloping roof.

The interior consists of a chamber, ten feet long, seven feet wide and eight feet high, entered by a low and narrow door. There is deposited, in a golden coffin, the body of the great conqueror.

It is supposed that a row of twenty-four columns (some of whose shafts still remain) inclosed the historic spot. On these mutilated columns is repeatedly found the inscription (written in Persian and in the so-called Median): "I am Cyrus king, the Achaemenian."—The New York Times.

CAPTAIN SAZARAC

CHAPTER XV.—Continued.

By Charles Tenney Jackson
Copyright by The Bobbs-Merrill Company

"A-Barratira!" he howled. "La—" The Seraphine suddenly heeled with a puff of wind. It shook the wounded buccaner from his falling grasp on the rigging. But even in mid-air, Gorgio, the Catalan, repeated his call of the old days; then his body heaved out and plunged to the opalescent waters, streaking like a comet to the depths.

"D—n!" growled Dominique. "Is this a dead ship? Where are the bullets that I raise not a man? Monsieur de Almonaster! Captain Sazarac! I lay a course—now have this ship worked!"

"Lay her as she is, old gabrier," retorted Sazarac. "Starboard a bit—the mist is closing on the Spaniard, and he cannot stir in the air that moves this beauty! A long trick at your wheel, Dominique!"

Still the rotund politician would not understand. "Our lads—" he fumed. "If I take the deck I want something to work with, Monsieur—Sazarac!" De Almonaster was holding his arm through whose sleeve the blood would spout despite his efforts. Louise Lestron stared in a wild disbelief from the shadowy disorder forward on the schooner to the master.

When Sazarac spoke, it appeared to be to her: "There are none left—I have seen the last men of a vanished race. You have seen men die in honesty. For you, Mademoiselle—for a woman, at which they would have laughed; for the peace of the world, which they would have scorned! It is a strange thing you see—I and old Dominique alone on this bloody deck—alone more than any human heart can know!"

The two gentlemen took her to the cabin, while the crippled schooner fed on a blinded path, anywhere to be out from the guns of the king of Spain. They took her to the emperor's suite; and Monsieur de Almonaster found bread and meat for her; and Monsieur Sazarac held wine to her lips.

There, also, the gentlemen discovered a thing which they did not report to Mademoiselle. They closed the door softly to the cabin, and tried to make a jest of all the terrors that came with the taking of the Seraphine. In the tapestry-hung stateroom, with his boots on and his blood-stained head deep in the pillow, the Emperor of the Bottle lay upon Bonaparte's bed once more. He might be sleeping, or he might be dead . . . the gentlemen could not take time to discover with so many other grim questions mounting to the eyes of each across the emperor's board.

Be that as it may, the Emperor, having reached the privacy of his chamber, flatly refused to leave it again, even though his lady or the camellia was now just outside the paneled door.

CHAPTER XVI

The Loot of a Buccaner. The shortened sail was snapping in a clear morning breeze which worried Dominique, still at his trick with the wheel, which was all that a rotund alderman, his knees too much sagged with fat living, might attempt. A fair morning, and a following sea; with not a sail in sight. Pursuit, even from the heavy-footed Spanish troopship might have gone badly with the two hundred-ton schooner, short-handed as she scampered on.

The two gentlemen who had been gravely washing down the decks, came about the low housing to where the boatman lay. The deck was wet, the lying buccaner was wet; Mademoiselle Lestron looked up, the shaggy head with its huge, gold earrings, pillowed by her lap; and her face was wet also—a sparkle lent by the sea and the fountains of her woman's compassion. She turned from her ministrations with a wan smile: "He will not be moved, Messieurs!"

"Old robber—" muttered Sazarac; "stubborn to the end, eh?"

"It is my place—here in the weather. I am no quarter-deck gentry nor mewing 'pretence' to be laid below in the doctor's room for all a thrust or two." "Johannes, you are going soon," answered the chief gravely.

He looked about at her from under his gray bushy brows and smiled. "I want to lie with you a moment, and look at the flying tops. You will need to shorten sail, and I rage that I cannot spring to the tops again. Name of G—d—a seaman on his back and loose blocks clattering! . . . Is the English woman gone?"

"She is well away with Monsieur de Almonaster." "Good! Now, you are Lafitte, and not this woman's Sazarac. It is this, Jean. In my shiprigger's camp back at La Caimada, I take of a plunder that Crump and De Jonville and I buried on Cozumel twenty years ago. Some gold, some silver and a handful of jewels. The two others have been dead long since; and I wish the stuff for you—"

"I can never return to Louisiana, Johannes," said the leader gently.

"Eh? Well, that is so!" The old man's voice was breaking lower. He turned his face to watch the white spume arise along the weather rail, the highest glimmer of it striking his face. "Well, let me be, my captain! I wish to lie alone staring at the dizzy tops. Naught but them against the blue and the sea weathering up at me. Now—let be, Jean!"

The master put his hand back on his breast and walked aft. The weary group by the steersman looked questioningly up.

"Let no one go near him. It is his wish. I shall roll him from the chains. That, too, is his wish. I—alone!"

And again the girl looked wonderingly at him. "What are you to them all, Monsieur? That rough men turn to you in this fashion, as I have seen them die—the priest, the brother and the comrade?"

"A name," he said, and smiled; and then would say no more.

Louise had bound up De Almonaster's sorely-wounded arm. Now they all lay in the shelter of the after-housing, save the lad, Clark, who had taken the wheel. Old Dominique, Monsieur Sazarac and Count de Almonaster with the English woman.

The great haul of the gear in the freshening wind was all the sound, and Dominique croaked his mightiest to the

"A sore wild night for us all, hearties, if it keeps on. And another mystery there may be for the coffee-house, and that is the edd of the Seraphine and the yelling bullies who stole her from the Place d'Armes! I trust the Mayor Rouffignac will put flowers on my desk in the council chamber."

They tried to smile for the sake of Mademoiselle. Now and then, with a curious little frowning fess, she had glanced down the raised skylight to the cabin of the emperor. It was, indeed, as if she was watching there for an apparition. At times she would have asked of the ragged man she saw there in the chair of honor with the scalp wound that had given him something the appearance of one who were a red coronet and jauntily; but always the two gentlemen had courteously evaded her.

The two gentlemen had conferred apart, now and then; reservedly, perhaps, but with common honesty.

"You would make the Mississippi pass with this ship, Monsieur?" inquired De Almonaster. "It appears quite impossible that we should!"

"What is in your mind, Monsieur?" retorted Sazarac dryly.

"Your life again. Granting this short-handed vessel can be brought to the Mississippi, there is an answer we must make for this affair."

"There is the answer I made to Mademoiselle Lestron."

"True—true!" The younger man shrugged. "There is, in addition, my honor that the Seraphine yet sail on the mission for the emperor. There are gentlemen in New Orleans with money in this venture. If a crew could be shipped by any means—"

Monsieur Sazarac laughed aloud. At the end it amused him—this punctilious regard each had for honor—his own and the other man's, and each for the other's life and future. That was what Mademoiselle Lestron had put upon them, this meticulous notion to stand aside rather than overreach.

"Come," he said good-humoredly. "Is there a quarrel in us, Monsieur?"

"In the end she will know you are Jean Lafitte," went on De Almonaster evenly. "But it is not I who should tell her. Is not that fair?"

"I will bow to her from the galleys the governor will erect in the Place d'Armes, and announce myself, if needs be," said Monsieur Sazarac.

"Jean!" the younger man sprang up hotly. "This is no jesting! She loves you!"

"A ghost—Sazarac," smiled the other. "Indeed, this is worthy of the man who lies below in the suite of Napoleon, babbling a glory which is compounded of fever and cognac! What is there to love in Sazarac, once the mask is torn from him?"

"That is the point of it," retorted the other soberly. "One can love a mask . . . a woman can go on forever loving the illusion she deems a man to be!"

"The Irons she will see upon Monsieur Lafitte in New Orleans will not be an illusion." The master smiled again detachedly: "This romantic fancy of hers for Sazarac! Go below—ask Monsieur Jarvis who has suffered for her, bled for her, saved her life—and refuses to be anything but the veriest mystery and illusion to her! He refuses to be anything more. . . . My friend, Jarvis, is very wise. Monsieur Sazarac can go no further than the galleys in the Place d'Armes, and there smile down at her regretting she is not himself."

"Ah, well!" the young man started up bitterly. "I can make nothing of it! I love her, Monsieur Lafitte—and she loves the magic of Sazarac!"

He arose and paced the wet deck, winching as the swordthrust through his left arm cut him under the dressing his hands had made for it. She saw him from her cushioned perch by the steersman. Dominique had taken the trick again, and sent the lad, Clark, to the lookout. A fine hot youth Raoul de Almonaster had come to be under the press of the eventful fortnight since the Seraphine fled from the river's mouth; the languid aristocrat of the sugar plantations had fang against the steel of Monsieur Sazarac and tempered to a man.

She would have called him and tried to win him from his moods, but she feared the flame of him . . . she could hardly fail to guess why he sword had leaped from its sheath on Campeche reef; and surely the Seraphine had seen enough of men's passions and their blood.

"One Can Love a Mask—A Woman Can Go On Forever Loving the Illusion She Deems a Man to Be!"

And Monsieur Sazarac, too, had his moods again. He found affairs to keep him busied, as, indeed, well a sailor might on this man-crippled schooner; but once, happening to glance down the cabin skylight, with her incessant curiosity, she saw him there. He stood in deep thought, it appeared. Then he went to the door of the emperor's stateroom, and tapped upon it with his silver sword hilt. She thought he laughed slightly, as a man who had thought upon a serious matter until it became amusing.

The door opened. She could not tell by whom, but Monsieur Sazarac bowed with an accentuated flourish. There was a sardonic smoothness to this bow; and Sazarac entered the emperor's chamber. The door closed, and for an hour nothing happened in the cabin. It irritated Mademoiselle Lestron. A mystery with grim laughter in it . . . about all the blood and death and fire of the weeks there had seemed grimacing mirth.

Even the dying, wounded fellows, overwhelmed by the boarding Spaniards on the port bow last night; that, too, was a jest, for if the king's men had made one more assault the Seraphine would have been theirs again. The swords of Monsieur de Almonaster and Monsieur Sazarac were the only ones against them when they broke back to their boats. The last dead of the Seraphine lay in a close row before the fo'c'sle hood—Beluche, the admiral; Nez Coupe, the riven-faced; Bohon, the smuggler; Joe Rigo of Isle Grande; Freniere and two others; a fallen rank to which, presently, she saw Monsieur Sazarac carry the last—the boatman, Johannes.

Then the master stood bareheaded in the sun and looked them over. He seemed satisfied; he took a deck-broom and swept around them carefully, as if these were a treasure heaped on the schooner's spray-lashed bows; and then he came aft. Mademoiselle Lestron saw that he carried a number of shabby things. A drenched velvet cap, a broken pistol, a faded sash, a cutlass and a gold earring from the boatman's head. With these he went down the main companionway to the emperor's cabin, knocked on the door and then entered. The door closed.

She glanced at Alderman Dominique drowsing at the wheel. The flapping canvas, as the schooner wore off a bit, brought his eyes open.

"Monsieur Dominique! What is going on?" she cried.

"Eh? Oh?—I trust my head is still on—and remains so? What—"

"What is this play for me?" she broke in passionately.

LESSON FOR JANUARY 20

MOSES CALLED TO DELIVER ISRAEL

LESSON TEXT—Exod. 3:1-12. GOLDEN TEXT—"By faith Moses, when he was forty years old, was called by the son of Pharaoh's daughter; refusing rather to suffer affliction with the people of God, than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season.—Heb. 11:24, 25

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Moses, the Liberator. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Moses and the Deliverance From Egyptian Bondage.

After Joseph was dead, there was a change of dynasty (Exod. 1:8). The new king, noting the rapid increase of the Israelites, counseled the exercise of prudence lest when war broke out they join the enemy and fight against the Egyptians. One of the methods to curtail this increase was to enslave the people. Failing in that, an edict was issued that every male child should be drowned. While the oppression of God's people was heading up, God was providing a deliverer. Moses, that deliverer, was first trained at his mother's knee, then at Pharaoh's court and finally under God's immediate hand in the desert.

1. The Lord Spoke to Moses From the Burning Bush (Exod. 3:1-6).

It was while keeping the flock of his father-in-law in the desert that the Lord appeared to Moses in the vision of the burning bush. This bush, enveloped in flames, yet unconsumed, symbolized the people of God ensnared in the very fire of God, or God dwelling in the midst of an elect people. Moses stepped aside to behold this strange sight and was taught the essential lesson of the proper approach to God. The Lord did not leave him long in suspense. He told him he was the God of his fathers, the Covenant God. As soon as he knew it was God speaking to him, he hid his face.

2. Moses Commissioned as the Deliverer of His People (Exod. 3:7-10).

1. God's Active Interest in His People (v. 7). In the preamble of this commission, God said to Moses, (1) "I have seen the affliction of my people"; (2) "I have heard their cry"; (3) "I know their sorrow."

2. God's Gracious Obligation to His People (v. 8, 9). (1) To deliver them out of the hand of the Egyptians. (2) To bring them up out of the land. (3) To bring them into a "good land and a large."

3. God's Commission to Moses (v. 10). "Come now therefore, and I will send thee unto Pharaoh that thou mayest bring forth my people, the children of Israel, out of Egypt." This call seems to have been a great surprise to Moses. At any rate, he realized his unfitness to undertake such a task.

III. Moses' Objections Patiently Heard and Removed (Exod. 3:11; 4:10).

1. Personal Unfitness (v. 11). He realized his insufficiency for this task. Moses did not refuse to go, but pled his difficulty before the Lord. God answered this difficulty by assuring him that He would be with him. The token of His presence would be His worship with the people of Israel on this mountain.

2. The Difficulty of the People to Understand Moses' Relationship to God (v. 13, 14). Moses knew how unwilling they were to acknowledge him as their deliverer 40 years before. Since God reveals Himself under a new name as He assumes a new relationship to His people, Moses inquired as to what that new relationship would be, and His corresponding name. The Lord promptly met this difficulty revealing to him a name different in many respects from all others previously given. This new name is, "I Am." This name is from the Hebrew word, "to be." It indicates (1) God's self-existence; (2) the One whose very nature it is to be—the cause of all being. (3) His self-sufficiency. He said, "I Am That I Am." Since God is the unique One, He could not go outside of Himself to explain Himself; (3) His unchangeableness. What He always was and is, He evermore shall be.

3. "Unbelief on the Part of the People (Exod. 4:1). This difficulty the Lord met by supplying him with credentials which could not be gainsaid. He was given the power to perform supernatural wonders (Exod. 4:2).

4. Lack of Eloquence (Exod. 4:10). This difficulty the Lord met by providing an assistant in the person of his brother Aaron. Moses was to be in the place of God to Pharaoh and Aaron was to be his prophet (Exod. 7:1, 2).

MRS. YOUNG ENTHUSIASTIC

Cannot Praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Enough. Sick Women Read This Letter

Charleston, S. C.—"I was completely run-down and not able to do my housework. I just dragged myself around and did not have energy enough to get up when I sat down. I read advertisements of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in your books and learned about it. I got benefit from the very first bottle. I continued to take it for some time, and now I am doing all my own work, even washing and ironing, and never feel better in my life. I tell all my friends that the change in my health is due to but one thing and that is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I cannot praise it enough."—Mrs. ANNIE YOUNG, 16 Amber St., Charleston, S. C.

The reason for such a letter from Mrs. Young is apparent. She got well and is grateful. Recently a nation-wide canvass of women purchasers of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was made, and 98 out of 100 reported that they received benefit from taking it. Just because the Vegetable Compound has been helping other women is a good reason why it should help you. For sale by druggists everywhere.

One of the most important attributes to good citizenship is a willingness and desire to aid your officers in upholding and enforcing the law. How high up do you class in that line?

King, Gentry, Scott & Co. of Montgomery, are throwing the lime light on to O. D. Street and his "black and tan" reputation of "coons" these days. In return Street has disfranchised all Montgomery county republicans.

A few years ago there were 77,000 lily white republicans in Alabama. They added about 12,000 negroes to the bunch and the total was only 20,000. That kind of addition is evidently subtractive in effect.

McAdoo was born in Tennessee and in memory of his consideration for them on that memorable occasion, the people over there have endorsed him for President. Care should be exercised in selecting your place of birth.

Black and tan republicans must be getting scarce and few in a hill in Alabama when O. D. Street, the State bell weather of that pernicious flock, has to borrow one from Georgia to fill the Montgomery postoffice job. What's the matter with getting one out of Chilton County. We have a few here.

MUSCLE SHOALS

There is now pending before Congress a joint bid of nine large Southern Power Companies for the 50 year lease of Muscle Shoals.

Now, don't allow the mention of a power company cause you to see red, but lets go into the facts of the case and see what the situation is.

There is in the minds of the people an idea that Henry Ford is also a bidder for the Shoals property. To our way of looking at this matter, this is a mistake. Mr. Ford did put in a bid, including the Gorgas plant of the Alabama Power Co. in the Warrior river, but as the government could not lease nor sell the private property of its citizens it was impossible to accept his proposition.

It is said that he has been invited by the department to amend his bid and make it within the bounds of possible acceptance, that he has even been offered a plant similar to Gorgas, to be built by the government on the Warrior river in lieu of the Gorgas plant, but so far as has been given out, his only answer has been that "I stand behind my first bid."

Of course, this means nothing in a business way, because, even the government, can not furnish what they have not got nor can possibly hope to get.

So, our opinion is that as matters now stand, there is only one bid in for Muscle Shoals and Congress has only to decide whether it is best to accept it or turn it down.

We want to see Muscle Shoals developed and we want to see nitrates made there for the farmers. If it can be done at a fair price and in quantities sufficient to help the farmer, and we hope Congress will make a good edge and binding agreement with whoever they lease to, that will guarantee the making of nitrates for fertilizer, if such a thing is practical.

One thing we do know, and that is that it will require an immense amount of capital to develop properly the power at Muscle Shoals and Congress should bear this fact in mind in making a deal with anybody.

Mr. Harry Roper is on the night police force for the present. If we can let him "get in out of the rain" we believe he will be all right.

THE LEASE SYSTEM BEARS MORE FRUIT

Last Friday morning 36 convicts working under lease in the Aldrich mines mutinied and held the inside workings idle for 24 hours by keeping their guards, or masters, frightened back by an occasional explosion of dynamite.

The cause of the trouble was the inhuman punishment of three of their number by a specially cruel and humiliating place of torture called a "dog house" treatment.

Alabama has drifted into an unfortunate situation where the people no longer govern themselves. They have said, in unmistakable terms, that they wish to abolish the convict leasing system.

They were put off during the last administration with the promise that the "next legislature will abolish it. The "next legislature" was duly elected with that paramount understanding. That body has lived out its natural life and two years later we are still hooted at and stigmatized by all of the other states as the only one that still gropes around in the dark ages, while our unfortunate law violators are put on the block and sold, body, life and soul to the "highest and best bidder." Sold into a slavery much more fatal, cruel and unprotected than ever existed before emancipation day dawned.

The people of Alabama (we mean the real human people) are unanimously opposed to this blot on the fair escutcheon of their state, but they seem to be powerless in the hands of those who thrive and grow fat on the blood of these poor derelicts on life's pathway.

It is absurd beyond expression to say that the state has to have the money to take care of them. Other states do not. They work their convicts to the advantage of the public at large. They build good roads for the people, which is an aid and encouragement to all agricultural and industrial development and for which the people are only too glad to pay.

Did you ever stop to consider that the people of Alabama put out enough cash for road building every year to much more than feed, clothe, house, doctor and take care of every convict in the state? Have we got any roads to show for it? Are we not the butt for every harping humorist in the United States to throw jokes at because we have no roads?

While the people are paying out all of this ostensible road money the convict slaves are turning into the state each month thousands of dollars in clear profits—and where does it go? A lot of first class, able bodied men, sitting up in snug offices, listening to the clicking of typewriters operated by their force of clerks, who attend to what business might offer, could account to you for where the most of it goes. The machine is utterly top heavy. Do away with the convict lease.

The people of Alabama are long overdue for the day to dawn when they can see business efficiency predominate in the handling of their governmental affairs. They want honesty and merit given a show instead of "political pull" and political expediency. There are plenty of competent business men in Alabama, who are willing to work with their own hands, to fill all necessary state jobs. Cut out the winning and dining, the "bull shooting" and above all, cut down operating expenses and give us some real service.

OLD MEN HAD BETTER HUSTLE

From the almost daily reports that come to us through the press, all of the old men who have wives and families better get a hustle on and demonstrate their worth to the family.

Wives, sons, and even daughters are getting in the habit of bumping the old man off as soon as he becomes a liability instead of an asset.

It is to be presumed that this is a result of modern efficiency in business methods. It is an unwise business policy to carry any dead weight. When a thing becomes useless, in the way of a dead loss, the idea is to unload it.

Then, the old man had probably rather be dead than to be constantly reminded of his worthlessness, so it may be an agreeable solution to both parties to the transaction.

THE UNIVERSAL CAR

Looking Ahead

LAST Spring a total of 350,000 people were disappointed in not being able to obtain deliveries of Ford Cars and Trucks, as orders were placed faster than cars could be produced.

The demand for Ford Cars and Trucks this Spring will, according to all indications, be far greater than last Spring.

Winter buying has been increasing at a greater rate than ever before.

Actual retail deliveries the past 60 days totaled 308,170 Ford Cars and Trucks, an increase of 1,961 a day over a year ago.

Over 200,000 people have already ordered Ford products on our purchase plan, the majority of whom will take delivery in the Spring.

The above facts are given with the suggestion that you list your order promptly with a Ford dealer if you contemplate the purchase of a Ford Car or Truck for use this Spring or Summer and wish to avoid delay in delivery.

PUBLICAN FRIENDSHIP FOR THE SOUTH

one of the important and interesting subjects of the Southern white people membership and take special note of it now, is the fact that the Dyer lynchings bill has been favorably acted by the legislative committee, the lower house of congress and its immediate passage urged.
his bill empowers the Federal government to take over the prosecution cases of lynching, superseding the action of the State courts and bring entirely the constitutional rights of the states to local self government.
This empowers these Federal inspectors with the authority to fine, imprison, or remove a sheriff and deputies a county where a lynching occurs and to use them for five years, if they still persist in its invasion of the rights of innocent citizens, by assessing an insurance fee of $10,000 upon every county when a lynching occurs to be paid to the heirs of the person lynched.

How does that sound to free white American citizens? That is the "black and tan" party represented in our state by one O. D. Street and his henchmen of whom you have doubtless heard. If you belong to the "Street faction" you can not escape the fact that you sanction this nefarious bill and are aiding in attempting to foist it upon the country.
It is aimed primarily at the south—at your home and when you align yourself with that faction of the republican party you are "doing your bit" towards bringing a curse on yourself and upon your country. You are bartering your rights as a free born American citizen to buy a negro vote up north and to keep Boss Street and

SHALL OUR DEMOCRACY SURRENDER OR SURVIVE?

The Truth About Underwood's Private Presidential Primary Law and It's Hidden Purpose

MUSGROVE CANDIDATE OF THE PEOPLE; UNDERWOOD FOR SPECIAL INTERESTS

Citizens of Alabama, do you realize what has been done to you? Do you know that the sacred right of casting your vote, of selecting your representatives, of voicing your sentiments has been taken away from you? Do you know that in the good year of 1924 a handful of would-be political dictators have trampled in the dust the principles for which your fathers fought, which came into being with the birth of our nation and which have become the treasured ideals of Americanism?

In the history of American politics our citizenship has been forced to suffer under "boss rule." Instances of this are recalled in the "boss-ism" of Quay and Penrose, of Pennsylvania; Tweed, Croker, Murphy and Tammany, of New York; These, with Sullivan, of Illinois, in their total disregard for the God-given rights of the people, "self-government" in no sense of the word approaches the high-handed way in which the submission and blind legislation, sought to thwart the will of the people and disfranchise the voters.

How has this been done? Who is responsible? What is its purpose? These are the facts.

The manipulators of Mr. Underwood knew if the people were allowed to vote for their own delegates that they would select delegates reflecting the sentiment of their districts, and that Mr. Underwood would not be the choice of many of these for President and that none of them could be used by him and "his friends" to trade off in support of Al Smith of New York or some other reactionary politician. Hence this assault upon your rights—therefore this undemocratic, illegal, and nefarious scheme. Shades of Washington, Jefferson and Jackson! Where has gone the teachings of our forefathers? Is representative government and democracy to perish?

To throttle the will of the people, to bind and gag the voters of the State, Underwood's manipulators, steeped in their own arrogance, believing that the people of our State are but lamb like and stupid sheep, secured the passage of a special primary law which provided that a special primary at the cost to the people of the State in time and money of a million dollars, should be held at which only an Alabamian could enter and receive the benefits of—and then only the Alabamian (or really Underwood, as admitted and intended) would be given the right heretofore vested in the people and be allowed to name the twenty-four delegates from this State without the voters being given a voice in their selection. And then with Alabama's twenty-four votes in his vest pocket the state's vote would be his to hand to Murphy, to cast for Al Smith or any other wet, reactionary politician he might choose. While the vote of your representatives in drafting democratic principles would be presented to the enemy to vote as your sentiments the things you have always fought as evil and harmful.

CORPORATION POLITICIANS HOG-TIE VOTERS.

Why was this done?

It was because certain of the corporation controllers, politicians of the State knew that your votes would never be cast for them to represent you and thus only could you be bound hand and foot, hog-tied and turned over to those who are even now planning to thwart the will of the people in the coming Democratic Convention and select a "safe" tool as the nominee to serve their own selfish interests.

And so we have this unnecessary, undemocratic, and costly special primary which has been foisted upon the people of the State in order to give their sacred rights into hands of one man who fails to represent the sentiment of the people of the State.

NO HOPE FOR UNDERWOOD.

Every well informed man knows that Mr. Underwood can never hope to secure the nomination. They are simply playing on their belief in the people's stupidity not to see through their abortive scheme to use your vote and your voice against your interest for the benefit of the financial and corporate interest in the East with whom Mr. Underwood is aligned. They call on you in the name of State pride and Southern pride hoping that you will assist in the robbery of your own rights for their benefit. It is not State pride nor Southern pride but a selfish desire to trade your votes for their benefit. For the sake of ourselves and our children, may we be delivered from being deluded into any such trap as they would try to spring by raising this false cry of State pride.

Does Mr. Underwood now advocate local self-government or government by himself for himself?

What will YOU do?

Realizing that someone must make this fight for the preservation of the principles of democracy in our State and in response to the demand of those who believe in the people's right to govern, and at a sacrifice of my wishes and interest I permitted myself to be entered in this race, so that you may have an opportunity to cast your vote for a candidate who will choose only those who will cast their votes for a progressive democrat, whose sympathy with the people is unquestioned, and about whose prohibition there is no doubt, and who will be in sympathy with the forward moving democracy of our State.

FOR PRESIDENT

When you give your endorsement to me you know that I will never trade your vote and your voice in support of Al Smith and Tammany's candidates and platform.

Will you permit the crime of the attempted robbery of the people's rights to be accomplished or will you repudiate such political chicanery? Are you willing to aid this attempt to defraud the citizen of our State? Where does your STATE PRIDE place you in THIS FIGHT?

What The Candidates Stand For WET OR DRY?

Underwood has been continuously wet. He voted against the State prohibition amendment in 1909. He voted against the eighteenth amendment (prohibition) in Congress. He voted to leave the question of selling liquor to a vote of the District of Columbia—on account of his conviction—a whole of the voters there were negroes. He is now being actively supported by the Association Opposed to Prohibition. He was the leader in the fight for the wets against the prohibition amendment. He is still their leader. I have led the fight for the dries from the beginning. Now that Mr. Underwood is a candidate for the Presidency, and now that prohibition is primarily a question of law administration—under the general leadership of the nation's chief executive—with Underwood's attitude on the prohibition question unchanged, where should the friends and believers of prohibition line up in this fight?

MUSGROVE FAVORS SOLDIER BONUS.

Underwood is against the Bonus Bill for the soldiers. I favor the bonus. Underwood seeks to reap the benefit of a million-dollar special primary arranged for his personal benefit, but Underwood is not willing to give one cent to the soldiers.

England and France with a debt of six to eight times that of America has long since allowed adjusted compensation for her soldiers. Canada has already done as much for her soldiers and made appropriations for a great deal more than the

AN ORDINANCE

Be it ordained by The Town Council of The Town of Clanton, Alabama, as follows.

Section 1. It shall be unlawful in the Town of Clanton, or in the police jurisdiction thereof for any person not registered or licensed as a pharmacist as provided by the general laws of the State of Alabama, to conduct or manage any pharmacy, drug store, apothecary shop or other place of business for retailing, compounding or dispensing of any drugs, medicines or poisons, or for the compounding of physicians' prescriptions, or to expose for sale any drugs, medicines, or poisons except as herein provided, and each week or part thereof that such drug store or pharmacy or other place of business is so unlawfully conducted, or that such drugs or medicines or poisons are kept exposed for sale shall constitute a separate offense. It shall also be unlawful in the Town of Clanton or within the police jurisdiction thereof for any person not licensed as a pharmacist under the laws of the State of Alabama to compound, dispense or sell at retail any drugs, poisons or medicinal preparations upon the prescription of a physician or otherwise or to compound physicians' prescriptions, except as an aid to or under the supervision of a person legally licensed or registered as a pharmacist and it shall be unlawful in the Town of Clanton or within the police jurisdiction thereof for any owner or manager of a pharmacy or drug store or other place of business to cause or permit any other than a person licensed as a pharmacist to compound, dispense or sell at retail any drug, medicines or poisons, except as an aid to or under the supervision of a person legally licensed as a pharmacist. Provided, however, that nothing herein shall be construed to interfere with any legally licensed practitioner of medicine, veterinary surgery or dentistry or the compounding or dispensing of his own prescriptions, nor with the exclusively wholesale business of any dealer who shall be licensed as a pharmacist or who shall keep in his employ at least one person who is licensed as a pharmacist; nor with the sale of poisonous substances which are sold exclusively for use in the arts, or for use as insecticides; when such substances are sold in unbroken packages, bearing a label having plainly printed on it the name of the contents, the word "Poison" and the name of at least two readily obtainable antidotes. Provided, however, that nothing herein shall be construed as to prevent any person, firm or corporation from owning a pharmacy, drug store or apothecary shop, provided such store shall be in charge of a legally licensed pharmacist. Provided, however, that nothing in this section shall be construed as to apply to the sale of patent and proprietary medicines, or the ordinary household remedies.

Section 2. Any person violating section one of this ordinance, must, upon conviction be fined not less than One Dollar, nor more than One Hundred Dollars, and may also be imprisoned or sentenced to hard labor for the Town of Clanton for not more than six months.

Read and approved this the 15th day of January, 1924.

FOR WORKING PEOPLE

The best of workers get out of sorts when the liver fails to act. They feel languid, half-sick, "blue" and discouraged and think they are getting lazy. Neglect of these symptoms might result in a sick spell, therefore the sensible course is to take a dose or two of Herbine. It is just the medicine needed to purify the system and restore the vigor and ambition of health. Price 60c. Sold by Upchurch Drug Co.

IT DRIVES OUT WORMS

The surest sign of worms in children is paleness, lack of interest in play, fretfulness, variable appetite, picking at the nose and sudden starting in sleep. When these symptoms appear it is time to give White's Cream Vermifuge. A few doses drive out the worms and puts the little one on the road to health again. White's Cream Vermifuge has a record of fifty years of successful use. Price 35c. Sold by Upchurch Drug Co.

NOTICE

for the year of 1923, December 1st, 1923, and de-January 1st 1924, Town licen-due January 1st, 1924.

TIMES CHANGE

About 60 years ago there was a brave and glorious war lost. The vanquished armies came back to their homes to find them in ashes. Their provisions were gone, their stock taken and driven away, their property and valuables confiscated and their wives and children in dire want.

To make it worse, like Germany, their money had ceased to mean anything. $10,000 would not purchase a pound of coffee. They were actually without means of support or credit in the world.

What did these brave men and women do? Did they beg alms of other and enemy nations? Not on your life. They gritted their teeth, bowed their neck to the yoke and, like real brave men and women, they accepted their fate in silence and put their shoulders to the wheel and things began to happen.

They had a task before them that must have made the angels weep, but never, to this good day, have they begged for alms nor fawned upon anybody for succor.

Sixty years have rolled away and today, thanks be unto God, the offspring of these heroic souls possess this same devastated land, but now God's sun does not smile on a happier, a fairer nor a more truly independent race of people than these children whose fathers were not made of the stuff that begs.

BUSINESS CHANGES

M. Lande proprietor of "The Leader" department store, has moved this week back into his old quarters where he was recently burned out.

The building has been entirely refitted and arranged especially for the accommodation of "The Leader's" large and varied stock and is the last word in comfort and convenience.

It is also announced that the Wadesonian theatre will begin at once to install their first class movie and vaudeville equipment in the old post office building that is being vacated by the move of "The Leader" back home. This will give the theatre a central downtown location and will add largely to the town location and will add largely to the attendance.

SERIOUSLY ILL

The many friends of Mr. Bird Jones will be sorry to learn that he is having a very painful and serious time of it at the hospital. He is suffering with a large carbuncle on the neck.

The latest report we had from the hospital was to the effect that he seemed some better.

We hope to hear at an early day that he is well and out again.

SOME TRIP

Mr. Joe Gore has just returned from a trip out west. He was looking for a fellow but failed to even get a glimpse of him.

PLENTY FERTILIZER

The heads of the fertilizer trust held a meeting in Charleston, S. C. last Saturday and decided they would put out more fertilizer this year than ever before. They did not give out any information regarding the price but said they expected to distribute 5,000,000 tons over the southern territory within the next three months.

They seem to judge by past experience that the farmers are ready to purchase any amount they care to sell.

We hope that at least half of this estimated output will be left on their hands this year. The farmers took a chance last season and bought thousands of tons more than they could use to advantage on a properly balanced crop, and utterly lost, on account of rains, half of what they put out.

Remember as you buy this stuff that you are making one debt you will have to pay, rain or shine, good crop or bad crop, and cut your purchase to the very smallest amount possible.

Think now, and don't burden yourself with a debt the benefits of which are dependent on so many eventualities.

Some arguments are like boom oranges they fly back and knock your block off. The Ku Klux Klan is accused of being skilled in the execution of lynch law. For instance, they claim a membership of a good many thousand additions during 1923 and more activity than ever before in Alabama. The Tuskegee lynching figures compiled for Alabama for 1923 show over a 50 percent decrease in lynchings that year over 1922. How do you explain that?

WHY NOT "OUR" GOVERNMENT

Walter W. Head, President of the American Bankers Association, in an address before Chicago and Cook County Bankers Association said:

"We speak reverently of 'Our Country.' What do we mean? Are we thinking of the service which we owe to our country, of the love which we bear for it, or are we thinking only of the protection which our country can afford us, only of the benefit which we may derive from it? Are we thinking of what we may do for our country, or of what our country may do for us?"

Much as we find reason to deplore high taxes, to lament the interference of government in business, to condemn radicalism, our duty to ourselves and our country requires positive as well as negative action, dynamic direction rather than static obstruction. We must be constructive.

As business men we go before Congress—with justification—opposing this bill or favoring that; as business men, we decry the acts of 'politicians' who are elected to office or who procure the election of others to office. Yet, as citizens of our country, do we fulfill the obligations incumbent upon us? Do we exercise our right to vote—and when we do, do we always place intelligent, efficiency and patriotism in government ahead of every other consideration?

We cannot delegate our responsibilities in government to some one else. The main-spring of a watch operates through a series of wheels and cogs to move the hands on the dial. City councils, legislatures, congress, executive officials carry on the government—but the main-spring of government is the individual citizen. The main-spring may transmit its impulse through elected or appointed officials, but the mechanism will not operate if the main-spring is removed. There is no substitute for individual interest in government and individual responsibility for government.

Prize Peace Plan, Submitted to Referendum, Is Target of League Opponents.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

EDWARD W. BOK'S prize of $100,000 for "the best practical plan by which the United States might co-operate with other nations to prevent war," has been awarded to a competitor whose name is not yet announced, and the plan is now being submitted to the people in a "nation-wide referendum." The reactions of Americans of various schools of thought are interesting and sometimes amusing. Briefly summarized, the plan is:

"1. That the United States shall enter the permanent court of international justice, under the conditions stated by Secretary Hughes and President Harding in February, 1923.

"2. That, without becoming a member of the League of Nations as at present constituted, the United States shall offer to extend its present co-operation with the league and participate in the work of the league as a body of mutual counsel under conditions which:

"(a) Substitute moral force and public opinion for the military and economic force originally implied in articles 10 and 16;

"(b) Safeguard the Monroe doctrine;

"(c) Accept the fact that the United States will assume no obligations under the treaty of Versailles except by act of congress;

"(d) Propose that membership in the league shall be opened to all nations;

"(e) Provide for the continuing development of international law."

Advocates of American membership in the League of Nations and "mild reservationists," though admitting there was nothing novel in the scheme, gave it their hearty approval. The "irreconcilables" and all those who believe the United States should stand aloof from the tangled affairs of Europe naturally denounced the plan as merely an argument for entering the league. They asserted that the jury of award was packed and that the whole affair was a conspiracy. The concern exhibited by some of the members of the senate was almost ridiculous. They professed to believe that the contest was improper propaganda designed to influence their votes on the pending question of American membership in the world court, and called loudly for a congressional inquiry. The referendum, which is being conducted mainly through those newspapers that are willing to help, is bound to be somewhat limited.

SENATOR LODGE opened the week's proceedings in the upper house by delivering a carefully prepared speech in defense of the administration's policy of refusing recognition to the soviet government of Russia. He presented a great volume of evidence and documents to uphold the assertion that the Moscow government, directly or indirectly, is making efforts to cause disorder and dissension among the American people, and gave what seemed to be real proof of the statement that the Communist internationalism and the soviet government are inextricably interwoven and controlled by the same men.

Senator Borah, who has introduced a resolution for Russian recognition, said the proof submitted by Mr. Lodge would not stand a test in any court, and that even if it were true it would be easier to deal with the alleged conditions if diplomatic relations were re-established.

Senator Brookhart of Iowa, with the brush sometimes exhibited by those not yet experienced in large affairs of state, declared the reasons for non-recognition given by the administration spokesmen were "the most ridiculous I ever heard from grown up men."

INSURGENT Republicans in the senate on Wednesday won the long struggle to keep Senator Cummins out of the chairmanship of the interstate commerce committee. LaFollette advised his followers to throw their support to Senator Ellison D. Smith of South Carolina, the Democratic candidate, and so Mr. Smith was elected. On the decisive ballot the vote stood: Smith, 39; Cummins, 29; Couzens, 6. The only Democrat out of line was Bruce of Maryland who, as once before, voted for Cummins. Senator Smith was chairman of this committee for a time in 1919. He was opposed to the Esch-Cummins transportation law, but is not classed as a radical.

On the decisive ballot the vote stood: Smith, 39; Cummins, 29; Couzens, 6. The only Democrat out of line was Bruce of Maryland who, as once before, voted for Cummins. Senator Smith was chairman of this committee for a time in 1919. He was opposed to the Esch-Cummins transportation law, but is not classed as a radical.

RIGHT here it is as well to record the fact that the Supreme court has just upheld one of the important provisions of the transportation act—that one requiring railroads to divide with the government their excess earnings above the 5.75 per cent fixed by the interstate commerce commission as a reasonable return on their valuation.

The decision said that by the recapture clauses congress is "enabled to maintain uniform rates for all shippers and yet keep the net returns of railroads, whether strong or weak, to the varying percentages which are fair for them." These clauses, it was held, do not appropriate property in violation of constitutional rights, nor do they invade the rights of states in rate making.

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE has given approval to the resolution of the shipping board placing the operation of the government's merchant fleet in the hands of the Emergency Fleet corporation, provided the board co-operates with Leigh C. Palmer, who was selected to be the new president of the corporation. This co-operation was pledged by the board.

WILLIAMSON county, Illinois, wherein is Herrin, scene of the mine strike massacre, is offering another lovely spectacle to the nation. Members of the Ku Klux Klan, led by federal prohibition officers, have been making numerous raids on places where liquor was sold and have made scores of arrests, all without notifying the sheriff or asking his aid. The citizens who are opposed to both the Klan and prohibition resented these acts, and the sheriff protested to fear the outbreak of serious hostilities. So he called on the governor for state troops, which were sent to Marion, the county seat. Very likely the soldiers were needed, for both the Klan and a rival organization known as the Knights of the Flaming Circle were in fighting mood, and nearly every man in the county seems to have acquired a gun.

PHILADELPHIA, which has not been noted of late for law enforcement, is in process of being "cleaned up" by a new administration. Brig. Gen. Smedley D. Butler, who won fame in the marines, has been employed as director of public safety and every saloon, disorderly house and gambling place will be closed and kept closed. Already, it is said, the keepers of those "joints" are feeling to other cities. General Butler says he has been offered $100,000 to let the handbooks operate without interference.

BRITAIN'S new parliament assembled last week, but will not be formally opened by the king until January 15. At a great victory demonstration of the Labor party Ramsay MacDonald announced that he was ready to accept office as soon as invited and that his government's first task would be to mobilize all men and women of good will and safe judgment to settle the difficulties of the world and establish real peace. It is rumored in London that if France proves recalcitrant to Labor's peace plans, the MacDonald government will make an immediate demand for payment of the French debt to Great Britain, and, if this is not honored, French paper may be placed on the market and the French exchange thus smashed.

M. VENIZELLOS, though ill, has consented to serve as foreign minister in the Greek cabinet formed by George Roussofs, former ambassador to the United States, and he also has agreed that the plebiscite on the form of government shall be held in March instead of April. This latter was asked by Henry Morgenthau of New York chairman of the League of Nations' Greek refugee settlement commission, who said the league could not obtain a loan for the refugees until Greece had a stable government.

Greek leaders are beginning to plan for a new and more advantageous agreement with Turkey, for dispatches last week told of critical developments in that land. There seems to be a growing revolt against President Mustafa Kemal and his government, and a bomb was thrown at Kemal in Smyrna which wounded both him and his wife. The Greek army, it is asserted, is being trained to take full advantage of Kemal's troubles by seizing all of Thrace.

A BAND of armed men invaded the hotel in Speyer occupied by the officials of the Rhineland Palatinate autonomous government and assassinated Herr Heintz, the president and three of his associates.

General Dawes and Owen Young are in Paris to help untangle the German troubles, but they wisely decline to give statements to the press except to say that time is the essence of the situation and that there should be daily and continuous sessions of the committee on which they are serving. Meanwhile Germany's finances are showing signs of decided improvement.

PRESIDENT OREGON'S federal troops have begun advancing on both the Vera Cruz and Puebla fronts and the rebels are reported to be retreating. In several recent engagements the insurgents were defeated with comparative ease, and their case grows less hopeful daily. Before this is read it is likely the government army will be moving on Guadalajara. Oregon has begun payments for the munitions sold him by the American government, and the latter has given him additional aid by declaring an embargo on the shipment of arms and ammunition to Mexico except with the specific approval of the government.

REPUBLICANS of the lower house in caucus Thursday evening took important action concerning legislation, instructing the ways and means committee to give the tax revision measure precedence over the bonus bill and ordering the former reported not later than Feb. 11. The same day the ways and means committee ordered a favorable report on the resolution proposing a constitutional amendment prohibiting the future issue of tax-exempt securities.

BOTH the Democrats and the radicals in the house have announced their programs for tax reduction as substitutes for the Mellon plan adopted by the administration. The Democrats propose, among other things, a larger cut in normal tax rates on the smaller incomes than proposed by Secretary Mellon, a 33-1-3 per cent reduction in taxes on earned income instead of 25 per cent, with a special allowance for farmers and tradesmen who would not benefit by the Mellon earned income plan, and a revised surtax scale, starting with incomes of $12,000 instead of $10,000 and ending with a maximum of 44 per cent on incomes in excess of $92,000.

On behalf of the radicals Representative Frear introduced a series of bills which include these features:

Restoration of an excess profits tax on corporations.

A tax on undistributed profits of corporations, the rates being 5 per cent of amounts not exceeding $20,000 after deducting a $3,000 exemption, 10 per cent on amounts not exceeding $100,000, 15 per cent on amounts not exceeding $200,000, and 20 per cent on amounts above $200,000.

Doubling of present inheritance taxes.

A tax of from 1 to 25 per cent on gifts.

Reduction of normal taxes to 2 and 4 per cent, respectively, but no reduction in surtax rates.

Reduction of 25 per cent in taxes on earned incomes.

Imposition of a tax on incomes from municipal and state securities under a bill prohibiting the Supreme court from declaring it invalid except with the concurrence of all but one justice.

Publicity of tax returns and tax proceedings.

Repeal of all nuisance taxes.

Odd Marriage Customs of Russia and Egypt

A queer marriage custom exists among the Circassians of the Caucasus mountain district of southern Russia. At the time of his daughter's betrothal the father pays only half of her dowry to his son-in-law. The other half is not due until the birth of the first child. Then the woman is given her long veil to signify that her dowry has been paid in full.

It is not until after the wedding ceremony that the Egyptian sees the face of the woman he marries. She is always heavily veiled and seldom appears outside her home. Many women make a profession of matchmaking, and often a man entrusts his choice of a wife to one of these, who conduct matrimonial negotiations for a price.

On the day before her marriage the Egyptian girl goes to her bath, under a canopy drawn by four men. After this, the bride and groom give a dinner to their friends. When the feast is over a quantity of henna paste is spread over the bride's hands, and the guests make her contributions by sticking coins into the paste, until her hands are covered.

Radio Station Uses Mountains

A wireless station on peaks for antennae has been put into service in the Caucasus mountains. The wires are strong cable and extend about a mile and a half to the top of a some 2,820 feet elevation is designed to directly with the Far East. The cable is fastened to a weighted with stones, rails. When the cable is pulled forward, the stones roll backward on the road.

Why Doctors Warn Against Coffee Tea for Children

THE reason is simple. Coffee and tea contain drugs which tend to irritate the delicate nervous system of children, and so upset health.

The Federal Bureau of Education includes in its rules to promote health among growing school children, the warning that "children should not drink tea or coffee at all."

Why confine the warning to children?

You are careful to protect the health of your children; why, then, take chances with your own health, when a change from coffee or tea is so easy by Postum.

Postum is a delicious, pure cereal beverage ideal for children and satisfying to adults.

Postum for Health

"There's a Reason"

Your grocer sells Postum in two forms: Instant Postum (in tins) prepared instantly in the cup by the addition of boiling water. Postum Cereal (in packages) for those who prefer the flavor brought out by boiling fully 20 minutes. The cost of either form is about one-half cent a cup.

MISERY IN HEAD, COULDN'T REST

Ohio Lady Was Suffering From Womanly Weakness, But After Taking Cardui She Grew Strong and Well.

Chillicothe, Ohio.—"Cardui is my standby as a tonic," says Mrs. Mary Smith, of 677 Orange St., this city, after relating her experiences in the use of that well-known medicine for womanly weakness.

Some years ago, Mrs. Smith says, she found herself in such a serious condition from some womanly weakness that she could do no work and scarcely could get up or down.

"I had misery in my head," she says, "and just ached at times till I couldn't rest. I would have dizzy, fainting spells and just stagger. I didn't have an appetite."

"Some one told me I needed a good, woman's tonic. I asked and was told Cardui might help me. I began to use it and, after a short time, I could see I was being gradually made stronger."

"I quit having the weak spells. I ate and seemed to relish what I ate. I could sleep without waking up at night. I grew strong and well and when the 'very little trouble' I had was over, I was able to go to work."

Beauty That Has Done a World of Good

My father's family kept well ever since I can remember by using Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. My father used to get a box of the Golden Medical Discovery every spring, as a tonic. He himself and gave it to the rest of the family. He did not wait until we were ill. He said, "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure." When about sixteen my parents saved me from serious feminine trouble by giving me Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. —Mrs. L. E. Gunn, 505 Moore Ave., Buffalo, N. Y., for package.

DAIRY

Fit Methods to Follow in Production of Cream

Since at the present time, our farmers who are milking a few good dairy cows, are generally better fixed, financially, than those following almost any other line, it seems that we should pay particular attention to the handling of the product, that it may be put on the market in the best condition possible and thereby bring the biggest returns.

Methods which will aid in producing a good product:

Keep the barn and cows clean. Remove manure from stable twice daily. Wipe udder and flanks with a damp cloth, before milking.

Milk with dry hands, into a small top milk pail.

Separate while warm, to insure less waste in the skimming.

Wash separator thoroughly after each separation. Use a brush rather than a rag. First use warm water and washing powder, then scald all parts thoroughly.

Do not separate into vessel containing the cooled cream. Cool freshly separated cream before adding it to previous skimming.

Stir cream thoroughly every time a fresh supply is added, using a stirrer manufactured for the purpose.

A cooling tank should be on every farm. Run the water pumped for live stock through the cream tank and then into the stock tank.

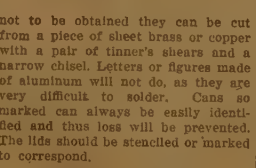

Keep cooled cream in a sanitary place which is cool, sanitary, free from odors and well aired.

Cream should be delivered to market at least three times a week in summer and twice in winter.

Cream should not be allowed to freeze. —L. K. Crowe, assistant professor, animal husbandry, Colorado Agricultural college.

Brass Letters on Cans Will Prevent Much Loss

When the owner's initials or number is painted on his cream cans, they have to be remarked frequently, as the marks become dim, due to washing and shipping. In order to avoid this I solder brass letters to the sloping part of the can, just below the neck, writes W. B. Taylor of Missouri in the Rural New Yorker. Copper or brass letters can usually be purchased at the variety stores, but if not to be obtained they can be cut from a piece of sheet brass or copper with a pair of tinners' shears and a narrow chisel. Letters or figures made of aluminum will not do, as they are very difficult to solder. Cans so marked can always be easily identified and thus loss will be prevented. The lids should be stenciled or marked to correspond.

Dairy Cow Is Necessary, Claims Florida Expert

"As feed prices continue to soar, and the price of land increases, so will the dairy cow replace to a very large extent the beef steer, the sheep, and the pig as a producer of human food," says John M. Scott of the University of Florida experiment station. "And about the only rival the dairy cow has is the busy hen."

The dairy cow and the hen are the only two farm animals that produce good, nourishing food day after day, when properly cared for. They provide foods that are indispensable in the home.

"What is home without milk and eggs?" asks Mr. Scott. These items enter so largely into the preparation of food for the family, the cow meaning life itself to thousands of children.

"We owe the cow and the hen a debt that can be paid only by giving them the very best of care that they may produce the maximum amount of food," says Mr. Scott. And neither of them is now receiving the attention that will be theirs when their full value is realized.

Cow Is Highly Nervous and Is Easily Excited

The cow is a highly-strung nervous organism and easily excited, shocked or affected in one way or another to the resultant lessening of her milk flow. Turning her out on a cold, windy or wet day to drink ice-cold water causes a serious shrink in milk production. Weigh the milk night and morning, without fail, every day of the year and watch the record. That tells the story of such shrinkage.

Year's Progress in Better Stock

Figures Show Importance of Breeding and Selection—War on Tuberculosis.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The improvement of all kinds of farm live stock through breeding and selection, the development of better methods of feeding, the study of animal diseases and parasites, the protection of the industry from plagues which menace it from other countries, and the search for new facts concerning food values of animal products—In all these directions progress has been made during the last year, according to the annual report made to the secretary of agriculture by the bureau of animal industry. The large figures involved show the great importance of the work being done by the industry based upon the production of meat, milk, work, and wool.

Animals Inspected.

More animals were inspected by the department at various slaughtering establishments during this twelve-month period than during any similar period in the history of the live stock business in this country. The number of animals slaughtered under inspection was more than 73,000,000, which exceeded the previous record by 2,000,000 animals. This inspection protects the consuming public against unwholesome meats and in many cases serves to acquaint producers with the condition of herds on the farm.

The battle against cattle tuberculosis has been going forward rapidly, according to the report. At the close of the fiscal year there were more than 615,000 cattle in 28,826 herds officially accredited as free of the disease, a 76 per cent increase in the number of these herds over the preceding year. The plan of cleaning out the plague in the cattle has come time is becoming popular. Fifty additional counties were freed during the year, raising the total to 81. In the course of the year the tuberculin test was applied to nearly three and a half million cattle, most of these found diseased being slaughtered under inspection and the owners indemnified with federal, state and county funds. Areas in which practically all the tuberculous animals have been removed are now designated as "modified accredited areas," an arrangement which permits shipment of cattle from these areas without the usual restrictions.

Animal Diseases Watched.

There has been no foot-and-mouth disease in the United States for a number of years, but the danger of its introduction is great because of the presence of the highly contagious malady in Jamaica. The department's quarantine forces have been on the alert and so far have prevented its entrance; precautions have been taken, in case it should pass our borders, to have the defensive organization ready for immediate action. During the year, the report says, the dangerous disease known as surra was found in the blood of five dromedaries, offered for importation and inspected at one of the government's quarantine stations.

Live stock improvement is being stimulated through a movement, called the "Better Sires—Better Stock" campaign, in which farmers and breeders are induced to pledge themselves to use only pure bred male animals on their farms. At the end of the year there were nearly 12,000 live stock owners who had made this pledge. A questionnaire sent out to several hundred farmers brought out the most troublesome problems in the feeding of farm animals. As a result of the department's offer to assist, many special problems in animal nutrition have been sent in for solution or suggestions. A study was made of the meat yields of the different farm animals, the results showing that the types recognized as best by judges at the leading shows are much superior to poorly bred stock from the meat production standpoint.

The animal industry work has been brought to the attention of the public in various ways, including bulletins, articles in newspapers and farm papers, through exhibits at shows and fairs, and by means of motion pictures.

Legume Crops Developed With Natural Limestone

Use of its natural limestone resources has greatly assisted St. Charles county, Missouri, in developing its legume crops from a very small acreage to over 30,000 acres of clover, 1,000 acres of alfalfa, and extensive plantings of soy beans and cowpeas in 1923, according to reports made to the United States Department of Agriculture. These are especially important crops to St. Charles farmers as dairying is one of their principal industries. No limestone was being used in the county and practically no clover or alfalfa grown when extension work had begun there in 1918. That year the agricultural extension agent secured the co-operation of about forty farmers in using lime on acid soil as a preparatory to growing legumes.

Successful demonstrations of the benefits of lime have increased each year and community limestone crushers for utilizing local limestone have been installed to supply the lime. In three years' time four crushers had been established, and this year 11 have been in use. Since 1920 over 3,000 tons of lime have been used in the county annually, and up to September 1 of this year, 3,000 tons have been applied, providing for a considerable increase in the legume acreage.

Successful Year for Boy and Girl Growers

Youthful Arkansas Farmers Make Money on Crop.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The Junior Potato Growers' Association of Garland County, Ark., is composed of 90 farm boys and eight farm girls, ranging in age from about fourteen to eighteen years. They are all members of the boys' and girls' potato clubs in which, under the guidance of the county agricultural extension agent, they are learning to practice the best-known methods of growing potatoes and preparing them for market.

These young farmers organized their own growers' association, according to reports to the United States Department of Agriculture, elected officers, appointed committees, including a buying and a marketing committee, and selected one variety of potato which all members agreed to grow.

They finished harvesting their 1923 crop and on October 16 rendered a businesslike account of their year's accomplishments to the Hot Springs Lions club, which has given the association support.

The members grew, the report states, 788 bushels of No. 1 grade potatoes and over 500 bushels of No. 2's, producing altogether 1,300 bushels. They marketed their crop co-operatively, receiving $1,644 for it. The cost of production was $535; the net profit $889, about 74 cents per bushel. The member making the highest yield harvested 27.5 bushels from one-eighth acre plot. A number of the members, according to the report, have started bank accounts with their earnings and practically all expect to continue the work next year.

The report, signed by the president and secretary, is written on the printed letterheads of the association, which bears the names of the boys and girls who are officers and members of the buying and marketing committees.

Plant Potatoes Before Corn to Get High Yield

Planting potatoes after the corn has been put in, a practice followed by many corn-belt farmers, does not produce the best results, according to a five-year experiment conducted co-operatively by the United States Department of Agriculture and the Iowa experiment station. The fact that the minimum growing temperature for potatoes is fully 10 degrees lower than for corn would make the reverse of this practice seem advisable, and yields from plantings made on various dates from early April to the middle of June have proved this contention to be sound. The early planting also has the advantage of an early fall market when prices usually are better than a little later when marketing is in full swing.

In this experiment the Rural New Yorker variety was used and the minimum growing temperature for potatoes is fully 10 degrees lower than for corn would make the reverse of this practice seem advisable, and yields from plantings made on various dates from early April to the middle of June have proved this contention to be sound. The early planting also has the advantage of an early fall market when prices usually are better than a little later when marketing is in full swing.

The best yields were obtained from plantings made shortly after the temperature passed the 40-degree line. Plantings made after the middle of May produced a successive decline in yield, and between the first and last plantings there was a spread of 65 bushels an acre. The average for the first five dates for the April planting was 12.4 bushels and for the plantings made the first half of June 76.2 bushels per acre.

Hen House Ventilation Is of Much Importance

Ten hens breathe off over a pint of water a day. Are you providing ventilation to get this out of the house, or do your hens take a continuous cold bath day and night, without a towel for a rub down? Even you would get the roup under such conditions. Watch out for moisture on the windows and frost on the walls. Put in one square foot of thin cloth curtain in every fifteen square feet of floor. Keep this curtain open whenever weather permits. Draughts and damp air and floors cause more colds than zero weather. Exercise helps to prevent colds. Light feeding in a clean, dry litter eight inches deep induces exercise.—O. C. Krum, Poultry Specialist, Colorado Agricultural College.

Destroy Chinch Bugs by Burning Off Vegetation

Considerable damage was done by chinch bugs last year. This pest is carried through the winter in the mature state, hiding in fence rows and other places where they can find protection under grass and weeds through the winter season. They are now all congregating in places of that sort and the way to get rid of them is to burn off the vegetation. This will destroy many of them and those that are not killed in that way will find no protection and sooner or later will succumb to the cold.

Solve Wheat Problem by Feeding All Live Stock

Bread-saving habits formed in wartime and needlessly continued now are limiting the consumption of wheat in this country to the disadvantage to both producer and consumer, say officials of the Department of Agriculture. They assert that a return to pre-war food habits in the use of wheat by the public and the feeding of low-grade wheat to live stock would greatly help to solve the wheat problem.

"Miss America" Declares Tanlac Wonderful Health Giving Tonic

Miss Mary Katherine Campbell, twice proclaimed "Miss America," has taken TANLAC and endorses it in a statement recently given to the women of America. In this statement, Miss America declares that Good Health is the basis of all Beauty, and advises women who would be beautiful to "first find good health."

Her complete statement is given as follows: "I consider it a great privilege to be able to tell the thousands of women everywhere what a great tonic TANLAC is. Health is the basis of all beauty. Without good health, one is apt to be run-down, nervous, underweight, high-strung, anemic. Indigestion drives the roses from a woman's cheeks and robs her of that radiant quality of womanhood that is real beauty."

"I have taken TANLAC and I do not hesitate to say that it is a wonderful health-giving tonic. It has brought relief and good health to many women, and with good health one may have a measure of beauty that will overcome shortcomings in face and figure."

"Rosy cheeks, sparkling eyes, a well-rounded figure, a lovable disposition, go hand in hand with good health. To those searching for beauty, I would say—'First of all, Find Good Health.' The TANLAC treatment has proven itself a boon to womanhood, and I recommend it."

Miss Campbell has written a booklet on Health and Beauty which may be secured by filling out the coupon below.

BIRTHDAY PARTY

Janice Meredith Danforth is eleven years old. The epochal day fell on last Friday. Her class-mates became her guests for the afternoon in celebration of the occasion.

The receiving of the gift bearing guests, the serving of fruit punch, the playing of childhood games, the serving of delightful refreshments, and the dispensing of favors to the departing guests by the honoree, made up the afternoon's program.

Much fun and jollity were crowded into the few short hours. It is safe to say the happy occasion will ever be remembered by the participants.

During the partaking of refreshment, the guest expressed one good wish for the happy honoree. Wishes could have been expressed universally, in the language of the infatigable Rip Van Winkle: "May you live a long time and always be happy."

Farmers and Factories Build Communities~

Farmers are community builders. They produce wealth from the soil. When farmers are prosperous, people in other lines of business prosper and the whole community is benefited.

Factories are community builders also. Since a great part of their output is usually sold in other sections of the country, factories bring lots of money into the communities in which they are located. They furnish employment to many people. Their payrolls circulate among the tradesmen, artisans, and professional men, bringing increased prosperity to all.

The Louisville & Nashville Railroad, thru its Immigration & Industrial Department, has for years been assisting in community building in this territory by getting industrious and desirable farmers from other sections of the country to locate somewhere along or near its tracks; and by means of personal instruction in the field and the issuing of special bulletins on the growing of certain crops, etc., has helped these newcomers to succeed.

Thru the efforts of this Department, many factories have been located along this railroad and much wealth has thus been added to this territory.

An extensive campaign of advertising, setting forth the advantages of this territory for farmers and factories is now being carried by the L. & N. in farm and industrial magazines with national circulation.

The work of its Immigration & Industrial Department is but one example of the L. & N.'s constant effort to further the progress and prosperity of the wonderful Southland territory served by the L. & N. Railroad.

New Year Greeting

The good old year of 1923 has become now a memory of the past. With all of its joys and sorrows it is buried and, as the days go by, it will become merely a misty dream.

We have all had to face some trials and sorrows, but in the main, it was a kind and gracious year to us all. In bidding it good bye, I wish to express my sincere thanks to the many friends and customers who have loyally stood by me with their friendship and patronage and have enabled me to wind up the old year with a feeling of satisfaction with my success and with a steadfast hope for the future.

I wish for you one and all, the successful culmination of your brightest hopes for the New Year. May good health, happiness and prosperity attend you through the days to come. May 1924 have for all of us happy surprises and untold blessings.

I am deeply grateful to every one who has favored me with their patronage during the year just gone and most respectfully ask that you will continue to give me the opportunity to deserve your confidence and trade.

Your friend,

G. C. Armstrong

THE WAGON AND TRUCK TAX

It is more than evident that the special county tax, levied by the County Commissioners Court on wagons and trucks that do public hauling is going to be a source of very much dissatisfaction among the farmers especially.

We favor good roads. In fact, they are one of the main essentials in the march of progress, but as we are already receiving something like $1500 or $2000 per month from a special gasoline tax that can only be spent on the roads, in excess of all road monies we have ever had before, it looks like we might have pulled through for one year anyway, without assessing this special tax.

We do not question the need for better roads, but we do question the advisability of assessing this tax, right in the midst of a slack business period, and right at the very time when this new gasoline road money was just coming in to use.

Owing to the excessively rainy and freezing weather we have had during January, practically all of the road work done has been nearly a dead loss. As soon as the spring opens up we feel like the available road money without this special tax, will take pretty good care of the road situation. If a farmer during the period of practical inactivity on the farm, gets an opportunity to pick up a few dollars with his idle team, we feel like he should have that privilege without being assessed any fee.

The truck man already is compelled to pay an ad valorem tax on his truck before he can get a license. He then has to pay for a license to operate before he can use his truck. On top of that he is mulched for 2 cents per gallon on his gas to pay for his road to haul over and it really does look like it is rubbing it in pretty heavy to call him, after he has done all of this paying, to put up again before he can use the road he has already tried to pay for.

Another thing, we are credibly informed, by people who travel a great deal is, that one of these large and heavy cars that go over the road will do more damage than a light truck properly loaded. The fellow with the big car does not pay any special fee for the damage he does but the man with the little truck has to come across.

We would be glad if the County Commissioners could see their way to suspend this special tax, for this year at least, and then bend their energies towards making the road money available as just as far and do just as much road work as they possibly can and then, the possibility is that by next year we will not need this extra tax to work the roads.

We are not attempting to knock, or criticize, but merely offering a suggestion that we feel like will do right at this time.

Registrars, your statements are equally at variance with the truth and, our opinion is, that if they were to ask you to prove them in a court of law, you would find yourself in the middle of an awkward fix. As we have no brief for them, and as they are all doubtless able to take care of themselves, we leave it with them to treat your manifest culpability with contempt or action as they see fit. One thing we are very sure of, being in Chilton county, if they had ever violated the law in the most minute particular, they would have met with instant prosecution, a fact of which you are well aware.

We hardly know what to say, nor how to say it, to a person like the editor of the Union-Banner in regard to our position, and the position of all broad minded people in regard to our personal and social relations with a person belonging to an opposite political or religious organization.

Do you reckon you will ever be able to shake off the yoke of prejudice and partisanship sufficiently to allow your mind to expand and grasp a few of the fundamental principles that go into the composition of real manhood and good citizenship?

Are you always going to be so narrow and bigoted that the very name of democrat will make you see red, and proceed to uncork all of the vile, accumulated spleen and bitterness of your system?

Allow us to point you to a better and a higher plane of living brother. The persistent vilification of honorable and upright men and women, because they do not agree with you politically, will not always enable you to fly high, either in your social or business life. "The printed page" has a way of piling up, in after years, and destroying all of our opportunities, social as well as financial. The good memory of the public has been absolutely fatal to bigger men than either of us.

No, "the News has not gone Republican." Its 1,000 democratic readers do not seem to think so, at least. The fact that misleads you in that statement it seems like is above your jaundiced comprehension. Allow us to explain it one more time for your benefit anyway. The News has always stood by its first statement. It stands for service and honesty in public officers, no matter what their political faith may be.

For instance, we do not suppose you would dream of any political collusion between Sheriff Littlejohn and ourselves, nor would you doubt his loyalty to the republican party. Still, the News has been pleased on more than one occasion to commend the Sheriff for his efficient service and we are sure that he will bear us out in the statement that we have given him every cooperation in our power. He is making us a good sheriff and democrats appreciate that fact as much as do his republican friends.

We try to be fair and to live above petty political prejudices. We wish to say now, in this connection that it is significant to note that there are four Republican officials at the Court House, among others, who are not persecuted. Who are courteous and pleasant in their dealings with the public of all parties—who do not feel it necessary to put out a smoke screen of persecution. They daily go about their public and private affairs, in peace and with the respect of large numbers of their fellow citizens. We have no sympathy to hold for their political faith and less for some of their political methods, but their example in conduct in public and private life is an argument against the far famed cry of Persecution. We refer to Mr. Rockett, Mr. Pate, Mr. Mims and Mr. Littlejohn. We do not for one moment doubt that they are good Republicans, in the Judge's eyes, that some of them are violent partisans of his, but the fact that they can move in harmony with their fellow men in the midst of the turmoil that constantly exists between the Judge and his few enemies is something for thought.

CONGRESSMAN JEF-FERS URGES ALL EX-SERVICE PEOPLE TO PAY POLL TAX

Must Pay Poll Tax by February 1st to Vote This Year

Congressman Lamar Jeffers submits the following statement regarding the necessity of all ex-service people paying their Poll Tax by February 1st in order to be able to cast their ballots in the important elections which will be held this year.

"I have seen several articles in newspapers from Alabama informing all ex-service people of Alabama that they must necessarily pay their poll tax by February 1st, 1924, in order to be entitled to cast their ballots in the elections which will be held during this year."

"That is the correct information regarding the situation and I am adding this statement to what has already been said simply to strongly urge and advise all ex-service people in Alabama to be sure to pay this poll tax by February 1st, by all means, so that they will be entitled to walk up to the polls, along with their fellow-citizens, and vote in every election that is held."

"I truly do hope that every one will do this. I hope that the ex-service people will not under-estimate the importance of it, but will do it at once. Remember it must be paid by February 1st—only a few days off now!"

"The former constitutional amendment, which did exempt the ex-service people of Alabama from the payment of poll tax, expired on September 30th, 1923."

"Of course it is a fact, that a new amendment has been proposed and was submitted at the last session of the Alabama State Legislature, suggesting future exemption of poll tax for ex-service people, but this amendment must be voted on by the people of Alabama before it becomes a law, and it cannot be voted on until the next general election and of course it does not exempt ex-service people between now and such general election."

"So, Ex-service People of Alabama, let me urge every one of you to attend to this matter at once. Fix yourselves up to vote, whatever you do. If you want to be in position to cast your vote in the next general election, as well as all other important elections that are coming off this year. You must dig up the $1.50 and pay your poll tax by February 1st, 1924. That is the straight dope on the situation as it stands at the present time. Don't fail to do it."

tion has won the esteem and friendship of all citizens who are interested in the cause of education. It is a pleasure to us to aid him and commend him in every way we can, not because we have turned republican but because loyal democrats are not afraid of their faith being corrupted and can, and do, appreciate good government no matter which party is responsible for it.

Col. J. B. Atkinson is another republican with whom we have been, perhaps, more intimately associated than either of the others. As councilman and ex-officio Mayor of the town he has made a record that has won for him the confidence and esteem of all good citizens. He has never forsaken his allegiance to the republican party, and did not have to do so to win and to hold, without effort, this position for the past four years in a DEMOCRATIC town.

Can you broaden up enough now to distinguish between good citizens and the putrid kind of motives you ascribe to anyone who does? Can you get it through your head that good government is all that any good citizen wants?

You did not rave about the sheriff's contest in Shelby county nor about the Probate Judge's contest in Walker. Apparently they were all right. Was it because the republican contestants won?

We have never claimed that we would win this contest but we do claim that we are going to test it out and unload a lot of "fraudulent" voters. Will you please stick a pin in that statement and see if it is not a fact. We thank you.

MRS. H. S. SHAW BET-TER

The many friends of Mrs. H. Shaw, who was so low with pneumonia last week at the hospital will be delighted to learn that she has so far recovered that she has been transferred to her home.

It is to be earnestly hoped that she may continue to improve until she gains back her accustomed good health.

~ I am authorized to announce it to those teachers taking the Normal Course in English Three who have missed two meetings may yet get credit for the course by meeting an extra hour from 8 to 9 A. M. January 24, provided they lose no more time in attendance.

Respectfully,
HOWARD L. FOSHEE.

BAD ACCIDENT

We learn that Mr. Fate Ellison had the misfortune Monday of getting one of his hands badly lacerated in a cut off wood saw.

It is reported that he lost two fingers in the accident. His many friends sympathize with him and hope that he will soon be well and as good as new.

HAWK—HAND

Mr. W. H. Hand and Miss Velma Hawk were united in marriage last Saturday night, at the home of Uncle Dock Wells, who tied the knot for them.

Both members of this happy pair are well known by the younger set here and all unite in wishing them a long and happy life.

CHURCH NOTICE

Pastor W. P. McLennan of Birmingham who has been preaching at the Adventist Tabernacle will return to Clanton for Sunday services. He will speak at the following hours: next Sunday at the Tabernacle; 11:00 a. m., 3:00 p. m. and 7:30 p. m. The subjects will be as follows: "Where are the Dead?" "Are the Wicked now in Hell?" and "The Unpardonable sin." All are urged to hear these subjects.

A RUNAWAY TEAM

Yesterday about noon a team of fine mules, belonging to Mr. Reny Robinson, of Rt. 5, became frightened and ran away.

No one was in the wagon and they dashed into a large oak in front of the Baptist church and one of the mules was so severely hurt that it fell in the street and is probably dead by now.

It was a very fine animal and is a severe loss to Mr. Robinson.

NEW BUSINESS HOUSE

Building material is being put down on the vacant lots joining Elmore's store on the west and it is reported that two new brick business houses are going to be erected there right away.

This is pleasant news, for Clanton certainly stands in great need or room for expansion down town.

GASOLINE SKYROCKETS AGAIN

It looks like the price of gasoline is going to put it strictly on the luxury list.

Last Monday gasoline, Woco Pep, and all the other joy riding power producers, added another 2 cents per gallon to the price.

The advance is said to be owing to an advance at the oil wells on the Crude product.

Henry Ford better buy up some oil wells and keep the price down or his car sales may drop off.

Mr. Elbert Littlejohn, who has been in bad health since having a spell of flu several months ago, left Tuesday afternoon for W. O. W. Sanatorium in San Antonio, Texas.

He is a life long resident of Clanton and Chilton county and is widely known and has many friends who are sorry to know that he is having such a serious spell and who hope that this change will result in his complete restoration to health.

We would respectfully ask the Union-Banner to tell us what methods are being used in the contest that are so revolting to so many democrats—or for that matter—to any one else. Your careless manner of making such statements as that is rapidly creating the impression among the people that you have reasons to fear an impartial investigation of the last election. Perhaps you know some things you are not so ready to tell. Too much camouflage attracts, instead of averts investigation.

The big over loaded theologians who are popping off and disputing about the fundamental principles of the plan of salvation, need to be confined in a sanatorium and given some harmless toys to play with. They are taking up the valuable time of their auditors, and consuming space in the newspapers, that might be given over to "Society," or something, when the questions under discussions were finally and forever settled on Calvary 2,000 years ago.

CHENEY'S A "FIRST AID" TO MOTHERS

Old-Time Cough Remedy Can Always Be Relied on When Cold Winds Blow

Where there are children in the home mother needs a "first aid" ready at hand, because the little ones are so liable to trouble of some kind, especially when the weather is bad and cold winds are blowing. Coughs and colds are common; croup, quinsy and other affections of the throat suddenly lay hold of one or more of them; when whooping cough appears they will all have it, and you never can tell when one or the other of these children's maladies is going to strike your family.

Therefore the wisest policy is to be forearmed so as to ward off the attack at the very first sign of its coming. Cheney's Expectant has long been known as mother's "First Aid," for if given in time it checks the trouble and saves many hours of anxious care on mother's part, as well as unnecessary suffering on the part of the little ones.

Away back in grandma's day mothers saved their little ones from many a hard attack by promptly giving them Cheney's Expectant, and for more than sixty years it has been a blessing to the little folks.

AN OPEN LETTER TO WOMEN

Tells of Mrs. Vogel's Terrible Suffering and How She Was Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Detroit, Michigan.—"My troubles were severe pains in my back and terrible bearing-down pains in my right side, also headaches and sleepless nights. I first began having troubles when I was 15, and they have increased as I grew older. A little booklet was left at my door, and I read what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for women and decided to try it. After the first week I could go to sleep every night and I stopped having that nervous feeling and got a better appetite. The doctor had always said that an operation was the only thing that would help me, but I never had any faith in an operation. Since the Vegetable Compound has started helping me I do not suffer the severe pains, feel stronger, and am able to do my own work. I am more than glad to tell my friends that it helps where other medicines have failed."

Mrs. Gus Vogel, 6008 Pelouze Street, Detroit, Michigan.

A record of fifty years service must convince women of the merit of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"A pleasant little surprise for you," remarked his wife. "You know you said this morning that we ought to study astronomy, so I went to the book-seller's and bought everything I could on the subject."

It was some minutes before he spoke. "My dear," he then said, his voice husky with emotion, "I never said we must study astronomy; I said we must study economy."

Loosen Up That Cold With Musterole

Have Musterole handy when a cold starts. It has all of the advantages of grandmother's mustard plaster WITH-OUT the blister. You just apply it with the fingers. First you feel a warm tingle as the healing ointment penetrates the pores, then comes a soothing, cooling sensation and quick relief.

Made of pure oil of mustard and other simple ingredients, Musterole is recommended by many nurses and doctors. Try Musterole for bronchitis, sore throat, stiff neck, pleurisy, rheumatism, lumbago, croup, asthma, neuralgia, congestion, pains and aches of the back or joints, sore muscles, sprains, bruises, chilblains, frosted feet, colds of the chest. It may prevent pneumonia and "flu."

To Mothers: Musterole is now made in milder form for babies and small children. Ask for Children's Musterole.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

New York Captures Democratic Convention, Which Will Open on June 24.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

NEW YORK has captured the Democratic national convention of 1924. The first meeting will be held in Madison Square Garden, opening June 24, and will last for several days.

When the national committee met in Washington on Tuesday, bids for the convention were made by New York, San Francisco, Chicago and St. Louis. The first named topped all other offers with a guarantee of $205,000 cash and the expenses of the convention hall. San Francisco offered almost as much, but was beaten by consideration of the long distance the great majority of delegates would have to travel if the meeting were held on the Pacific coast. Chicago having withdrawn, the final battle stood: New York, 57; San Francisco, 40; St. Louis, 6.

Principles were especially concerned with the political effect of this choice. The McAdoo managers, it was said, were somewhat dismayed, fearing the local influences would injure their candidate's cause. It was held that Al Smith, certainly, and Underwood, probably, would profit by the selection. The ties in the party ranks are not at all pleased, for the wet sentiment has its headquarters in New York and vicinity and the metropolises always appears to be more than moist. The Wall Street bugles also jump up. It is not conceivable that William Jennings Bryan is pleased with the selection of New York.

The national committee adopted a resolution recommending to the states that half of the delegates at large shall be women. It was also decided that national committeemen attending the convention shall pay their own traveling and hotel expenses. Having disposed of its business, the committee went in a body to pay its respects to former President Wilson, and presented to him a resolution of appreciation of his achievements and ideals and of hope for his speedy recovery of health.

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE's preconception managers now profess to see his nomination on the first ballot. Admittedly his chances will be greatly enhanced if congress passes a tax revision bill not vastly different from that proposed by Secretary Mellon and yet satisfactory to the people at large. House Leader Longworth is working hard to bring this about, and there is a fair chance that he will succeed in so far as the house is concerned. But the Democrats see in the slim Republican majority and the insurgency in the G. O. P. ranks a chance to get the support of the Republican radicals for their own tax measure and thus to capture the credit. The main point of controversy is still the maximum surtax rate.

The house insurgents last week won the first test of strength in the fight to liberalize the rules. By a vote of 208 to 177 the house adopted an amendment repealing the rule which the Democrats put into effect more than ten years ago and which prohibited the offering of amendments on the floor to tariff and revenue bills unless they were germane to the particular section to which they were offered. Modification of the discharge rule so that legislation cannot so easily be smothered in committee followed, and the Democratic leaders announced they would now press tariff bills with a view to reducing duties on everyday articles of food and clothing. They believe they can muster enough votes to discharge the war and means committee from consideration of bills of this character, which do not agree with the Republican program. In the senate they think they may be able to pass such measures with the aid of the insurgent Republicans.

TWO new plans for financing a soldiers' bonus were presented to the senate last week. Senator Curtis of Kansas, Republican whip, proposed to retain in modified form the existing admission taxes and use the proceeds to pay the bonus. The annual yield from the admission taxes is about $70,000,000, and Senator Curtis estimates that this would come within $7,000,000 of meeting the annual cost of the bonus.

Senator Copeland of New York, Democrat, introduced a bill providing for a straight cash bonus to ex-service men at the rate of $1.25 a day for each day of service, with a $225 maximum payment. The total cost of the bonus under this plan is estimated at about $1,500,000,000, and Senator Copeland would have the Treasury department issue bonds to this amount.

SENATOR CARLAWAY of Arkansas violently denounced Albert B. Fall, former secretary of the Interior, Wednesday before the senate committee that is investigating Fall's leases of naval oil reservations to private persons, and Attorney General Daugherty came in for some of the sting. Said the Arkansas senator:

"If the people in charge of the American navy are to be believed when they say our very national existence depends upon the navy as the first line of defense; when they tell us we would be lost without the navy, and then sell every drop of reserve fuel for the navy, I ask how much more infamous it is to have sold every gallon of reserve oil than it was for Benedict Arnold to try to sell only a rocky fortress on the Hudson river?"

"I know there is something wrong with the source of Mr. Fall's money, and I know that every reading man and woman in America will know that Albert B. Fall, the secretary of the Interior, sold every gallon of the American reserve fuel to oil speculators, one of whom boasted he would make $100,000,000 out of his share of the loot."

"Of course, I rather imagine if it were not for my distinguished friend, the present attorney general, all these men would be indicted. But I am conscious as long as he sits at the helm at the Department of Justice they may sell the White House and be absolutely immune from any prosecution in the federal courts."

GOVERNOR PINCHOT of Pennsylvania also did some denouncing, at the annual convention of the Anti-Saloon league. He said the national scandal of the failure to enforce prohibition was the worst in our history, and he voiced what he called a "general demand" for a congressional investigation of the prohibition enforcement unit of the government.

SHENANDOAH, our giant dirigible which is to be used in the coming arctic expedition of the navy, was given an exciting test Wednesday night. Moored to her mast at Lakeside, the big ship was torn loose by a 72-mile gale and driven northward. Capt. Anton Heinen and his crew of 21 speedily got the dirigible under control and after flying as far as New York harbor they turned her nose south again. Seven and a half hours after she broke loose the Shenandoah was once more safe in her hangar, little injured save for the torn nose covering. Her crew was unharmed and unafraid throughout the wild ride, and Captain Heinen, who has had wide experience with aircraft, says she is without doubt the strongest constructed ship of her type ever built.

GENERAL DAWES, in formally accepting the chairmanship of the committee of experts to investigate Germany's capacity to pay, delivered a characteristic speech in which he bluntly denounced the politicians and "nationalistic demagogues" who increase disorder for their personal profit, and asserted the first thing to be done to avert the most colossal bankruptcy the world has ever seen is to stabilize currency and help Germany to recover its economic productivity. The committee has begun gathering the views of financial authorities, and has invited Herr Schacht, president of the reichsbank, to tell what help had been offered in his recent visits to London, Zurich and Amsterdam. It is asserted that Dawes means to steer the investigation toward methods of raising an immediate loan for Germany, probably not over $250,000,000, to stabilize the mark.

Decline of the franc to a record low point moved the French government to a determination to effect great economies, including the abandonment of big public works for a time and the cutting of the government pay roll, and to increase taxation 20 per cent. Exchange rates reacted to this, the franc recovering sharply.

KING GEORGE formally opened the British parliament Tuesday, and the Tory government in the speech from the throne made a last desperate effort to rally the Liberals to its support and keep the Laborites out of power. The speech was long and dull and contained an extensive program of minor reform, including various schemes for the relief of the worker and the farmer. Ramsay MacDonald, Labor leader, announced that at the earliest possible moment he would move as follows:

"It is, therefore, our duty to submit to your majesty that your majesty's present advisers have not the confidence of the house."

On Thursday H. H. Asquith, veteran leader of the Liberals, put an end to all the hopes of the Tories by seconding the Labor motion and announcing that when it was called upon the following Monday he would vote for it and advise all his friends to do the same. None who had not read his mail for the last week, he said, knew the strong demand for him to become the savior of the country. Becoming the savior of the country meant doing some unpalatable deal to keep out of office the party which by all constitutional rules was entitled to it.

Mr. MacDonald, in a speech to the commons, denied that the Labor party favored any revolutionary plans, secret or otherwise.

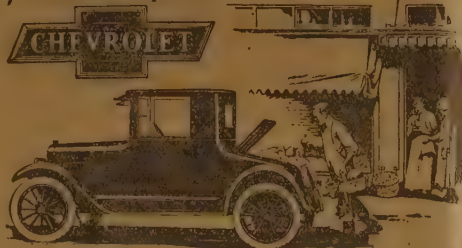

MEXICO'S rebellion seems to be moving toward its climax, and there is not reason to believe that the climax will be the defeat of the revolutionists. Just now the activities of the armies are centered mainly about Tampico, and the United States government has found it necessary to warn the rebels that it will not countenance a blockade closing that port to American commerce. The cruiser Tacoma was ordered to Vera Cruz, but ran aground 16 miles from Vera Cruz.

TOKYO was terrified and considerably damaged by an earthquake that was the severest since the great tremor of last September. About thirty persons were killed and many buildings in the capital, in Yokohama and other places were wrecked. Next day severe shocks were reported from Sendai, Japan; Bogota, Colombia, and Bombay, India.

VENIZELOS found that after all it was necessary for him to become premier of Greece, so he assumed that post and formed a cabinet with Rousfos as foreign minister. Renewal of British friendship and aid is now indicated and it is predicted Greece will join the English-Italian-Spanish combination in the Mediterranean to restrain French ambitions to dominate Europe. Greece may need English help to keep Saloniki from Serbia. Venizelos is openly favoring the establishment of a republic and probably will be its first president. He, however, deprecates the expulsion of the royal family and has insisted that the organization of revolutionary army officers be dissolved before the plebiscite is held.

FARMERS and manufacturers of the Middle West, in convention in Chicago, adopted a series of resolutions for presentation to President Coolidge and congress. They oppose government price fixing; approve of co-operative marketing of farm products; commend the Departments of Agriculture and Commerce for their work in the foreign marketing field; favor a reforestation movement; ask material reduction of all taxes; urge that immigrants be limited by quality, and economic needs; oppose government ownership or operation of railroads, mines, public utilities, farms or factories; oppose attempts to deprive the Supreme court of its primary function of determining the validity of congressional action, and want Muscle Shoals developed primarily for the production of fertilizer.

for Economical Transportation

The Economical Quality of Chevrolet

Chevrolet prices are not the lowest on the market, yet Chevrolet economical transportation averages lowest in cost. This average cost considers the purchase price, interest on investment, depreciation and all operating and maintenance costs.

A detailed comparison with any other car in the low priced field will convince you that Chevrolet is the best buy because of its superior quality and because the purchase price includes full equipment.

More than a million Chevrolets are now in use. Twelve huge plants are now building them at the rate of twenty-five hundred per working day. Nearly one-half million Chevrolets were bought in 1923—far exceeding in number the sales of any other quality car.

Thus, our statements have the strongest possible backing, namely, the faith and patronage of the American people who know automobiles and know practical value better than any other people on earth.

Ways to Increase Fruit Production

Pruning Demands First Attention and Must Be Done Before Buds Open.

This is the time of the year for orchardists to be doing necessary things in the orchard to increase fruit production for next year. Of these, pruning the trees is one thing demanding first attention. R. F. Payne, extension horticulturist for the North Carolina State college and department of agriculture gives some simple suggestions for pruning the apple trees. He states first that this pruning must be done after the leaves fall and before the buds open in the spring. During this dormant season the tree is bare and it is easier for the operator to see just what he is doing.

Mr. Payne's suggestions about how to prune are as follows:

"The primary object of pruning is for fruit production, therefore the proper amount of wood must be produced. After the tree has reached bearing age, no attempt should be made to shape it as the period of training the tree is the first four years after it is planted. Heavy pruning should never be practiced during the period of fruit production. The practice will throw the tree out of the production of fruit into the production of wood, which is very undesirable.

"In pruning apples, all dead and diseased limbs should be removed, crossing branches should be removed or headed in, closely parallel branches should be taken out, rangy branches should be cut back, and the new growth that is not needed should be removed.

"The ends of the branches should not be stubbed back as this causes an excess of laterals on the branch in the vicinity of the wound, and less sunlight will be admitted. Where a whole branch is to be removed it should be taken out back to the parent branch. If the branch is growing too long and it must be headed back, the end should be taken out back to a lateral.

"Moderate dormant pruning is recommended as it gives the proper balance between the carbohydrates, nitrates and moisture which are essential to maximum fruit production. All fruiting wood should be conserved as fruit production is the main object now. Pruning wounds should not be painted or treated in any way as they heal more quickly if left untreated. Stubs should never be left as this will often result in loss of the tree by decay."

Ice Supply Is Necessary for High Quality Milk

In the production and marketing of high-quality milk and cream a supply of ice on the farm is almost a necessity, says the United States Department of Agriculture. Proper cooling and cold storage is said to be the greatest single factor influencing the bacterial content of milk from the time it leaves the cow until it reaches the consumer.

The department says that farmers should, if possible, put up at least 1 1/2 tons of ice in the North and two tons in the South, for every cow in the milking herd. This will provide for cooling the milk, allow for melting, and provide a little surplus for household use. In winter, when work is not pressing on the farm, a little time spent in anticipation of the ice harvest will pay good returns. During this season old ice houses may be repaired and all the necessary equipment for harvesting ice provided.

Superior Mash Favored for Breeders and Layers

A good mash for breeding and laying hens of general-purpose breeds containing only 17 per cent of meat scrap has been developed by the United States Department of Agriculture. The remainder of the protein in the mash is contained in vegetable form and the 33 per cent of ground oats and bran gives the rations the desired bulk. The mash seems to be particularly good in raising the hatchability and fertility of eggs. The more stimulating rations seem to cause an overfat condition in general-purpose birds, especially during the second year of production. Special attention is now being given to the vitamin content of eggs and their fertility and hatchability as affected by rations.

Convert Milk Into Many Products of Importance

Whole milk as such is very palatable and highly nutritious. It can be converted into many other products of great importance in the human diet. From 100 pounds of milk testing 4 per cent any one of the following foods can be made: 4.8 pounds of butter, 11 pounds of cheddar cheese, 45 15-ounce cans of condensed milk, 12.5 pounds of whole milk powder, 8.5 pounds of Swiss cheese and 23 pounds of Camembert cheese. In addition there are numerous by-products such as whey and skim milk formed in the process of manufacture.

Give Proper Attention to Well-Being of Pigs

The pig's bed should be kept dry by frequent changes. Attention to this detail will result in greater profits. Other points include proper ventilation, feeding the pigs inside where it is warm, keeping their quarters sanitary and providing an abundance of pure water before the pigs at all times.

Campaign for Better Live Stock Is Shown

British Farmers Taught Advantages of Pure Breds.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

That the United States Department of Agriculture and the various states are not alone in carrying on a campaign for better live stock is shown by results collected by the bureau of animal industry. The ministry of agriculture for England and Wales has been working for nine years on a "Live Stock Scheme" which is a combination of the "Better Sires—Better Stock" campaign, co-operative bull associations, cow-testing associations and registers of merit of the United States.

British farmers are being shown the advantages of using pure bred sires and the ministry of agriculture also is giving them financial assistance to enable them to use the improved methods of stock raising.

The "scheme" is now operating in practically every county of England and Wales. The latest report shows 831 societies and one individual using 747 bulls; and 98 societies and 451 individuals using 539 boars. This is an increase of 105 societies and 100 bulls over the previous year's enrollment.

One large dealer in Yorkshire says that he believes that cattle values in his district have increased fully $15.20 per head as a result of the work done by the British government. The same plan is being applied to the improvement of sheep and light horses.

Reports from countries in Europe, South America, Asia and Africa, where various methods for improving live stock are being used, also show a general activity in this field. The work is prompted, it is believed, by a growing recognition of the economic value of well-bred live stock.

Chinch Bug Campaign Is Necessary to Save Crops

Chinch bugs, like other insects, are very famous for their ability to do some amount of damage every year. Rather they appear periodically in large numbers. The reason for this is not difficult to understand. After the chinch bugs have increased in numbers for a period of years, parasites that live on them also become more numerous. Thus by the time the latter have become very numerous the parasites also become so numerous that they almost completely kill off the chinch bugs, and then we see little more of them for several years, or until they have had time to recuperate. When the chinch bugs have been destroyed, the parasites have nothing on which to live and they die off, which, in turn, again gives bugs full sway for a period of years, unless man steps in and destroys them. According to all indications, unless farmers put on a chinch bug campaign this winter the crops—small grains as well as corn—will be seriously injured next year. The individual farmer can do very little toward chinch bug extermination. Effective work can be done only through the co-operation of the farmers in whole communities.

Fertilizer Great Help to Grower of Potatoes

Earl F. Miller, according to announcement, leads all other members of the Jay county potato club, with a yield of 418.4 bushels of potatoes per acre. His methods, which may be of interest to other growers, are as follows:

For seed, he used certified Rural New Yorkers, his soil being a sandy loam. The seed was treated with formaldehyde. He applied 600 pounds per acre of a 2-12-6 fertilizer. One section of the field was left unfertilized. Yields were estimated from the weights of potatoes dug in representative sections of the fertilized and unfertilized areas. The potatoes receiving 600 pounds of 2-12-6 fertilizer, averaged 418.4 bushels per acre. Those from the unfertilized section averaged 194.6 bushels per acre less.

Leghorn Pullets Should Lay When 6 Months Old

Leghorn pullets should weigh three to three and one-half pounds and start to lay when 180 days or six months old. The weight of the Rhode Island Reds should be five to five and one-half pounds and it will take about a month longer for them to mature than the Leghorns. It will take about seven and a half months for Plymouth Rocks to mature. Their weight at laying should be five and one-half to six pounds. If the pullets are to be forced by artificial illumination, it is a desirable practice to hold back pullets until the majority reach body maturity as judged by the weights above. Small eggs and lower annual production result in having egg production start before the pullets are mature.

Protect Fresh Concrete Before Water Evaporates

If newly placed concrete is left exposed to the wind and sun, before it has had time to harden, some of the water, which is necessary to harden it, will evaporate. Water is necessary to hardening of concrete, a chemical action goes on.

Thus floors and walks ought to be covered with earth and kept moist for about 10 days. This is common practice in concrete road construction.

Sand, gravel, cement, and water can be heated in winter and finished concrete covered with canvas with excellent results.

What We Forget Between 15 and 50

Schools teach, and nearly every home applies the rule against coffee and tea for children.

When middle age comes, a great many people remember the facts about the caffeine drug of coffee and tea, and how its regular use may disturb health. Often they have cause to remember what it has done to them.

How much better it would be not to forget—and avoid the penalties!

Postum is a pure cereal beverage—delightful, and safe for any age—at any time. Good for breakfast at home, for all the family; good for lunch at the club or restaurant; good with the evening meal; good with a late night dinner—good on any occasion. Postum satisfies, and it never harms.

Why not be friendly with health, all the time?

If the weather will ever permit, we are going to have some street developments here that will surprise and please everybody.

One feature of that muchly "tented wonder" that camped with us last week, met its Waterloo when it butted in to Leon Kemp.

Very often what is a sad tragedy to one man is a great comedy to the on-lookers. Slipping on a banana peel, for instance.

Henry Ford says his bid for Muscle Shoals still stands if the government will build in a duplicate of the Gorgas plant over on Warrior river.

We are glad that show (?) that spent last week here didn't go broke. They might not have been able to leave promptly.

The fellow who is always telling humanity to "keep smiling" usually belongs to the bunch that are turning the profiteer's thumbscrews.

Remember the hard freezes of this winter and see how the boll weevils show up this spring and then you will know what effect cold weather has on the pest.

The man who allows a $ to change or warp his convictions, either religious, social or political is worth mighty little to any community he may live in.

Political "truth has been crushed to earth so long in Chilton county that when the day dawns for it "to rise again" we doubt if very many people will be able to recognize it.

We are not going to complain another bit about the bad weather last week. We just happened to see the point. We had a show (?) in town and the weather man was merely extending us a favor. All right, old boy, do it again.

The United States has sent war vessels and soldiers over to help Obregon put down the revolution in Mexico. The last time we sent troops over there we had to call them home hurriedly and ship them to France to go in to a war that was a war. It is to be hoped that history will not repeat itself in this instance.

The next National Democratic Convention will assemble in Madison Square gardens in New York next June. The sport promoters say it will be the biggest show ever staged in that famous stadium. If W. J. B. gets there the oratorical pyrotechnics will no doubt startle even the blaze New Yorkers.

The Philippine elephant that Uncle Sam drew out of the little unpleasantness he had with Spain some 25 years ago, I tried I captivity and wants to be turned back in to the jungles. He has always been an expensive luxury to the tax payers and we see no reason why he should not be turned over to his own devices.

THE CONTEST

One time before we undertook to voice our views regarding the conduct and ultimate effect of the Probate Judge contest case and our neighbor took great pains, in an elaborate editorial to call us down.

Notwithstanding this cratic behavior of our neighbor we are going to refer to the matter again, but before we do so we wish to explain to this neighbors of ours that we have no intention of "persecuting" anybody nor casting any personal aspersions in dealing with what is a perfectly legal right appertaining to citizenship.

Evidently there must be some citizens of Chilton county who are not satisfied with the outcome of the last election and who feel like that an investigation is worth the price, and who have proceeded, in a perfectly legal manner, to avail themselves of the right to go in to a court, duly authorized and established by law for the sole purpose of legally adjudicating all questions of difference that may arise, like this contest for instance, among the people of this country.

It is greatly to be regretted that the editor of the Union-Banner, and all others who pretend to look upon this contest as an act of "persecution" of any specific individual, can not loosen up their head bands sufficiently to look at this matter in its real aspect.

The personality of the two men whose names appear as the contestants in this case can not possibly have a thing on earth to do with this issue. The question of their capability of uttering the words "I am not interested in the slightest degree. The only question at issue is as to who was legally elected. Or to make it still plainer, which one of these men, as the chosen candidate of their respective political parties, received a majority of the legal votes cast. Can any loyal, honest worthy citizen find anything in that issue to kick about. Any person who does not favor an honest and fair election is not worthy of citizenship.

In fact the law has thrown many safeguards around the matter of holding elections as to who is entitled to vote and who is not, and has gone so far as to attach several penal punishments for the violations of these laws. It also provides that when a question of doubt arises in the minds of either party to an election as to whether or not any of these prohibited votes had been admitted in said election, then a contest can be called for and it is the duty of the proper court to hear this complaint, sift out the evidence and to give a judgement in accordance with the facts in the case.

Now, that is exactly what we have in Chilton county. A perfectly fair and legal investigation of the election returns, by the duly authorized court and the only question to be settled is, who received the majority of the legal votes cast in the last election.

There is not a single question involved in this entire issue that should cause any clean, honest man or woman to fall out about or tear their hair.

To charge that an election contest is the "persecution" of any individual, or set of individuals, is a tacit admission of guilt on the part of these individuals in conniving at a fraudulent election. It is more absurd than the quacking of a goose. There is not a single personal issue involved.

Both democrats and republicans should be equally interested and pleased by this thorough purging of the voting list. The greatest asset that America has is vested in the ballot box and all good citizens desire to see it protected from fraud and maintained as the real forum of a free people.

THE FIRST SIGN

If we cannot maintain a government of law we can maintain no government worthy of the name. Abused property rights is one of the first signs of a decaying government. First, men forget the rights of undisturbed possession; finally, they sneer at honesty, religion, virtue, and all of the moral qualities. In a disintegrating commonwealth there can be no freedom. Safety of person and property is forgotten. The moment that we, as American citizens, forget these facts and fail to preserve by education, religion and obedience of the constitution, we open the way to impending disaster.

CHANGE IN OWNER-SHIP

It is reported that former editor and part owner of the Union-Banner, Mr. W. M. Wyatt, has sold his holdings in that plant to Mr. Emmett Powell and will, in future, concentrate his energies entirely on pushing his new newspaper enterprise at Fort Payne.

Mr. Wyatt is a live business man and a most competent master of the printers art and will do his part towards building up and pushing any undertaking that he is connected with. We welcome Mr. Powell into the ranks of the "pencil and shears" and trust he will find his new alignment both pleasant and profitable. He is well known here and has many friends who will be glad to learn that he has become identified with a local business and will settle down and stay with us.

We congratulate the management on their wonderful success and predict for them a continuation of merited popularity.

In politics it is safe, solid, sound and consistent and democratic to the core. Good luck to this "Splendid morning daily."

FARMEDS TAKE WARNING

Cotton fell off 75 points at one clip the other day and the market is still sagging.

Did you notice what the reason assigned was as given out by the market reports? They said the spinners were all so fully stocked up that they were not buying, unless at bargain prices.

That can mean but one thing. There is plenty of cotton already in sight to carry them over to another crop without bidding the price up on the surplus.

Now, you have been told that all of the cotton in the world would be absorbed by June 1 and that an immense crop was needed this year to supply the actual necessities of the situation. This was done to induce you to plant a heavy crop this year and thereby glut the market and beat the price down to 15 cents or less.

This new development has killed that statement absolutely. If the mills are already stocked up you are obligated to know that there is a large surplus of cotton on hand that will be used to stand you off and run the price down if you make a bumper crop this year.

CHEAPER TO DO IT RIGHT

(Picks County Herald)

When our county pays money to a person to build and maintain roads, we expect the person to be a specialist in road building, otherwise the money will be spent to a certain amount of waste. Under the present system it is believed that in a few years the roads in Pickens county will be in a much better condition than they are today. It is cheaper to do the thing right, even if it costs a little more.

MEXICAN AMENDMENT

(Toledo Blade)

A provision of the constitution of Mexico direct that no citizen who has been concerned in a revolution, or a rebellion, or belonged to the army, may become president of the republic. The United States is carrying on rebellion on the purpose of making himself president by force of arms. General Gales, his rival, has taken over command of the army in order to crush the revolt. So far as the constitution is concerned, neither may rule the destinies of the country. But what is a constitution to the ambitious Mexican? Obregon, whipped Carranza in the approved Latin-American way. Facts rise above laws. A politician in Mexico who commands the victorious force is a fact so thoroughly understood that it is taken for granted candidates for office will first drum up an army, scurry about for rifles and cartridges and begin the shooting as quickly as possible.

LEGISLATIVE PORK

The people have learned to expect comparatively little from congress until after the Christmas holidays. But the waste of time and substance by the Sixty-eighth congress seems to have hung up a new do-nothing record, for which there must be other reasons and influences besides the Uletide atmosphere.

It is stated that on the first day of the present session 767 bills were introduced in the house of representatives, of which 291, or nearly half, called for specific appropriations. None of these is included in the regular annual budget. With two exceptions, all provided for the construction of new postoffices or other federal buildings. Thus something like forty per cent. of the work of congress as proposed by the members on the opening day was for "pork" provisions, and the "pork" scramble continues.

A theory is advanced by an observer of congressional action which seems at best possible in explanation of the situation. It may be embodied in the congressional view that the early bird catches the pig as well as the worm. It is set forth that bills introduced in the beginning of the session are advanced on the calendar. It is a sort of first-come, first-served process. Thus can be seen the advantage of lining up at the barrel early in the game. Bills providing for "pork" have just so much more prospect of passage in advance of the usual legislation. So the interests of the nation are more or less subject to secondary consideration as compared with the appetite for "pork." There is no great depth of patriotism behind the "pork" instinct; but, as a Southern congressman once admitted, the first duty of the average congressman, as he sees it, is to continue to be a congressman; hence the power of "pork."—Age-Herald.

A SPLENDID HOME INSTITUTION

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Peoples Savings Bank, of Clanton, was held last Saturday, January 19, and the following officers were re-elected for another year:

F. J. Callen, President,
N. S. Johnson, Vice-President,
H. G. Heflin, Cashier.

All of the holding directors were re-elected, the only change being the addition of W. L. Popwell to the board. The directors are: H. S. Shaw, G. C. Harris, N. S. Johnson, J. Hance Alred, W. L. Popwell and F. J. Callen.

There are some facts about the action of this stock holders meeting that are not only interesting, but are pleasantly suggestive as to the successful and highly efficient manner in which this worthy institution has been conducted through the year just closed.

In the first place we consider the re-election of every official of the bank, to hold for another year, his same place of trust and responsibility, one of the highest compliments that could be given them, testifying in an unmistakable manner, to their loyalty and ability as well as to their astute business sagacity in having put over one know. And with our army of engineers, with our wealth of experience, we probably know what is best.

We use 35 formulas for steels. Each is best suited to certain parts, as proved by years of tests.

On some steels we pay the makers a bonus of 15% to get them exactly right. There is no room to excel us there.

We machine the entire surface of each crank shaft, as was done on Liberty Airplane Motors. That extra cost is heavy. But thus we get that perfect balance, that absence of vibration.

We use more Timpken bearings than any other car which costs under $5,000. They cost considerably more than ball bearings.

JUST GO AND SEE
Studebaker is today the leader in the fine-car field.

Studebaker builds more quality cars than any other concern in the world.

Buyers of fine cars last year spent over $200,000,000 for Studebaker models.

The demand for Studebakers has almost trebled in three years—as people found them out.

Then go see them. Compare them with any car you will... Don't spend $1,000 or over without knowing what Studebaker offers. You owe that to yourself.

These facts apply to all Studebakers, of all styles and sizes. The materials used in all classes are alike.

of the most progressive years in the bank's history.

Another highly satisfactory feature brought out was, that this financial institution had come through the year 1923 without a jar, and had, at all times placidly sailed through the varying periods of financial changes without a ripple to disturb the absolute serenity of their voyage.

Besides this, the stockholders found a very neat and gratifying dividend awaiting them in the strong box.

This bank was established in 1901 and has steadily grown in strength and the confidence of the people every year since. It has made a wonderful career and one of the proudest recollections of its patrons and officers is that the stock is all owned by home folks—by the citizens of Chilton county and is pledged solely to them and their interests.

It is with a deep sense of pride and pleasure that the Chilton County News gives place to this agreeable mention of a home institution that has lived and flourished here for twenty odd years, weaving each year a deeper and more lasting hold in the hearts and confidence of the public.

EXECUTIVE BOARD MEETING

The Executive Board of the Unity Association met at the home of Mrs. Grady Broadhead on January 16th at 10:30 A. M.

The meeting was opened by Mrs. S. J. Ezell with reading a part of the 16 chapter of John.

The Association standard of excellence was discussed and sentence prayers were offered for the different Association needs.

Prof. Stevenson, the efficient new high school principal, went over to Atlanta the latter part of last week returning Monday.

FOR WORKING PEOPLE

The best of workers get out of sorts when the liver fails to act. They feel languid, half-sick, "blue" and discouraged and think they are getting lazy. Neglect of these symptoms might result in a sick spell, therefore the sensible course is to take a dose or two of Herbine. It is just the medicine needed to purify the system and restore the vim and ambition of health. Price 60c. Sold by Upchurch Drug Co.

IT DRIVES OUT WORMS

The surest sign of worms in children is paleness, lack of interest in play, fretfulness, variable appetite, picking at the nose and sudden starting in sleep. When these symptoms appear it is time to give White's Cream Vermifuge. A few doses drives out the worms and puts the little one on the road to health again. White's Cream Vermifuge has a record of fifty years of successful use. Price 35c. Sold by Upchurch Drug Co.

HUETT—HAND

At the home of the bride's parents, some few miles out in the country, Mr. Albert Dewey Huett and Miss Effie Mage Hand were happily married last Sunday forenoon, Uncle Dock Wells performing the ceremony.

After the nuptial knot, was tied a most elegant wedding feast was spread where all of the large number of guests present regaled themselves with a sumptuous banquet.

Both of these young people are well known and have a host of friends and well wishers in this section who unite in extending to them all of the happy felicitations called for by the auspicious event.

Uncle Dock says he was treated so royally, fed so well and had such a general good time that he almost had a notion of remaining about a week with such pleasant and generous people.

BOUND TO WIN

When a fellow covers all of the numbers on a roulette wheel he is bound to win somewhere.

That looks like the game the ubiquitous William Jennings is trying to play in the nomination of a democratic candidate for president.

He has six numbers already covered and that leaves only one real counter-vant.

Perhaps he hopes to get the thing so well spun up that he can manage to slide in as a compromise candidate.

Put that idea far from your polished dome, W. J., for the folks at home have followed your whims and vagaries about to the limit. They are willing to allow you to fly around the circle and amuse yourself, but really old fellow, they don't take you seriously and a nomination for president means something and therein your case is hopeless.

You have long since passed out of the running as even a serious political cog-wheel in the national machine and, to be candid with you, you are becoming just a wee bit tiresome.

MRS RAYMOND MARCUS ILL

We are sorry to announce that Mrs. Raymond Marcus, daughter-in-law of Dr. and Mrs. T. J. Marcus, of our town, who resides with her husband in Birmingham, has fallen in to such a low state of health that her husband carried her last week to Asheville, N. C. on the advice of their physician.

They will make their home there for awhile, hoping that the altitude and dry atmosphere of that famous resort will bring back her health.

The best wishes of the people of Clanton will follow them.

SOUTH'S PRODUCT TO BE SEEN NORTH

Resources and products of the south will be exhibited in the Grand Central Palace, New York, the last two weeks in January, 1925, at a monster southern exposition, under plans announced here today by F. Roger Miller, business manager of the Chamber of Commerce. The Southern Exposition association combining commercial, industrial and agricultural interests south of the Potomac and Ohio rivers, is sponsor for the program.

The object of the proposed exposition, Mr. Miller said, is to acquaint the rest of the United States with what the south is doing. Mr. Miller is at present in Washington conferring with leaders before formulating final plans. A national advertising campaign running into thousands of dollars is contemplated. The exhibits at the exposition will include displays of commerce, industry, agriculture, transportation and natural resources, and will be the most elaborate exposition ever undertaken by the combined south, according to Mr. Miller.

"The atmosphere of the southern exposition will be distinctly southern," Mr. Miller said here tonight. The decorations have already been tentatively outlined and will be unique in the city of New York. All of them will be gathered in the south and shipped and installed under the direction of a southern decorator. Music for the occasion will be furnished by the southern orchestras. A unique feature will be southern products dinner to be given under the auspices of the southern. Every article used in connection with this banquet will be a southern product including even the furniture, table linen and decorations."

JEMISON DEFEATS MARBURY HIGH

(By R. B. J.)
(Too late for last week.)

The Jenison High School Basketball Team got revenge from the Marbury Quintette here last Thursday, by lacing the mud in defeat by the loose score of 25 to 3. The Marbury boys defeated the J. H. S. last Friday on an indoor court at Marbury. Had the game been played on an outdoor court the score no doubt would have shown up different.

The game Tuesday convinced the Marbury team that the J. H. S. is vastly superior to them in goal pitching and team work.

Not a Marbury player had the luck to hang up a field goal. All 3 points were fouls. Much credit is due Charles Glass and Fulton Lenore for their stellar form of guarding. Not once did they allow their opponents to threaten to loop the ball. Charles Glass played his best game this year, last Tuesday, which was evident to all the spectators. His fast and snappy form of guarding was a complete puzzle to the Marbury team. He is also credited with a field goal which was shot from a difficult angle. Calvin Lenore and Astro Wright were the outstanding figures of the J. H. S. in goal pitching. The former looping 5 field goals and the latter 4.

Gary Ross the sterling center again displayed his usual wonderful form at the center mark. He ran the court like a demon and hung up one field goal. Leonard Glass the diminutive forward was also in his splendid form for holding his opponent scoreless.

The first half ended with the J. H. S. going at the high mark of 13 to 1. McGrey from Marbury made two of the visitors points. He ran the court in fine style, but was at loss to have open shots at the goal. Jim Alley also displayed some neat guarding allowing his opponents in first half one field goal. But in the second half as Astro Wright went in, he was not quite so fortunate in keeping him covered.

The J. C. H. basketball team has beyond the shadow of a doubt made an enviable record this season, having won 9 games from 10 games in which they participated. The team deserves much credit and praise in their wonderful team-work and co-operation along with the able guidance of their coach, Mr. Ralph Grant.

STOCKHOLDERS MEETING

The Stockholders of the Canning Factory are called to meet at the Court House in Clanton Saturday, February 2, at 11:00 a. m.

A full attendance is desired as very important matters will be taken up. I. W. BICE.

WHERE LAW AGENTS OBEY LAW

General Butler is laying his campaign against lawlessness in Philadelphia with true military precision. After each drive he entrenches. After his position and forces are "consolidated," he moves forward to another offensive. He is paying no attention to anything but results, which is doubtless why he is getting results. It is very interesting to learn that, in spite of the resolute manner in which the director is moving against crime, one of his most stringent orders to his subordinates is not to overstep the law in any of their raids. Thus the law in all its aspects is behind the forces of law in all their acts. The fact that, in spite of this apparent restriction, the director is bringing about strict law enforcement, surely ought to mean something to those officials in other cities who do not attain law enforcement even when their agents disregard legal and constitutional rights of citizens in making their raids.—Age Herald.

NOBLES OBLIGE

In last Monday's Montgomery Advertiser we noticed a nice and complimentary write up of our town and county.

While all of the nice things said are absolutely true, we wish to express our appreciation for the courtesy.

Chilton County and Clanton are coming out of the crack along the lines of progressive advancement, and in just a very short time, we expect to have one of the liveliest and most progressive counties in Alabama. We possess the essentials for building up and we expect to put them to work.

Dr. W. S. Wilson, of Fairfield, was here Saturday and Sunday. Dr. Wilson is head dentist of the T. C. I. Infirmary at that place. It is said to be the finest Infirmary in Dixie Land.

MRS. HAYS BETTER

Mrs. Hays, who lives out in West End, has been very low for several weeks and her life dispirited. Her friends will be happy to hear that she is much improved now and is on the road to recovery.

WATCH YOUR STEP

There is an epidemic of bad colds and coughs going the rounds now. Several cases of pneumonia have developed also and you better watch your step and take care of yourself as much as possible during this severe and changeable weather.

MR. JNO. MARLAR SOME BETTER

The latest report we had from the bedside of Mr. Marlar was that he was thought to be slightly improved.

He was taken ill suddenly at the home of his father, Mr. A. J. Marlar, who resides just north of town, and has never recovered sufficiently to be removed to his home in town.

We hope that his improvement may be permanent and that he will speedily be up and about again.

MR BUD ALRED

Mr. Bud Alred, who has been confined to his home for several days with an attack of flu, is reported as not doing so well, having developed indications of pneumonia.

It is earnestly hoped by his many friends that he will speedily weather the attack and be out among us all again.

Mr. E. J. Deuter, a civil engineer of Birmingham, is here under the supervision of our City Fathers surveying our streets and avenues for the purpose of having them properly paved.

The farmers of Madison county have suffered considerable losses as a result of the cold weather, according to reports that are coming from the region. Rye, barley, corn and other crops have been killed and the cold weather has frozen the leaves of hills where they were growing from the cold winds. The loss in the county is estimated at $100,000.

The Alabama Power Company and the L. & N. Railroad are interested in the location of new industries in Oneonta. Charles S. Chase, industrial agent of the L. & N. railroad, and T. D. Johnston, commercial engineer of the Alabama Power company, spent considerable time in Oneonta, looking over the town and investigating local conditions.

Knoeking a pistol out of his hands and shoving him in a ditch, Miss Ellen Laimore, a young girl, prevented Joe M. Cushman, a miner, from doing further harm after he had slain his wife, probably fatally wounded his sister-in-law, and started out to shoot up the whole town of Rock Slope, a small town in Jefferson county.

Filling of an order for 150,000 stamps placed by the Aniston office of the Southern railway was one of the first acts of the new postmaster at Aniston. Sixty thousand of the stamps were one-cent and the remaining 90,000 two-cent. The postmaster has received a voucher from the railway company for $2,400 in payment.

Judging from large orders being placed and the heavy tonnage of commercial fertilizer arriving the record for its use among the farmers at Fort Deposit will be broken this year. This increase is due to the fact that the majority of the farmers will have a marked increase in the cotton acreage over last season.

J. E. Moses is ready to start his 5,000 egg incubator recently purchased by the Pike County Poultry Association and installed at the Baptist orphanage at Troy. Negotiations are under way for brooders to take care of the chicks as they are removed from the incubator.

The Davis-Alcott hosiery mill in one day produced 967 dozen pairs of hose, breaking all records for the factory and, it is believed, breaking all records for such manufacture. Several weeks ago the plant, with 74 girls at work, turned out 934 dozen pairs.

Territory included in the tick eradication program for 1924 will be about half that of 1923, and within a comparatively short time after the beginning of the work it is hoped to reduce the area at least one-half, according to tentative plans which have been announced.

Work has continued on the Montgomery highway in spite of the recent cold weather. The trucks are working like bees on the Montgomery end of the project, conveying the gravel from the pits near Chehaw, while the trains are hauling it on the Montgomery end from the pits at Millstead.

The Birmingham Age-Herald has moved into its new home, a 27-story building located in the center of the business district of Birmingham at Second Ave. and Twenty-first St. Frederick L. Thompson, the president of the Age-Herald company announced that entire new and modern mercantile equipment has been installed.

At a recent meeting of the Marshall Klan No. 17, Knights of Ku Klux Klan of Guntersville, a resolution, providing for a contribution of $1,000 toward the erection of a new city school building, was adopted.

Following information that the Interstate Commerce Commission had docketed the general complaint of the traffic department of the Mobile Chamber of Commerce against rates on canned goods from Mobile to several cities, the Southern Railway has proposed revision of rates on the commodities and the case will be heard by the Southeastern Freight Rate Association, the rate making body for the lines.

The rural schools of Cleburne county are at work on plans to take part in contests of the school fairs which will be held at Heflin early in the spring, according to M. A. Vickers, county superintendent. Prizes will be offered for the best one-teacher schools as well as to the two or more-teacher schools. Individual prizes for penmanship, drawing, maps, compositions, etc., will be offered.

In the case of Cora Sparks, et al., vs. William H. Woolverton, appealed from the Jefferson circuit court in equity, the supreme court of Alabama in affirming the decision of the lower court upheld the validity of the administration of an endowment fund willed to the Birmingham-Southern college for the education of the sons of Methodist ministers. The endowment fund amounts to $30,000.

That an audit of the city financial condition now being completed by Aldridge and Aldridge will show the need of additional revenue giving this need as a reason for the recent ordinance putting on a one cent gasoline tax was the statement of Mayor W. A. Gunter, Jr., at the regular weekly meeting of the Montgomery Automotive Trades' Association.

Severe damage was sustained by the Alabama sweet potato crop in "banks" the oat crop, onions, spinach, cabbage, and pear trees, kumquats, and a small percentage of satsuma trees from the freezing temperatures recently, according to the crop summary for the week ending Tuesday, January 15, released by P. LESSON FOR JANUARY 27

ISRAEL SAVED AT THE RED SEA

LESSON TEXT—Exod. 14:1-18.
GOLDEN TEXT—The Lord is my strength and song, and he is become my salvation.—Exod. 15:2.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Israel Saved at the Red Sea.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—God's Guidance From Egypt to Sinai.

The tenth stroke from the strong hand of the Almighty, the tenth by the screw of Omnipotence, brought Pharaoh to time and made him willing to let Israel go. The Israelites went out on their way to the promised land with a high hand. Through the land of the Philistines the journey would have been comparatively short, but God commanded them to turn from that way, lest, going through the land of the Philistines, they would be discouraged at the sight of war and desire to turn back to Egypt. The way of the wilderness was a long route, but it had many valuable lessons for them. By this they escaped the experience of war, but learned the crookedness and perverseness of their own hearts (Deut. 8:2).

The Lord went before them in a pillar of cloud by day and a pillar of fire at night. He not only thus indicated them the right path, but walked with them in it. At the Lord's direction they turned from their first course and were made to face something difficult. The Red Sea was before them, and mountains on either side. The stricken Egyptians had recovered from their sorrow and now saw the Israelites in a situation from which they could not extricate themselves. They interpreted this to mean that Moses was unable to lead them out of their difficulty. Therefore, they went in pursuit, hoping yet to prevent them from going out of the country.

1. The Miraculous Escape of the Israelites (Exod. 14:1, 22).

They were in a straitened condition, but had no reason to fear, for the Lord had led them there. There seems to have been a twofold object in leading them into this particular place: to strengthen the faith of the people and to lay a snare for the overflow of the Egyptians. The people, as usual, displayed their unbelief, even cursing Moses for leading them out of Egypt. Moses replied to their murmurings by saying: "Fear ye not, stand still, and see the salvation of the Lord." Standing still in such a trial is faith taking hold on God's promises. God said to Moses: "Wherefore criest thou unto me? Speak unto the children of Israel, that they go forward." Having had his definite promise, to have traveled longer would have been unbelief. The lifting up of the rod simply served as something tangible upon which their faith could act. They were to go forward a step at a time, without raising a question as to the outcome, for from the same source from which came the command came the power to obey. The presence of the Lord was adapted to their needs as they went forward. The form of the Divine presence and help is determined by His people's needs. The cloud then passed to the rear and held the enemy at bay. The presence of God had a double effect: darkness and confusion to the enemy and light and guidance to His people. As they went forward the very thing which seemed their destruction became a wall of protection on either side.

11. The Overthrow of the Egyptians (Exod. 14:25-31).

Having seen the Israelites go across dryshod, Pharaoh and his people madly pursued them. They thought they could follow the wake of God's children. The Lord looked forth from the cloud and wrought confusion among the Egyptians. He not only looked upon them, but took off their chariot wheels, causing them to realize that God was fighting against them. He then directed Moses to stretch forth his rod and bring destruction upon the Egyptians.

11. The Song of Triumph. (Exod. 15:1-21).

Standing on the other shore of the Red Sea, they could fittingly sing the song of triumph because of the miraculous deliverance and overwhelming defeat. They attributed all to God. All self was left out. In a glad coming day a similar but larger congregation will sing the same song with an addition, namely, of the Lamb (Rev. 15:3).

Giants in the Way.

It is when we are in the way of duty that we find giants. It was when Israel was going forward that the giants appeared. When they turned back into the wilderness they found none.—Presbyterian Record.

Joy Is Strength.

Love finds delight where duty only found distress, and as the soul is always fed by noble pleasure, the joy of the Lord becomes our strength.—J. H. Bennett.

"There's the Rub."

Men will wrangle for religion, write for it, fight for it, die for it, anything but live for it.—Cotton.

A Masterpiece.

When love and skill work together, expect a masterpiece.—Charles Reade.

Old Drainage Ditches Again Used.

Drainage ditches made by hand labor some 50 years ago in St. Lawrence county, New York, which for various reasons had been allowed to fill with "undergrowth and sediment until practically useless, have been cleaned out recently by local committees with dynamite following demonstrations in the use of dynamite for this purpose by the county agricultural extension agent. In one ditch a cut 77 feet long, 14 feet wide, and 8 feet deep was made through solid rock. Six drainage systems have been put in operation by this means and arrangements made to begin work on others. About 80 farms, according to reports to the United States Department of Agriculture, are directly affected by opening these ditches.

For War Equipment.

A new use has been discovered for star shells, those eerie, ghastly parabolic shells, which so often lighted up No Man's Land with their spookish glare. Federal prohibition agents are going to use them on the coast. Adrian Chamberlain, drug agent for New Jersey, had this to say of the first experiments with the new methods of detecting rum runners: "The bursting shells not only startled the rum runners but sent fast liquor craft and waiting automobiles on shore scurrying for the safety of the shadows elsewhere. We will continue their use until darkness on the Jersey board is turned to daylight."

Pins Older Than Needles.

Probably the pin in its primitive form of spike, thorn or fish bone was used to hold a garment together long before the earliest needle and thread was known. The brass wire pin of today was first made in England in 1326. In the same year the first drilled needles were made by using a stamping machine.

Thinks Feathers Really Help.

Fine feathers do not make fine birds, some adage-maker told the world once while it was listening, but we guess he never saw his wife strutting off with a new hat that was mostly feathers.—Wilmington News-Journal.

Way of a Woman.

Femininity has its own way of posting a simple, everyday letter according to one keen observer. For instance, out of 30 women who were watched at a street letter box in the residential section of a large city, 21 withdrew the letter before quite letting go of it, to scan both sides of the envelope, to be certain the letter was securely sealed, properly addressed, stamped, and to make sure nobody could look through the envelope to read the contents.

Fig Coffee.

It is reported in Czechoslovakia that are prepared in substitution for coffee. Dried either in the sun or in evaporating pans, according to the climate, they are then roasted in ovens until they are quite brown and brittle, after which they are ground into a powder that is pressed into tablets. These are dissolved in hot water when "coffee" is desired.

Fear and Terror.

First Tramp—Goin' in that house over there?

Second Tramp—I tried that house last week. I ain't goin' there any more. "Fraid on account of the dog?" "Me trousers are what?" "Fraid on account of the dog?"—London Answers.

Another Misfit Name.

A visitor to a mountain lodge, prodding an unhappy little fellow, various matters, asked him the Ten Commandments.

The boy said he did not.

"You don't know the Ten Commandments?" the visitor repeated.

"No, sir," the boy insisted.

"What is your name, my boy?"

"Moses, sir."

The visitor gave it up.

Monsieur Dominique was looking about vacantly when there came a hall from the forward lookout, Clark, who had "spent the hour aloft."

"Sail—Ho! On the weather bow!" Old Dominique lurched up stiffly. De Almonaster came from his furious pacing amidships. Monsieur Sazarac, presently, from the cabin. The gentlemen gathered about the master's sea-glass. After a while he picked it up clearly.

"A Yankee—and a sloop-of-war, I think. She is laying a course to cross us." Sazarac looked about with some concern.

"American!" cried Raoul eagerly. "Then break out the Jack, and run up the national colors also! This is an American ship!"

Sazarac glanced at him oddly. It appeared some sentiment was struggling with expediency. But when Clark came down he was sent to hoist the starred flag of the Washington republic.

"This is a hard nut to crack," grunted Dominique. "The story this schooner holds. Not a document aboard. . . and you—Jean!"

Mademoiselle Lestron had turned a glad tired face to the stranger's sail; she did not hear a sudden conference. "It will not do for them to see him," muttered Monsieur Sazarac. "Nor Mademoiselle Lestron to see him. He is roaring his chantey—he is telling of his sea fight—he names us all of the old crew, one by one."

"There goes a signal gun," Raoul was watching the strange sail, and the slender figure of Louise Lestron waving an arm as though the Yankees might see. "They mean for us to lay to. Now, we will have to explain."

Mademoiselle had run back to them, her eyes sparkling joyously. She heard the young man's last word, and her keen eyes noted the constrained silence that had fallen on them.

"Your fellow countrymen, Messieurs de Louisiana! A rescue. . . what is the matter? What is there to explain? This ship, a victim of mutineers!"

She glanced from them to the sloop-of-war sailing swiftly, wind-a-beam to the cross the bows of the Seraphine. Already, at her masthead, they could see the flag of the North republic.

"The Napoleon plot," the English woman guessed. "Well—that ship of his majesty might seize you all, but I have not heard that the Yankees have ever interfered seriously in this madness of New Orleans to free Napoleon!"

"The emperor," said Monsieur Sazarac darkly, but with his smile, "is in his bed—with his boots on!"

The Seraphine was coming around and up in the wind with a clatter of blocks and snapping cloth. Dominique sighed wearily. There was nothing else to do. Monsieur Sazarac, after that last enigmatic jest, looked gravely at the other vessel.

"The Hornet," he shrugged. "Commodore Biddle's famous sloop of the British war. Lay-to, hearties! You are boarding a mate worthy of a chase if we had other than dead sailormen forward of the mast!"

Dominique watched him sorrowfully. For them all, save Jean Lafitte, there must be explanation, pardon; perhaps, even praise for a gallant exploit.

"She is up in the wind also," muttered De Almonaster. "I see a boat swinging off, and a smart lieutenant's head-gear. Now, Monsieur Sazarac—"

"It depends upon who may be in the Yankee boarding party," said the other indifferently. "There may be old heads there who know me well."

Monsieur Sazarac's short laugh stung the hothead again. He crossed to him at the rail. "Monsieur Sazarac, it is idle to say I will not betray you. There is no one here who can or will, except . . . what is John Jarvis saying now?"

"He instructed, just now: 'Jean Lafitte, fetch the sea boots of Monsieur Sazarac.'"

"Pardon!" fumed De Almonaster. "He will hang you yet! He will hang you yet—even the last!"

"A word from him—from any one—naturally." Monsieur Sazarac took his snuff composedly. "Eh, bien! He was my jester in the old days! This entire affair seized his fancy. It was he, it seems, for he boasts of it—who caught a camellia which was once thrown to me from a balcony. Things might have been far different if I had done so, and not he. Well, what would one have? Life depends on the slightest things. And death as well; you see—if the Emperor of the Bottle had not caught the camellia he might never have been inspired to outwagger Monsieur Sazarac!"

"Her ragged cavalier!" muttered the other. "He still. She must not know. It would be abominable—he, with his cognac, roaring the doggerel of your black ship! Name of Names! The American boat is under our counter. See to the boarding, Clark!"

A hall had come from the small boat as she sheered off to await the ladder. Then presently, after some difficulty, a young American lieutenant climbed over the rail. He stared bewilderedly down the empty waist of the schooner first, and then to the little group by the wheel where Monsieur Dominique idly hung.

"Sir, my compliments, and those of Captain Dallas of the American sloop, Hornet—but we have orders to stop all sailing craft in the gulf and make inquiry. Besides we saw you were sailing with some trouble—very short-manned and hard-used, it might be. You are—sir?"

"Captain Gaspar Sazarac, sir—acting master." He bowed and stepped nearer with an assuring smile. The Seraphine is largely the property of this gentleman, Monsieur de Almonaster of New Orleans. The lady, sir, is a British subject, whom we took under stress. The victims of a mutiny, sir—as you will see if you look about. I will make you a full report of the affair in writing, if you wish, sir."

The American lieutenant was, indeed, looking about with some curiosity. He saw bullet-riven wood-work and torn sail cloth. . . perhaps even rimming crusts of red along the scuppers. Then he smiled. Dominique gave a soft whistle of relief. The Hornet, then, had not sailed from New Orleans. The officers did not yet know of the affair at the Place d'Armes!

Lieutenant Ramsey's smile deepened upon the gentlemen:

"I can guess, sir! Monsieur de Almonaster is known in Baltimore and Charleston. And this schooner—the Seraphine, the famous ship that was to take Napoleon!"

A stir and a shout had come from the Yankee seamen over the rail.

"The Gird ship! I saw her at Charleston when she was purchased!"

"Aye—the ship bought by the gentlemen of New Orleans! There is no faster in the Indies!"

The lieutenant still smiled doubtfully: "Monsieur de Almonaster, I can assure you you do not appear very dangerous!"

"We speak the truth, sir!" Raoul advanced eagerly, catching at the knowledge that the Americans knew nothing of the stealing of the Seraphine. "Our mission ended in mutiny—disaster, as you see about us. Will you detain us, sir? Has Washington ordered any action against our purpose?"

The officer bowed. . . even he, as Mademoiselle Lestron noticed, appeared to be inwardly amused:

"But last week, Monsieur de Almonaster, it might have done so on certain representations of the king's ambassador. But now, both England and America are relieved of this momentous issue. For when we left Charleston a clipper had just arrived from Liverpool with dispatches. Gentlemen of the Seraphine, your fantastic dream is over. The Emperor Bonaparte is dead."

Monsieur Sazarac shrugged as if it was a matter of no moment to a sailing master for the New Orleans gentry. Dominique, alone, gave way to emotion. He blew his red nose loudly.

"Eh—old Bony! Name of G—d!—now I will have to go back to mulling over street contracts with the Mayor Rouffignac!"

"You are therefore absolved from all duty in the affair," continued Lieutenant Ramsey with some irony. "It is very apparent that a vessel crippled as is the Seraphine by a mutiny which, luckily, you had the gallant fortune to put down, is in no way fit for a lady. Captain Dallas will be pleased to receive her, and any of the rest who wish transfer, and take you to New Orleans on the Hornet. Monsieur de Almonaster has a wound which needs a surgeon. Can we serve you, gentlemen, in this?"

"Naturally you will require a report in writing," suggested Monsieur Sazarac.

"At your leisure, Monsieur." The lieutenant turned away as if to give the refugees a moment to confer upon the matter.

Dominique found chance to pull the sleeve of Monsieur Sazarac. "You cannot go to the Hornet, Jean! There will be older seamen there who will recognize you. Your head is not worth Beluche's gimcrack cockade. Nor in New Orleans either!"

"Mademoiselle Lestron will accept Captain Dallas' courtesy on the Hornet," observed Monsieur Sazarac, as if he had not heard.

She turned joyously to him. "Why, naturally! And leave this ship of blood and mystery! We shall go. Messieurs! It is in my heart to go!"

"You hear?" murmured Sazarac to De Almonaster. The count had taken a turn of the deck forward with Lieutenant Ramsey, showing him certain things and explaining earnestly. Now he was back to his party.

"I say this! I luck! The Hornet is overcrowded with some twenty sailormen taken from a wrecked island trader off Key West on her rundown! Jamaluns—some white and some half-breed, but able seamen. Lieutenant Ramsey tells, Captain Dallas will be more than glad to shift this burden, and at the same time provide the working crew which our schooner must needs have in any event! It is admirable. We can stay on her!"

But the girl shivered. . . she had been peering curiously down through the skylight, where the snowy top of the Seraphine against the blue cast wavering colors on the ornate furnishings of the emperor's cabin.

"No—no—Monsieur! On the Hornet!"

"On the Hornet," repeated Captain Sazarac quietly.

Raoul stopped with a remembrance of Sazarac shadowing his exuberance. "Ah, yes! I see," he went on slowly. "Nom de Dieu! It would be the same for you—the Seraphine following in the wake of the Hornet to New Orleans! Monsieur Sazarac—Ah, well!" He shrugged helplessly: "I cannot think what to do for Monsieur Sazarac!"

The girl could not understand, of course. Monsieur Sazarac bowed with some satire.

"This phantom—Sazarac! How it haunts your happiness, Monsieur de Almonaster! Dispel it with a word! A gesture!"

The younger man came to him with a gesture, indeed, but of some humble grief. "I have stood aside. I have spoken no word of love to her. . . I have held my honor. The look in her eyes I have seen—that is for you today, if I cannot win it fairly!"

"There," murmured Sazarac. "See? She is looking into the cabin—curiously! Eh, a woman! Fascinated by mystery—this or that ghost. Come, by the man, Raoul! Call the lieutenant's guard. . . I am Jean Lafitte!"

"This sword of mine would be at the throat of any man who breathed that name upon this ship. That is my honor still—Sazarac."

"Come! Name of the devil! The lieutenant is fidgeting—he must be back to report this matter. Why, what is the matter with you?" growled Sazarac impatiently. "Take what is in your grasp! The happiness that is in your power—seize it, Monsieur! Honor!—but! Go down in the emperor's state-room, and ask the lieutenant's statement of the matter. He will tell you the truth of us all."

He protected the good name of Sazarac long enough, and has tired of it. He has, in fact, now called on me to be an honest man. It must be Lafitte, the outlaw, who has the lady's fancy—not a chivalrous Sazarac. And the fester rises, Monsieur—he has come to command at last!"

Monsieur de Almonaster appeared not to understand the other's laughter which must come of so much of pain. "Jarvis must not see her then," Sazarac muttered. "There would be no sense to that!"

Sazarac took the young man's unwounded arm and turned him firmly toward the Hornet lying up in the wind astern. "Come! I, too, am a ghost. Sazarac is a ghost—he never did exist." And then the old somber look of Lafitte, the fugitive, came to his eyes: "I tell you, Raoul, if we had not just learned that Bonaparte was dead, I would have tried—for a last desperate venture of the man of my infamous lot—to play Napoleon. To be at sea! To be under the sky again on a good ship! At the end—too late—your dream grappled me! Monsieur, you see everything else is gone for me," he added. "I depart from the stage. Jarvis would tell you so with his poking. Ah, God, I envy the dead men up there forward!"

"You love her, then," muttered De Almonaster, "that is plain—"

"Too well to have her see me swing in air at the end. Of course that will be the end—," he said composedly: "and she will know I played a role for her merely. I could not be Sazarac more than could John Jarvis."

"You give her up because there is no more to do—for Sazarac," returned the other slowly. "Ah, yes! I am sorry, Monsieur! I am unfair after all, at the end."

And then he suddenly seized the adventurer's bronzed hands. "See, here! Your life! The Seraphine will save your life! I give her to you, Monsieur! The crew of shipwrecked mariners—who, in some obscure port of the Indies you can rest and be off before you are identified!"

The older man put back the iron-gray wisps that had come to his black hair above the temples. "Be off—Monsieur!"

Hafnium Atoms Weighed.

Nils Bohr, discoverer of the new element, hafnium, has determined its atomic weight. The element which was named in honor of the city of Copenhagen, is still not completely isolated, but the professor's efforts in this direction are nearing completion. The connection of the element with aluminum, a kindred element, has made investigations difficult, but Professor Bohr has been able to ascertain that the atomic weight lies between 179 and 181.

Five of 92 elements existent remain to be discovered.

As a result of his experiments, Professor Bohr has discovered that hafnium is impenetrable by Röntgen rays. He asserts it has the good qualities of blamuth, which is used in connection with Röntgen-ray experiments, but none of the bad ones, and the discovery is expected to be of considerable value to medical science.

DAIRY FACTS

Use Eternal Vigilance in War on Tuberculosis

In fighting tuberculosis in cattle the old reliable eternal vigilance is as much the price of victory as in any other contest.

Men who are most closely in touch with dairy conditions say there is grave danger of reinfection even after the herd is clean.

They say that special care should be exercised in cleaning and disinfecting a barn after the removal of reactors. The dairyman should be sure that every corner is scrubbed, cleaned and disinfected.

The danger that cows from a clean herd will be infected at fairs, stock shows and sales is also said to be great. The cattlemen at the New York State Agricultural College at Ithaca go so far as to say that the farmer with the clean herd should refuse to exhibit his stock unless he is quite sure that the regulations permitting only the entry of tuberculin-tested stock are strictly enforced.

The pasture offers another source of infection. Even if the farmer is sure his herd is clean, the cattle may get the germs from a stream which carries them from another pasture in which tubercular cows are kept. One herd was known to have become infected by drinking from a stream which flowed through a slaughter house yard where reactors were killed.

The calves need to be protected. They should not be fed milk which is even suspected of harboring the germs. Such milk can be made safe only by holding it at a temperature of 150 degrees for twenty minutes.

Different Methods for Hand Feeding of Calves

There is some difference in the method followed by farmers as to the time to begin hand feeding of the calf. Some take the calf away without allowing it to nurse at all. Others prefer to let it nurse once, and some allow it to remain with the cow three or four days or until the fever is out of the udder and the milk is fit for use in the dairy. It probably makes very little difference as to this point, but it is a fact easily established that the earlier the calf is taken from the cow the easier it will be to teach it to drink.

If the cow's udder is in good condition when the calf is dropped, it will generally be more satisfactory to take the calf away early. When the udder is caked, it is best to leave the calf with her until this condition is removed. The point that must be kept in mind is that at first the milk from the mother should always be given the calf and not the milk from some other cow. The first milk, or colostrum, given by a cow is especially suited to the requirements of a young calf, as it has the property of acting as a physic and stimulating the digestive organs.

With the higher testing breeds, it is particularly desirable to take the calf away early or else exercise care that the calf does not eat too much of the high testing milk which may bring on digestive troubles that are difficult to overcome.

Vermont Station Favors Pumpkins for Dairy Cows

Pumpkins are a valuable feed for dairy cows. In composition they resemble mangels and are as valuable for cows. The tradition among farmers that pumpkin seeds increase the kidney excretions, tend to dry up cows, and hence should be removed before feeding has no good foundation. The seeds contain much nutriment and should not be wasted. The Vermont experiment station found two and one-half tons of pumpkins, including seeds, equal to one ton of corn silage.

They can be either fed in the barn or out in the pasture. When fed in the barn they should be cut in small pieces. If fed in the pasture they need only be broken in two pieces. Cows that have never been fed pumpkins must first learn to eat them before they relish them.

Alsike Clover Hay Very Good Feed for All Cows

Alsike clover hay is a very good feed for dairy cows. It is a little better than red clover hay. Feed cows all the alsike clover they will clean up without very much waste. For a grain ration take 400 pounds ground corn, 200 pounds ground oats and 100 pounds oilmeal. Mix and feed one pound of this mixture for every three to three and one-half pounds of milk produced if your cows are Jerseys or Guernseys and one pound for every three and one-half to four pounds of milk produced if your cows are Holsteins.

Overfeeding Is Dangerous.

A newly freshened heifer is very likely to eat heartily of all kinds of food, especially grain, that is put before her, and right here is where the danger lies. The feeder must exercise good judgment right from the start.

Disease Is Dangerous.

Tuberculosis is a danger. A clean herd safeguards your family, increases herd value, protects the milk supply, is a protection to the buyer and a satisfaction to the seller.

Are You Discouraged, Blue?

This Advice Is of Vital Importance to You

Columbia, S. C.—"I was suffering with a breakdown in health, and became discouraged. I suffered with bearing pains and pains down through my limbs, my appetite was poor and I became frail and weak. Nothing I took seemed to do me any good. One day my husband got one of Dr. Pierce's pamphlets and we soon decided to try the 'Favorite Prescription.' My husband bought a half dozen bottles to start with. I began to improve at once and before these bottles were gone I was perfectly well and have been well ever since."—Mrs. Hattie Westinger, 209 Sumner St.

HEADACHE WAS RELIEVED

Miss Lady Says She Was Suffering With Constipation and Sick Headaches Until She Used Black-Draught.

Miss Lady, Mo.—"I have used Black-Draught, when needed, for the past twelve years," recently said Mrs. J. M. Grimes, who lives in "Green Valley Farm," near here, "and it has a perfect satisfaction."

"I began taking it for a bad case of indigestion. I would get constipated and feel just miserable—sluggish, tired, and had taste in my mouth. I felt like doing anything, and my head would begin hurting and I would have a severe sick headache."

"I don't know who started me to use Black-Draught, but it did the trick. It just seemed to cleanse me. Very soon I felt like new."

"I found Black-Draught so easy to take and easy acting, I began using it and would not have sick headaches any more."

"I can recommend Black-Draught highly for liver trouble, headache or constipation."

"Black-Draught leads to a great deal of ease among those who neglect to take it without delay. The poisons absorbed may cause great pain much danger to your general health."

"Up Theiford's Black-Draught in case and use it promptly for relief of the first sign of constipation."

VOLUME 3 CLANTON, ALABAMA, JANUARY 31, 1924 NUMBER 21.

THE TEMPLAR SOCIETY

The Clanton Chapter of the Templar Society, at 8 o'clock, on Tuesday night, Jan. 29, 1924, at the home of Mrs. L. E. Long, 101 N. Main St., Clanton, Ala., gave a most interesting and well-attended affair. The evening was spent in the dining room of the Exchange Hotel, which was one of the most beautiful of the kind in the South. The room was most tastefully decorated with flowers and ferns, and the tables were set with the finest of silverware and glassware. The chairs were soon filled with guests, and the evening was spent in the most enjoyable manner. The program was most interesting, and the guests were most entertained. The evening was most enjoyable, and the guests were most entertained. The evening was most enjoyable, and the guests were most entertained.

KILLED BY FALLING TIMBER

Last Friday the body of Mr. R. L. McKinnon was buried at Cane Creek church. The deceased was the son of Mr. Dan McKinnon, who is living now on Route 8, but who has, for a number of years, been a resident of the Verbena community. The young man who was killed has been away from home for two or three years, and the best information we have is that he was employed by a company of Alvin Ark. and was, in some manner, caught by falling timber and killed. The body was shipped home for burial and is now taking the last long sleep in the Cane Creek cemetery, near the home of his family. The editor has known Mr. Dan McKinnon for a number of years and extends to him and his stricken family his sincere sympathy in this sad affliction.

TEA ROOM TO MOVE

Mrs. C. L. Branch will move her Tea and Coffee room from its present location across the railroad, into the new quarters just prepared for her next door to the Best Shoe Shop. Hot Coffee, tea and chocolate will still be served, also a quick lunch counter will be added where you can get a hot lunch at short notice. She will continue to serve all kinds of sandwiches.

PROPERTY OWNERS NOTICE

ALL of you who wish to have your own sidewalk paving, done, if you will see me right away before I move my machinery away I can save you money. C. B. COX

NOTICE OF ELECTION

An election will be held in the several polling places in the State of Alabama, by the Democratic Party, on Tuesday, March 11, 1924, between the hour of eight o'clock and five P. M., to express the preference of the Democrats of Alabama for the nominees of the Democratic Party for President of the United States, to be elected at the general election of delegates from the State of Alabama to the National Democratic Convention to be held on June 24, 1924.

LET'S GO AFTER IT

There is another good opening now for some southern town or community to secure the location of a 160,000 pound cotton mill with a capital behind it of $2,000,000. This concern is located now in Massachusetts but is going to move south. The data has been furnished our Commercial Club and they are going to take the matter up at once with this concern. We hope every citizen in the town and county will cooperate with them in every way possible in trying to land this mill.

PROMINENT MARRIAGE AT VERBENA

Ex-Governor B. B. Comer and Miss Mary Carr Gibson to Wed in February. GIBSON-COMER—Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Lanier Gibson announce the engagement of their sister, Mary Carr, to former Governor Braxton Bragg Comer, the marriage to take place at high noon Thursday, Feb. 7, at their home, "Oakside" Verbena, Ala. The above announcement appeared in the Birmingham News last Sunday. Both of the contracting parties are prominent citizens of Alabama and are widely known over the South. Hon. B. B. Comer is, perhaps, more known to the people of the state than any other public man now living. As Governor, whether you approved of his administration or not, you will be compelled to admit that he is the one man in our state in recent years, who has lived up officially to the promises he gave the people during his campaign. No one will dispute the fact that he was always true to his word and gave us just exactly the kind of an administration that he promised and, while a good many people took issue with some of his policies at the time, the general opinion now is that he made one of the best governors that Alabama has ever had. Later on he served as a United States Senator for Alabama and again his shrewdness of purpose and close attention to business, made him a power in that body and won for him a warm place in the hearts of his constituents. The name of Miss Mary Carr Gibson of Verbena, is known and esteemed far beyond the confines of her native state. She has been a very prominent worker in the cause of Sunday School, church and civic endeavor all over the country, and is known and loved by thousands of good people among whom she has labored. Miss Gibson is the sister of Mr. Sid L. Gibson, of Verbena, and resides there with her brother and family. This marriage will be one of the most prominent social functions that has occurred in Alabama in years and will attract attention over a wide social area.

BUILDING SIDEWALKS

The few sunny days the first of this week put things to moving on the sidewalk work and it begins to look now like we people who have to walk will soon get up out of the mud. We want to see second avenue graveled from the cemetery to the intersection of West street and good paved sidewalks on both sides. Can this great improvement be made this summer.

LET EVERYBODY HELP

The Chamber of Commerce, at their banquet last Tuesday night, took up the matter of going out after a cotton mill for Clanton. This is a matter that has been talked about a great deal here in the past, but, unfortunately, the effort has always ended in talk. What we want to do this time is to go actively to work and secure the location of a mill here. The opportunity is before us. The mills "down east" have their eyes turned to the south and one by one they are moving in this direction. We can secure the active cooperation of the L. & N. railroad company as well as the vast pull and influence of the wonderful publicity department of the Alabama Power Company. Both of these vast and influential organizations are willing to help us, and both of them have immense organizations devoted to advertising and pushing the south, through which we can get all the help we need if we go after it right. It will be necessary as a preliminary to gaining the assistance of these companies, for our Chamber of Commerce to take official charge of the effort and to get in touch with them, as an official body, as a guarantee that the movement is in good faith and will be backed up by the general public. When it comes to boosting and building our town there is no room for indifference or factions. Let every person do their part and let's get this cotton mill.

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT GIVES INFORMATION

As a result of several months of investigation and study by experts of the Post Office Department, Postmaster General New today issued the first definite, concise and complete program that has ever been put out by the Department for the mailing, transmission and delivery of newspapers. This order is most important. It is far reaching. It gives the same expedition to newspapers as is accorded to first class mail. The order is the result of painstaking effort on the part of the Post Office inspectors, under the direction of First Assistant Postmaster General Bartlett. Carefully worded and minute instructions have been issued to all employees engaged in handling the mails, so that there will be no possibility of misunderstanding the importance of getting newspapers to the reader with a minimum of delay. The essence of the order is that newspapers shall not be mixed with parcels post at any point in their dispatch from the publishers' office until their delivery to the addressees. Papers shall be handled by themselves, and kept in constant transit, not being sent to railway terminals to be reworked. In other words, they are to be handled in the same manner as first class mail. An important feature of the order is that no publication shall be given any less efficient or less expeditious treatment than at present. That means that publications other than newspapers will not suffer one iota from this progressive innovation, made by the Post Office Department. Another striking feature of the order is the elimination of sacks of mail which are known to the business world as "mixed mail." Sacks of mixed mail some times contain letters, papers, and parcels post, and often times the entire contents were treated as parcels post. This order will prevent a recurrence of that condition. Another important feature of the order is that postmasters are required to notify publishers in each instance when they do not hit the dispatch which they advertise to hit; also to notify publishers when they are sending to wrong addresses and to the addresses of deceased persons. Publishers will also be notified when they are putting up their mail in an incorrect manner. Under the new system, newspapers will be made up in separate sacks plainly labeled with the word "NEWS-PAPER." If there are only a few copies of newspapers at the point of dispatch, they will be placed in pouches with first class mail or in separate sacks, even though the sacks are only partially filled. This order means much to the American public. It is one of the most important and far reaching steps in post office history. It is for the benefit of those who desire to have their newspapers placed before them at as early a moment as possible. This should keep both the city and rural population in closer and quicker touch with their several fields of activities.

THE ROOSEVELT HONOR.

The name Roosevelt carries personal character and individual honor, with rare if any exceptions. Theodore Roosevelt inherited and transmitted honor. Archie Roosevelt was in the employ of or associated with the Sinclair Oil Companies. When he found the company was charged with dishonorable dealings with the government, he went forward and gave testimony. Nothing less could be expected of the son of Theodore Roosevelt. The above clipping taken from the Alabama Traveler, so perfectly expresses our sentiment that we delight to reprint it. One would be shocked indeed if a descendant of such a fearless, brave and truthful man as Theodore Roosevelt should fail to be honest or do a dishonorable deed. Mrs. R. J. Jones and Miss Fannie Vance went down to Montgomery Sunday to see Mr. R. J. Jones who is confined in a Montgomery Hospital. We regret to learn that Mr. Jones is not doing well. Mr. W. J. Billingsley, of Thorsby, was here Sunday. Mr. Billingsley has served the county as a member of the Board of Education for several years.

COHEN CASE WILL CAUSE SHOWDOWN

Coolidge Wants Solid G. O. P. Phalanx To Push His Nomination. WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—The Coolidge administration, it was learned Monday, has determined to make a clearcut political issue of enforcement of the fifteenth amendment to the constitution—that amendment which grants equal rights and privileges to persons, regardless of race, color, or previous condition or servitude. The issue will be brought to a head by the fight in the Senate over the nomination of Walter T. Cohen, negro, to be comptroller of customs at New Orleans, La., once failing of confirmation and once actually rejected during the Harding administration. President Coolidge has resubmitted Cohen's nomination to the Senate and he plans to wield the big stick over Republican senators in an effort to secure a definite party lineup on his confirmation. The White House has been the scene of a number of quiet conferences wherein alleged abridgment of the rights of the negro in the Southern states was the dominating topic of discussion. The latest of the conferences, held today with one of the most prominent Republican leaders outside of Congress, resulted in the decision to fight for Cohen's nomination, and incidentally the principle of equality for the colored race. Public Career Stormy. Administration leaders, it was said following the conference, convinced that Cohen's color is the only bar to his appointment so far as previous action by the Senate has shown, are planning to publicly line up Republican senators as against the Democratic senators in a final showdown on the appointment. Cohen's career in public life has been stormy. On Nov. 22, 1922, the late President Harding gave him a recess appointment as comptroller of customs at New Orleans. On Nov. 22, 1922, just after the special session of Congress had convened, his nomination was sent to the Senate, but failed of confirmation. Again, when the regular session of Congress opened, his nomination was resubmitted on Dec. 6, 1922. The subject of much underground comment, the two Louisiana senators, Broussard and Ransdell, finally declared he was personally objectionable to them and his nomination was rejected on March 1, 1923. Harding, on May 12, 1923, immediately after adjournment of Congress, again tendered the negro a recess commission under which he is now serving. President Coolidge, on Dec. 10, 1923, for the third time submitted Cohen's name to the Senate for consideration, and with it, determined to force a political showdown on the question of equality for the negro.—Birmingham News.

THE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE HAVE BANQUET

Large Attendance and Much Enthusiasm Manifested. Some Notable Traits. Tuesday night the dining room of the Exchange Hotel again put on its gala attire to greet a meeting of the local Chamber of Commerce and to lay before them a banquet, which proved a wonderful triumph and tribute to the cuisine art of that popular hostelry. Plates were laid for forty guests and all of them were put to good use. Col. J. Osmond Middleton was made toast master and the wisdom of his selection was more than demonstrated by the felicitous manner in which he handled the occasion. A splendid spirit of enterprise and progress brooded over the entire crowd. Many local business and professional men arose and gave short pungent talks that were full of optimism and voiced a deep spirit of enthusiasms determination to push onward and upward in civic development. Vice-president Mitchell of the Ala. Power Co. was present and delivered a short address replete with encouragement and full of facts and data upon which intelligent efforts for securing industrial developments can be predicated. Mr. Mitchell is not a dreamer but a successful man of affairs, who has actually done the great things he tells one about and is, most emphatically, a builder and not a fault finder. His talk was received by the Chamber of Commerce with earnest attention, and did a great deal towards dispelling any clouds of timidity or doubt that may have lingered in their minds as to the possibilities of Clanton and Chilton county. His was a great little talk and will bear good fruit. Hon. Loyd Tate, of Wetumpka, was present as an honorary guest and was called on for a few remarks, and the consensus of opinion was that he certainly complied with the request. From what we have seen of Col. Tate in the court house when he was our prosecuting attorney, it must be an awful ordeal to sit in the prisoners box and hear him tell how mean and low down you are, but Tuesday night he displayed the other side of his dual disposition, and for all around good will, geniality and conspicuous wit and humor, he can't be beat. He brought down the house, and if laughter is really an aid to digestion, his speech was certainly a boon to that bunch of feeders. The entire affair passed off as a conspicuous success and all of those who were so fortunate as to be present, are loud in voicing their praise of everything connected with the entertainment. More occasions like this will help a great deal in building up our town and county. (The editor of the News acknowledges with gratitude an invitation to be present and regrets deeply that sickness kept him away. His heart is always with any move that is looking for the advancement of Clanton and Chilton county.) Reverend T. J. Deason filled his regular appointment at Bethlehem in Elmore county last Sunday.

ALABAMA NEWS HAPPENINGS

Resume of the More Important Events of Interest Condensed To An Epitomized Form.

Times have changed since the outraged youngster who was switched at school sought revenge in drawing a caricature of the teacher, who wielded the rod, on the corner fence, according to a report received by C. E. Johnson, state fire marshal. The substance of the report was that Mack and Jarius Norton, aged 13 and 11, respectively, have made an alleged confession implicating themselves as having applied the torch which destroyed the handsome town school building at Arton as a protest against a whipping administered to them in connection with compulsory attendance at school.

Alabama will have the greatest game preserve and recreation ground in the whole South, and one of the notable forest parks of the entire United States, according to statements made by Game and Fish Commissioner I. T. Quinn. "I have practically concluded an agreement," said the commissioner, "with the National Forest Service officials by which the United States Forest Reserve of 105,000 acres located in Wilcox, Lawrence and Franklin counties will be transformed into a great public game preserve for the benefit of the citizens of Alabama."

A conference between Governor Haden and members of the state highway commission, during which the commission's road building plan for the present year was discussed, was announced. The members of the state bond commission will be held at the capital on February 5. At this meeting the bond commission will determine whether or not additional good roads bonds should be issued to provide money for this year's road building program.

The Alabama Public Service commission has filed with the interstate commerce commission a petition asking for modification, suspension, vacation or annulment of the orders of the interstate commerce commission in the case of the Alabama power company. This case is one of the most noted in recent Alabama history, and it is claimed that the decision of the interstate commerce commission in this case will seriously hamper the Alabama commission in revising Alabama intrastate rates.

Plans have been perfected for building a modern hotel at Shiloh military park, on the Tennessee River below Florence. The hotel will be named "Pine Rest," and it will have 22 rooms, equipped with all modern conveniences. It is the hope of those behind the enterprise to make Shiloh an attractive resort for tourists who annually visit the historic battle ground of Shiloh.

Following a thorough inspection of all war material assigned by the government to the state highway department for use in the building of roads in Alabama, the state highway commission, after consideration of the matter announced that 100 motor trucks will be retained for use in road maintenance throughout Alabama. These trucks will be worked out of Montgomery, and will be taken to various portions of the state.

Repeal of the preferential primary law passed by the legislature at its last session will be the object of the woman's department of the Alabama State Federation of Labor, which has just been organized with headquarters at 416 Twenty-first street, north, Birmingham. Mrs. Sallie Osborne Cooper is general chairman and Mrs. Florence P. Lewis, secretary of the new organization.

A whiskey still, equipped with a whistle, the first one ever captured in Alabama, was seized near Glover's Bend. The still, with a capacity of 250 gallons, was made from a large boiler. Raiding officers said it was one of the most complete they had ever seen and cleverly concealed. Water from a nearby spring was supplied by a hose 400 feet long.

The Florence Chamber of Commerce has accepted the recommendation of the budget committee for the outline of the work for the coming year and allotted to the Tennessee River Improvement Association, $10,000.

J. Lindsay Pope, former police official of Anniston, was perhaps fatally shot in the office of Chief of Police George W. Rutledge by Lee Fowler, karageman. Pope was shot through the abdomen. An arm was broken by another shot. Fowler was lodged in the county jail.

The poultry business in Etowah county is to be boosted by the establishment of 10 demonstration farms under the supervision of experts from the state department of agriculture. co-operation hog sale was held recently by the Hog Sales Association at the pens in West Tröy. Several out-of-town buyers were present and the bidding was good. Three hundred and thirteen hogs were sold and bought $5.50 per cwt.

Montgomery water rates will be given a boost of about 50 per cent by the city commission. The present rate is $5 and the new rate will be $4.50. For this rate each consumer is allowed 20,000 gallons of water. The rate for each thousand gallons above 20,000 is 15 cents, and it was understood this rate will be increased to 25 cents under the new program.

No license for any dealer handling food or drinks for human consumption can be issued until a sanitary permit has been obtained from the health department, or an application for such a permit made and an order from the health department recommending the issuance of a license has been obtained, according to C. E. Armstrong, city comptroller of Birmingham.

An additional city carrier has been added to the postoffice force at the Sheffield office, and a new route for free delivery of mail in the city is now being service. The extension of free delivery service was authorized by the postoffice department at the request of Postmaster Fontaine Little, who is enlarging the local postal service in keeping with the growth of the city.

Some very fine pecan trees of the Schley variety, owned by Greensboro citizens, are suffering from a disease which Auburn experts pronounce to be scab. The owner has been advised to cut down the trees, disinfect the land, then plant other varieties than the ones infected, as they are particularly liable to this trouble.

Following a survey of Sand Island at the mouth of Mobile River, Surgeon General Hugh S. Cummings, of the United States Public Health Service, announced that he will recommend to the present Congress the establishment of a quarantine station here. A bill providing for the station at a cost of $500,000 has been introduced.

After deliberating for about an hour, the jury trying the case of Robert P. Ferguson, of Jacksonville, former federal prohibition officer, charged with the murder of Chamber McAlpine during a raid in Cleburne County about two years ago, returned a verdict of not guilty.

Joe Lanza, who killed Herschel Hendon in a fist fight in Florence last October, was taken to the reform school at East Lake, near Birmingham, several days ago. Lanza is an Enslay boy, but was spending some time with his uncle in Sheffield when the trouble occurred.

Opelika has a splendid chance of securing a new half million dollar cotton mill. Certain large textile interests have made a concrete proposition to locate a new mill at Opelika by furnishing $100,000, the people of Opelika to furnish $150,000. Another party will furnish $100,000.

At a meeting of the directory of the Junior Chamber of Commerce of Anniston decision was made to lease the old auditorium building at Fourteenth and Wilma avenue and transform it into a community athletic center.

Superintendent Leslie Woodall of the Southern Railway at Sheffield has received orders from the office of the general superintendent to proceed at once with the work on the underpass on the concrete highway between Sheffield and Florence.

A citation has been issued by the public service commission to the Southern Railroad and Northern Alabama Railroad to show cause why they should not establish adequate depot facilities at Parrish.

Townley had a costly fire, originating in the Nix grocery store. The Townley theater and restaurant were practically destroyed, as well as the grocery store.

Forty-five instances of twins and one set of triplets took up their residence in Birmingham during the year 1923, according to the annual report of the city health department.

Hugh Dale has been appointed acting postmaster at Camden. The President nominated Grover C. Warrick to be postmaster at Millry, and L. E. Osborn to be postmaster at Vina.

Dr. F. C. McCloskey, chiropractor, of Selma, charged with practicing chiropractic without a license, made bond for $1,000 covering five indictments returned by the grand jury.

Gov. W. W. Brandon has paroled Hubert Montgomery, Morgan county, and J. Y. Thornton, Etmore county, from hard labor sentences imposed for violation of the prohibition law.

The Huntsville city council has passed on its first reading an ordinance providing for the abolition of the offices of city license inspector and water meter reader, positions now held by Walter B. Sanders and James Hutchens.

A special 3-mill school tax was levied for three years in School District No. 41, in Geneva county, which includes the town of Hacoada, at an election held there last week. The proceeds will be used to erect a modern school building to replace the present structure.

SKIM MILK IS VALUABLE IN COOKING

Children Should Have a Regular Allotment of Milk.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

People used to think skim milk was only good for the pigs. The United States Department of Agriculture tells us that except for the butterfat and vitamin A, skim milk is as valuable as other milk. It enriches soups, sauces, or puddings, and may be given to the children if butter is used elsewhere in the diet to make good the loss of the cream. Each child should have its regular allotment of whole milk, but left over skim milk may be given to them in addition.

When you have sour milk on hand of course you can always make it into cottage cheese. But it would pay you some day to spend a few hours with your favorite cook book collecting recipes in which sour milk is called for. Look under biscuits, ginger bread, pancakes, muffins, and cakes, and then ask your friends and particularly your friends' grandmothers, for their best sour milk recipes too.

Children Often Eat More if It Is Little Different.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Children will often eat more bread if it is just a little different. Raisin bread is a welcome variation of the staff of life—whether intended to tempt the younger members of the family or to serve for lunch or tea, or at any time when a slightly sweet bread is acceptable.

One loaf of raisin bread may be made by using the following ingredients:

- | | |
|---|--|
| 1 cupful lukewarm liquid (preferably milk). | 3 to 4 cupfuls sifted flour. |
| 1 teaspoonful salt. | 1/2 cupful seeded raisins. |
| 2 table-spoonfuls sugar. | 1/2 cupful liquid yeast is used. |
| 2 table-spoonfuls shortening. | deduct amount of it from the rest of the liquid. |
| 1/2 to 1/4 yeastcake. | |
| or 2 to 4 table-spoonfuls liquid yeast. | |

Either the "straight dough" or "sponge" method of mixing may be used, the United States Department of Agriculture states. In the first method the dough is mixed at night if the smaller amount of yeast is used or in the morning if the larger amount is to be used. This is a matter of the housewife's convenience. The sponge method of mixing is described in Farmers' Bulletin 1130, "Baking in the Home," which is free on application to the United States Department of Agriculture. The method for making an overnight straight dough is also given in this bulletin. The short process straight dough is given below.

Short Process or Straight Dough.
Soften the yeast with a small amount of lukewarm liquid. To the rest of the liquid add the salt, sugar and shortening. Add the yeast and mix all together. Measure the sifted flour into a bowl and blend with the liquid. If too soft to knead, add more flour until of the proper consistency. Knead five to ten minutes or until smooth, elastic and no longer sticky. Cover with a lid or plate and place where it will be away from drafts and at a uniform temperature of 80 to 85 degrees F. Let rise until about double its original bulk or until a slight touch of the finger leaves an impression. This should happen within one or two hours if the yeast is in good condition and the temperature right.

Cut down the dough from the sides of the bowl and knead. Should the dough be too soft, add flour, a little at a time, kneading until it is smooth, elastic and free from large gas bubbles. If the dough be too stiff, add a little water, working it in well, and knead until the dough no longer sticks to the fingers or bowl. Cover and set aside in the same warm place for an hour or an hour and a half, or until very light and at least double in bulk.

When the dough is ready for molding cut down, add the raisins previously dredged with flour, knead them in well, form into loaf shape, and place in greased tin. When quite light, bake in moderate oven about 50 minutes.

If desired, the top of the loaf may be brushed with a solution of 1 table-spoonful of sugar in 1/2 cupful of milk or hot water, immediately upon removal from the oven. A delicious raisin loaf is made by using one-half graham and one-half white flour in the above recipe.

New Aluminum Process

A new method of manufacturing aluminum, whereby clay is mixed with pyrites and heated to about 500 centigrade, has been invented in Germany.

Won't Boil Over

Always add a small piece of butter to milk puddings when cooking them, as this not only improves the taste but prevents the pudding from boiling over.

Substantial Salads for Luncheon or Tea

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Starchy vegetables—white potatoes, sweet potatoes, dasheens, or rice—with or without green or raw vegetables, make substantial salads, which with cold meat make the main course at lunch or supper.

There are innumerable ways of using cooked meat, fish, poultry or eggs for salads, and for adding cheese flavor, especially cottage or cream cheese, to other materials. Figs, prunes, or peppers may be stuffed with cottage or cream cheese and served on lettuce.

Preparing an Appetizing Salad for Noonday Meal.

with mayonnaise dressing. Balls of cheese rolled in nuts or mixed with pimento may be added to pineapple or any mixed fruit salad. Lean meat is good if boiled, cut up hot into blocks, mixed with chopped onion, celery, peppers or other savory vegetables, then seasoned with French dressing and packed under a weight in a cold place for several hours before being served on lettuce. Fish salads offer one of the best means of serving such canned foods as salmon, tuna fish, and sardines, or leftovers of fish meat, crab meat, lobster or shrimp.

Plan to Cook Sheep or Calves' Tongues

An appetizing and unusual dish may be prepared when several sheep's or calves' tongues are obtainable at one time, says the United States Department of Agriculture. Here is the recipe:

Sheep's Tongues.

- | | |
|-----------------------------------|-------------------|
| 6 sheep's tongues | into small pieces |
| 2 carrots cut into 2 small pieces | 2 small cucumbers |
| 1 pint boiling water | pickles, chopped |
| 1 large onion cut | Salt and pepper |

Scald the tongues, throw them into cold water, and remove the skins. Cover the bottom of a baking dish with bacon cut into fine strips, place over this the tongues, season with salt and pepper, and cover with another layer of sliced bacon. Add the minced carrots and onion, salt and pepper to taste, and about a pint of boiling water or broth. Cover the dish and cook slowly for about three hours. Take out the tongues and place them on a hot dish, strain the sauce, reheat, add three small cucumber pickles, sliced thin. Stir well and let the sauce boil up once. Pour over the tongues and serve.

Cranberry and Raisin Pie

Mix three cupfuls of cranberries and one cupful of seeded raisins together. Stir two table-spoonfuls of flour with two cupfuls of sugar, add two cupfuls of boiling water, then the fruit, a pinch of salt and a teaspoonful of vanilla. Bake in two crusts.

ALABAMA POWER COMPANY

There is a wide difference in "investing" and "speculating." SPECULATING means taking chances, running risks, the idea of quick returns in large profits—it is rightfully termed "stock gambling."

INVESTING does not involve the taking of blind chances, means putting your money to work in some firmly established earning business, that will insure a reasonable return, with the element of chance eliminated. And that is just what you get when you buy stock in the Alabama Power Company.

The Cumulative Preferred Stock of Alabama Power Company has never failed to pay a dividend every three months, at yield of more than 7% annually.

THINK THIS OVER. Could we afford to sell, to the people upon whose good will and patronage our business depends, shares of stock in which we did not have the utmost confidence?

This stock has distinct advantages that merit your investigation. Ask any employee, or communicate with Investment Department, Alabama Power Company, Brown-Marx Bldg., Birmingham, Ala.

Guard Against "Flu" With Musterole

Influenza, Grippe and Pneumonia usually start with a cold. The moment you get those warning aches, get busy with good old Musterole. Musterole is a counter-irritant that chokes congestion (which is what a cold really is) and stimulates circulation. It has all the good qualities of the old-fashioned mustard plaster without the danger.

Just rub it on with your finger-tips. First you will feel a warm tingle as the caloric oil penetrates the pores, then something cooling sensation and tickle relief.

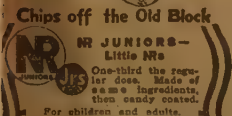

Place Musterole handy for emergency use. It may prevent serious illness.

To Mothers: Musterole is now made in milder form for babies and small children. Ask for Children's Musterole. 35c and 60c, in jars and tubes.

"I heard you say the seas are wide, and far—far the way to their secret places. It is a chance, Jean." The count seized his arm. For the lieutenant, whom Mademoiselle Lestron had now joined, was returning to them. "Come! I reimburse the gentlemen of New Orleans who were with me in the Grand venture. I give you the Seraphine—without condition."

"Without condition?" Monsieur Sazarc stared oddly at him. Then at Mademoiselle Lestron who had run to them brightly, vivaciously, as if all was arranged, as if the black-hulled schooner and its mysteries would, in an hour, be vanished in the seas . . . and she gladdened at his passing.

"Ah, yes!" Sazarc bowed: "without condition, Monsieur de Almonaster!" And he bowed again to her, and took her finger-tips and pressed them to his lips. She could not understand this fervor which had a touch of satire. Nor the smile in his somber eyes; his turning away while Monsieur de Almonaster made hurried arrangements with the American lieutenant. Even now they had sent the boat away to apprise the Hornet, and to fetch the improvised crew which would be glad for a berth back to the Indies.

Monsieur Sazarc stood idly apart, twisting his sword knot, as if nothing any longer was affair of his. When Alderman Dominique made some query as to the dead seaman forward he shrugged. That was all.

He stroled forward to stare down at the nine dead buccaners, and did not return until the Hornet's boats with a crew of strange half-breed men, and two obsequious, grateful, petty officers, were at the Seraphine's side.

While the other party was descending to the small boat he still stood apart. Dominique supposed he was going, dumb hurt as the alderman was at thought of the chance that an instant cry, "Lafitte!" would ring on the Hornet's quarter-deck.

Mademoiselle Lestron thought he was going, for he stood close by the ladder as she was helped away. But he detained her suddenly at the rail.

"A moment, Mademoiselle—" He exhibited to her a small bracelet. Curiously inland, gold of three colors, and a number of pearls . . . the gift of a queen.

Mademoiselle Lestron cried out in joyous wonder. She had never seen Marie Antoinette's bracelet since the night she saw the ragged fellow kiss it in the emperor's cabin, when the mutilated sent her away.

"My bracelet! Monsieur—" All a child's lovely eagerness to grasp a toy was in her face and the hand she reached for it.

Monsieur Sazarc, however, drew it back gravely: "Ah—no!"

"But—my bracelet, Monsieur? I want it!"

"That is the point. It is yours, and you cannot have it."

"Nom de Dieu!" She stared at him incredulously. "Why?"

"It must be stolen. It is essential as a matter of honor."

De Almonaster and Dominique were in the small boat. They looked up astonished; and the girl sat down by them trying to keep back hot puzzled tears.

There was an adieu or so waved from the Hornet's officers in the small boats as they hovered off the schooner's side. Monsieur Sazarc bowed. Bowed to them all with apparently the same debonair dismissal.

Mademoiselle Lestron turned to De Almonaster with a wild whisper. "He is not coming! He is not coming with us!"

For no sooner had Mademoiselle Lestron left the Seraphine that day in 1821, than Monsieur Sazarc turned and ran down in the emperor's cabin. He burst into the doorway of the emperor's stateroom and flung the golden trinket upon the lace and silken coverlet of the emperor's bed.

"There—robber!" he shouted, somewhat impatiently. "Her bracelet—stolen—taken against her will! Are you satisfied?"

The man on the bed looked at it quietly with glittering eyes above his hollow cheeks. He still had his boots on, and the imperial couch was rather the worse for the mud and dried blood upon it. But now he sat up straighter and gestured with superb authority.

"Well, then! You lost her—you will never see her again!"

"I lost her. And neither you nor I will ever see her again!" He looked at the painter of the rue Royale more composedly. "Eh, Jarvis? What should you and I ask of life? Youth turns to youth always—and a fine fellow this De Almonaster. You and I will never see her again."

"The devil take me if I saw her at all, very clearly. Whether her eyes are brown, or merely very dark blue—and her hair. . . Eh, well! She never saw me very clearly either. Which is most fortunate. She will remember longest the one who was the greatest mystery. Sir—another peg o' brandy."

"Here—scum o' the seas! Your drink—plunderer o' the ports!"

"Monsieur Lafitte!" the jester crushed back against the emperor's pillows and touched a handkerchief of elegant linen to his lips delicately—"you say I shall die before morning?"

"It is certain as anything I know, Jarvis."

"Jarvis?" The jester grew quite solemn: "Wait a moment, Monsieur Lafitte. He straightened his body a bit: "Now—bring me the cutlass of old Gorgio!"

"I brought it—here," answered Monsieur Lafitte obediently.

"The pistol of Bohon!"

"By your side, there—cleaned and loaded—"

"The head scarf of Nez Coupe!"

"On the pillow by you. And see—the carrying of Johannes—"

"Where the devil is the other one?"

"I could not get the other one unless I cut the bo'sun's left ear—"

"Name o' evil!—why don't you obey me!" He thrust out a skinny finger and shook it with a lordly wrath.

Monsieur Lafitte shrugged exculpatingly.

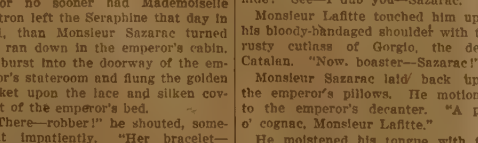

"Eh, well! Can't you be satisfied? You have plundered them all! You have laid a solid shot through a good ship, killed your man on a red deck—bounced, swaggard; robbed nine buccaners in a row—and looted a jewel from a woman!"

"Not so soon. A pot o' gold, that also is essential. Fetch it at once—"

The master shrugged; then with a patient sigh, he scattered from his pockets an arc of Spanish doubloons across the silken coverlet. "There, corsair! That is all I have 'to be robbed of. Now, rest, Mad John."

"Another thing. The name—Sazarc—it was the name she loved."

"Perdition! The other man turned to the bedside: "Well, then—be Sazarc. Monsieur Sazarc was also a ghost. He never dared step from the shadows to her eye, more than did

"Look, Dearest . . . Sazarc, a Phantom Fading into the Mist!"

Be comforted, old friend! Jean—of the old days—is with you. The others have gone a little time before."

"Sazarc—" murmured the other, and the old plaintive tone came again to him: "I demand that also . . . It is the name she will remember—"

"Well, then! Name o' G—d! Take everything from me—strip me to the hide! See—I dub you—Sazarc!"

Monsieur Lafitte touched him upon his bloody-handged shoulder with the rusty cutlins of Gorgio, the dead Catalin. "Now, doaster—Sazarc!"

Monsieur Sazarc laid back upon the emperor's pillows. He motioned to the emperor's decanter. "A peg o' cognac, Monsieur Lafitte."

He moistened his tongue with the drink fastidiously, and rubbed his unshaven chin. A square of blue hung above him through the open skylight, and against it the snowy burst of sail. He could hear the creak of blocks and gear, the faint shout of sailormen aloft to Clifk, the English lad at the wheel, as the new crew of the emperor's ship set the royals.

"See here!" exclaimed Monsieur Sazarc thoughtfully. "The flag once painted at my studio in the rue Conti—black with the white bones? You will hoist it tomorrow when they all go over."

"Eh? Over!—Well, I understand. Monsieur, the black flag shall be at the peak."

"How many are there in the row by the fo'c'sle, for me to command?"

"Nine. You will make ten, Monsieur Sazarc."

"It must be done by precedence—" ordered the other loftily. "First, I—"

Monsieur Sazarc—with my plunder. It is all to be wrapped in my silk-lined cloak and tied very tightly to his belt—"

"Dieu de Dieu!" whispered the other; and then to himself: "Is this the fever? . . . the brandy? . . . or the secret soul of my friend?"

Monsieur Sazarc suddenly thundered to recall his lieutenant's mind.

"Silence! I was saying—in presence of First, Monsieur Sazarc. Then, Deleche, the admiral; Johannes, the bo'sun—and then the others to the green water. I order—you will obey."

"I will obey, Monsieur Sazarc."

The last adventurer turned away as if he had a petition to offer. It was hard to conceal that he desired to keep one little thing for himself out of this ravishment.

"See here—Corsair. The little bracelet which you ordered must be stolen? Is it needful that it go to the bottom of the sea with you tomorrow?"

Monsieur Sazarc fixed his bright restless eyes upon the other's somber attentive face. The flicker of a wise ruthless smile came to him.

"It is needful. It is my plunder. It was—hers. Name o' names! There can be no discussion! Pin it to my new waistcoat—do you understand?"

The last man turned away from the emperor's bedside. He took his snuff absently, and sat down with the air of one who had lost the last battle. Then he looked at the plunder of Monsieur Sazarc upon the emperor's pillow.

"Even the bracelet—" he sighed.

"What a buccanier, this Sazarc. . . and tomorrow he will be less lonely than I!"

Monsieur Sazarc, outstretched with some luxurious peace upon the silken, imperial coverlet, appeared to hear this whisper. He turned to see the other man staring out the open port at the sloop rolling in the gentle seas.

"They have reached the deck," murmured Lafitte absently. "She is in De Almonaster's arms. . . she is crying, or laughing, I cannot say which, but she is waving a little hand to us."

"To Sazarc—I will have that, too," smiled the jester. "My ragged hat has always longed for a tear or a smile from a lady. What riches I have—at the end! Here—Monsieur Lafitte—"

He lifted Mademoiselle Lestron's bracelet and tossed it to the other. "Out of the wealth of my empire and my love I give you this trinket as a keepsake from her and from myself. Sazarc must be generous to the last, eh—Jean?"

"He must fall in nothing," the adventurer lifted the bracelet to his lips and smiled in turn: "He must be as she dreamed from the first. Thank you, Monsieur Sazarc."

And the two watched the distant figures on the Hornet. They could not know what the girl was crying out from her lover's arms:

"Raoul! The Seraphine is not following us! She is sailing eastward after all! . . . Oh, Raoul, what is the mystery?"

"The seas are wide—there are many far, secret places for Monsieur Sazarc," he whispered. "Louise! Dear—est—and always longed for!—you love me! . . . you love me!"

"I love you," she smiled out of her tears, glad for his arm, his tenderness, his understanding, when her eyes turned again to the black schooner with the gold line along the water. It had broken out to sunny sail; it was growing smaller, fainter, in the east, like a lily floating in the sun-wash of the gulf.

"In New Orleans you will know everything," Raoul smiled, out of his joy. "I will tell you everything—and of my love again! Look, dearest—"

Sazarc, a phantom fading into the mist!

"Ah, but my little bracelet! In the end, perhaps I shall understand everything except why he stole my bracelet!"

Which was exactly the way things fell out.

Long years afterward Madame, the Countess de Almonaster's children—and then the children of her children—stood before a shabby little shop which was once Pierre Maspero's gambling-house, and looked across at the faded facade of the gray house which their forefathers built for the exiled emperor. They went also, as a Sunday afternoon, among the tourists, to the low tomb in the old St. Louis cemetery where the city had carved a flattering inscription from Voltaire's "Henriade" to the memory of an honest councilor:

"The Victor of a Hundred Fights on Sea and Land."

Ah, what jests may live in stone! Madame, the countess, could relate everything to her children, except about the bracelet of Marie Antoinette.

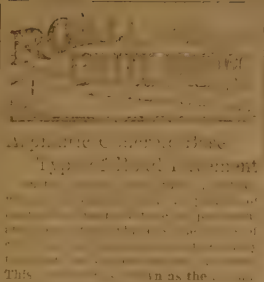

At times, from the gallery of her great house on the Esplanade in old New Orleans, Madame would look across the mighty Mississippi to the dark and flooded forests of Barataria beyond which lay the blue gulf into which Monsieur Sazarc vanished forever from the world of men.

Eh, bien! The adventurer might come again some day with her bracelet . . . but over Monsieur's shoulder would peer his last ragged follower, or whispering that a jester, too, might love!

[THE END.]

Troops Under British Flag

Great Britain supports a standing army of 237,500 men and a reserve of 237,500. The untrained reserve is 4,655,500. She also has 17,000 troops in Egypt and 50,000 in Canada, with an available man power of 1,351,000. There are 220,000 in New Zealand and 1,130,000 in the South African possessions. Most of these troops include trained veterans of the World war.

THOSE AWFUL RESOLUTIONS

Last Monday week ago the Chilton County Republican Executive Committee held an important and ominous meeting at the Court House.

They resolved and resolved on things past, things present and things to come all in a ridiculous and vain attempt to escape the one all important issue that confronts their party in the South, and will confront them, for all the years to come, so long as the South retains its glorious citizenship of 100 per cent Americans.

After camouflaging the situation with all of the meaningless resolutions their ingenuity could devise, they proceeded to anathematize, with all of the mendacious bitterness of their warped imagination, the editor of the Chilton County News, and for what cause?

Simply for printing well known facts that all of the sophistry of the wisest and shrewdest heads of their party can not successfully deny nor controvert.

We charged O. D. Street, and ALL of his followers with belonging to, and being aligned with, what is known as the "black and tan" wing of the republican party. To all people who read and watch the political changes and situations, this is a palpable fact, and needs no argument to establish the truthfulness of it, but it appearing that here in Chilton county, there are a few misguided people who seem to have failed to keep up with the facts, we take this opportunity of giving them the chance to learn the truth, if they wish to know it.

First, we will ask you to carefully read an article in this issue of the News, in regard to the appointment of a negro, named Cohen, to the most important and lucrative Federal job in New Orleans. Note particularly the position of President Coolidge on this matter and the broad statement he makes in regard to the enforcement of the fifteenth amendment and SOCIAL EQUALITY. Ponder this well, and let the world know by your vote and your actions whether you favor social equality or not, for you will be judged by the stand you take.

Again, the Hon. O. D. Street, your leader in Alabama, and the man who is handing out the Federal appointments, would not dare, with all of his "bravery," to come out, over his signature in the press, and deny that he belongs to that bunch and admit that he is opposed to social equality. He knows that if he dared to do that his political head would fall in the basket at one fell swoop.

We will do him the justice to say that we doubt very much that he conscientiously believes in social equality, but he is like a good many other folks, he wants to suck the tit of Federal patronage, while the democrats protect him and his from negro encroachment.

As to where Street and his followers stand, here is an incident, over his own signature, where he goes so far as to read all republicans, who do not belong to the "black and tan" faction, entirely out of the party. This is taken from a correspondence he had with Mr. G. N. King, chairman of the "filly white" executive republican committee in Montgomery county. In this case Mr. Street had secured the appointment, as postmaster at Montgomery, of one Roy A. Lisey, a Georgian, who is not a voter in Alabama, over the heads of some life long republican applicants of Montgomery county, the only reason being that said applicants belonged to the "filly white" or Progressive Roosevelt wing of the party. Hear what he says:

"In the first place, you know that he is an imposter when he signs anything as chairman of the Montgomery county Republican Executive Committee. He is nothing of the sort and never has been."

In reply to this positive statement of Street, Mr. King says:

"Mr. Street states in his letter that I am an imposter in signing myself chairman of the executive committee. I was elected by the white republicans of Montgomery county, as their chairman of the county organization. The committee over which I have the honor to preside, is composed entirely of white men. The other organization is composed entirely of negroes."

No matter how thick your hide is, nor how prejudiced your mind is, you will be obliged to admit, if you belong to the faction represented by the Executive Committee that went through great travail and gave birth to the resolutions published in the Union-Banner last week, that you are a member of the "black and tan" republican organization, sponsored in Alabama by O. D. Street.

Good people, can't you realize that all of the intelligent citizens of the United States understand these facts and know them to be true? This is not democratic propaganda, for the truth of the conditions is emphasized by your President. They are lived up to by O. D. Street and his political life would be forfeit if he denied it. You are the only people we know of, or that you can point to, who do not accept the situation as it is and the fact of the matter is, you make yourself ridiculous when you undertake to deny the facts or get angry because some one refers to it. You don't have to belong to that wing, but just as long as you affiliate with them why try to hide the truth? If you believe in the enforcement of the 15th Amendment with its social equality clause be "brave" and come out in the open and say so. If you are not "cowardly" stand by your colors.

This Committee also was so "brave" that they even personated the editor of the News, W. B. Corley, and stigmatized him as a "coward."

Now, in the first place, allow me to say that W. B. Corley has always been "cowardly" enough to tell the truth and stick to it and has also made it a rule, as in this particular instance, to be able to back up any of his statements with the cold, hard, incontrovertible facts. Also, he has always been "cowardly" enough to stand by his convictions and honest enough to express them when he saw fit.

He has never aspired to any distinction whatever as a champion purveyor of rotten, vulgar billingsgate and the slinging of the vile slime of slander and vituperation. If that is what it takes to qualify as a "brave" man before that wonderful committee, then we plead guilty to their terrible impeachment of "cowardice" and we thank God for the privilege.

Neither has W. B. Corley ever attempted to qualify as a Jesse James, a Rube Burrows, nor a ring-tailed, snorting bully, politically, or otherwise. If characters of that kind are the kind it takes to be a brave in the estimation of this erratic committee then most assuredly W. B. Corley does not intend to ever undertake to acquire that distinction.

If it is "cowardly" to gladly and cheerfully extend to everyone, his or her absolute right to exercise their own free and undisputed opinion in the selection of their religious, social and political creeds, again is he guilty.

At the same time, if to reserve to himself that same right, is construed by them as "cowardly," it would be advisable for them to consult a dictionary in the selection of their epithets.

In conclusion, W. B. Corley stands right where he did before. He has nothing to take back nor qualify. If the absolute truth of his assertions is not clearly apparent to everyone, he can only sympathize with either the ignorance or the perverseness of those who differ.

MIMS-WATTS

Mr. Dave Mims and Miss Etta Watts were married this morning at 9 o'clock at the home of Uncle Doc Wells, who performed the ceremony.

Both of these young people are well known and popular here and have hosts of friends who wish them all kinds of good luck. May happiness ever attend them.

Rev. G. A. Hornady, of the Soldiers Home, was a pleasant visitor to our office yesterday. Our latch string always hangs on the outside for him. Come again and come often.

GASOLINE STILL CLIMBING

As the Senate proceeds to investigate the oil land frauds the oil companies shoot the price of the product towards the sky line.

Another advance of 2 cents per gallon on gasoline is effective now, making a total boost of 6 cents in the past ten days.

Somebody ought to be punished for this robbery, but the only person who will feel the gaff will be the consumers as usual.

FERTILIZER AT LESS THAN HALF PRESENT PRICE IS ASSURED

NINE SOUTHERN POWER COMPANIES OFFER TO ORGANIZE $5,000,000 COMPANIES TO HELP FARMERS

EXPERTS WILL BE IN CHARGE

Agree To Make 50,000 Tons Annually With Sulphur Muscle Shoals Power and Sell at 8 Per Cent Profit.

Chattanooga, Ten.—(Special)—An abundance of cheap fertilizer for Southern farmers produced under the latest known processes by three of the world's greatest experts, an abundance of cheap and continuous electric energy for the South's manufacturing centers, and $148,000.00 to the Government on its war-time investment are the three outstanding features of the latest proposals submitted to Congress by the South's largest power companies for a fifty-year lease on the Muscle Shoals properties.

"The associated public power companies, which have submitted an offer to pay $100,000,000 for a fifty-year lease for Muscle Shoals power under the federal waterpower act, has submitted to congress, through the secretary of war, an offer to organize a corporation to produce fertilizer at Muscle Shoals. Associated with these companies will be Theodore Swann, Dr. Louis C. Jones and Dr. R. F. Bacon, who are scientists and experts in the manufacture of fertilizer and air fixation processes.

"The fertilizer company will have a capital stock of $5,000,000, which will offer to lease nitrate plant No. 1 for fifty years and immediately begin construction of plants and equipment and will agree to produce 500,000 tons of fixed nitrogen in the form of ammonia sulphate, ammonia phosphate or other nitrogenous concentrated fertilizer and also calcium arsenate.

"These fertilizers will be offered for sale to farmers, farmers' organizations and other consumers of fertilizer at 8 per cent profit on the actual cost of production. The fertilizer company will use 100,000 horsepower made available at cost of production by the power companies' offer and will also consume an additional 40,000 horsepower when required for fertilizer production on terms to be fixed by the federal power commission, the power companies offering to provide additional power as necessary.

To Maintain Nitrate Plant.

"The fertilizer company will agree to maintain nitrate plant No. 2, the cyanide plant, in standby condition for the production of nitrate for munitions of war until congress shall otherwise direct. The offer provides that the United States will have the right upon five days' notice to take over the plant of the fertilizer company for national defense. The fertilizer company will file annual statements with the secretary of agriculture showing the costs and profits from fertilizer production, who will also be authorized to appoint a board from farmers and farmers' organizations with authority to examine and audit the books of the fertilizer company to see that profits do not exceed 8 per cent and to make adjustments in event more is charged.

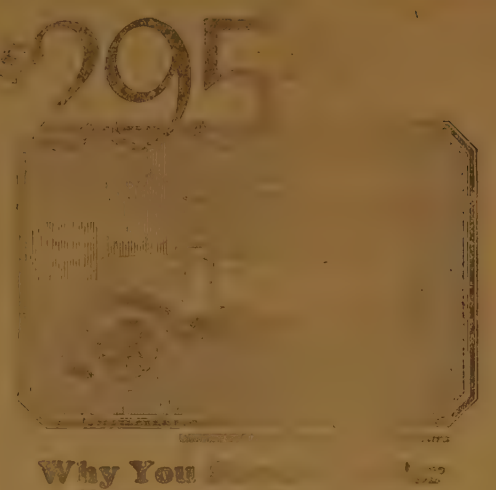

"We are advised by Dr. Bacon and other experts that by the process which will be employed at nitrate plant No. 1, if this offer is accepted, the farmer will be able to obtain his farm fertilizer at less than half the price he is now paying.

"The fertilizer company will immediately begin construction of plants and equipment to produce at least 5,000 tons annually of fixed nitrogen and will increase production to 50,000 tons as rapidly as demands from farmers and other consumers require.

American Process.

"The power companies and their associates have secured the right to employ an American process recently developed and put in successful commercial operation at Niagara Falls by the Matheson Alkali works, being based in large part on the work done over the past few years at the fixed nitrogen research bureau at Washington; also the Osale process originated in Italy and commercially used for a number of years in nitrogen fixation. It will also employ among other phosphoric acid processes, the process perfected by the Federal Phosphorus Company of Anniston, Ala. The Federal Phosphorus Company since 1917 has constructed five furnaces now in operation requiring 20,000-horsepower in the production of phosphoric acid for food products and various calcium, ammonium and sodium phosphates. The development work by this company has been towards the production of concentrated fertilizers. It has smelted more phosphate rock in the electric furnace than any other company in the world."

The Cost of a Car

is no measure of its value

These are the things to consider

The cost of a car depends in large part on volume and efficiency. It is no criterion of value.

Studebaker builds 150,000 fine cars yearly. All of them are Sixes. The main costs are divided by that enormous output. Thus at prices of $975 and up we offer the utmost in quality. We offer maximum values.

Don't judge these cars by prices. Under other conditions they might cost twice as much, yet offer less than these.

Some Major Costs
Quality cars require costly facilities. Studebaker has $50,000,000 invested in modern plants and equipment. $8,000,000 in drop forge plants alone. $10,000,000 in body plants, to carry out the Studebaker standards. There are 12,500 up-to-date machines employed to build these cars. Some are enormously expensive.

Few outputs justify such facilities. Then parts must be bought outside, and profits paid to others.

Studebaker engineering costs $500,000 per year. That to us is $3.33 per car.

Our department of Research and Experiment employs 125 skilled men. It makes 50,000 tests per year to maintain our standards.

Our Bureau of Methods and Standards fixes the requirements for every part and detail. 12,000 inspections are necessary for each car to insure against flaws and mistakes. We employ 1,000 men to make them.

Cars like the Studebaker cannot be built without such facilities, such research, such care. Yet enormous output alone makes them possible at Studebaker prices.

The Best We Know
Studebakers represent the best we know. And with our army of engineers, with our wealth of experience, we probably know what is best.

We use 35 formulas for steels. Each is best suited to certain parts, as proved by years of tests.

On some steels we pay the makers a bonus of 15% to get them exactly right. There is no room to excel us there.

We machine the entire surface of each crank shaft as was done on Liberty Airplane Motors. That extra cost is heavy. But thus we get that perfect balance, that absence of vibration.

We use more Timpken bearings than any other car which costs under $5,600. They cost considerably more than ball bearings.

The Studebaker coach work has been famous for decades. No one can excel it.

The finish is produced by 26 operations, including 15 coats of paint and varnish.

Open cars have real leather cushions. They cost, over imitation leather, about $25 per car.

No closed cars could be more luxurious. That lining of Chase Mohair is made from the soft fleece of Angora goats. A velvet lining would save about two-thirds that cost—up to $100 per car.

Note the completeness of our larger cars. That, as you know, is expensive.

Note the completeness of our larger models. The nickel-plated bumpers, extra disc wheels with cord tire, a steel trunk, a courtesy light, even on the costliest cars.

Nothing is Stinted
Compare part by part with any rival cars. Studebaker will show you some scores of advantages.

Then consider Studebaker history. For 72 years this name has stood for quality. When people rode in carriages, Studebaker built the best. Now those same traditions are applied to motor cars alone.

Consider Studebaker records. Mark how these cars in service have multiplied demand, until people last year paid $200,000,000 for Studebaker cars.

Consider their service records. One Studebaker car, built in 1918, has run 475,000 miles. It is still in active service. It lately made a mid-winter trip from Los Angeles to New York. That means 80 years of average service, of 6,000 miles per year.

What more can you dream of in a motor car than the Studebakers offer?

JUST GO AND SEE
Studebaker is today the leader in the fine-car field.

Studebaker builds more quality cars than any other concern in the world.

Buyers of fine cars last year spent over $200,000,000 for Studebaker models.

The demand for Studebakers has almost trebled in three years—as people found them out.

Then go see them. Compare them with any car you will. Don't spend $1,000 or over without knowing what Studebaker offers. You owe that to yourself.

These facts apply to all Studebakers, of all styles and sizes. The materials used in all classes are alike.

PUT ON THE PRESSURE

Congress is being importuned so constantly and so earnestly from all parts of the country to tighten the immigration laws that, at last they are beginning to move in the matter.

Put on the pressure and let's see if we can not induce them to slow the business until the "melting pot" can catch up.

We have no room in America for anybody but bonafide citizens now for a season.

Polish towns, Chinese towns, Japanese towns, Bolshevick towns, Russian towns, and so on, have no place in America. Naturalized law abiding citizens may do all right, but these clamorous mongrel hosts who are allowed to swarm into our country, and then demand separate schools, separate courts and separate languages from ours, with their allegiance tied to some foreign or bolshevick land across the sea, are not wanted and need to be, not only excluded in future, but those already landed on our shores should be forced to get out and get out at once.

We have no room in America for that kind of cattle.

THE MORALITY OF OFFICIALS

The Charlotte Observer says that eight years of Democratic administration revealed no corruption in office. There has been corruption under the Republican administration, and naturally we Democrats will ring the changes and tell the C. O. P. of today that it reminds us of the unsavory episodes which marked the administration of President Grant.

But let us not deceive ourselves, a corrupt official is not corrupt because he is a Republican, nor irreproachable because he is a Democrat. Sulzer and Walton both are Democrats, but it would be unjust for Republicans to insinuate that their party affiliations were responsible for their misdeeds in office. Small of Illinois, of whom the Chicago Tribune says, "He is the worst Governor the State ever had—he is the worst Governor any state ever had," is a Republican, but he is not the worst Governor Illinois ever had on that account. Would that the matter were so simple.

Sulzer, Walton and Small would have been what they are if their party affiliations had been reversed. It is not a man's party, nor the principles of his party, which makes him a bad man, any more than it is a man's church which makes him bad. If Sulzer, Walton, Small and Fall had lived up to the precepts of their parties and their churches they would today have no reason to feel ashamed.

the local court, as well as the cleanest, both teams working well in everything but accurate shooting. Rutland and Norris starred for the locals, getting 9 and 6 points respectively. Hammell played his usual fast passing game, but luck was against him in shooting. Patterson and DeRamus guarded well, as did Dansby who relieved DeRamus in the last quarter. LeNoir and Glass, two of each, played their usual fast game, but made many unsuccessful long shots.

At the close of the first quarter the score was 3 to 3. Between halves Jimenson had the big end of 9 to 7. In the third, first Jimenson and then Verbena would lead. Near the end on the fourth, however, Rutland and Norris got away for two field goals each, while the big center from Jimenson scored one. This rally sewed up the game for Verbena. Verbena 17, Jimenson 14.

The honors stand even, as Jimenson early in the season handed a defeat to Verbena. A return game will be played at an early date.

SEARGENT LANCASTER GIVEN 18 YEARS

The third trial of Seargent Lancaster which took place, on a change of Venue, in Marion county last week, resulted in conviction and a sentence of 18 years in the penitentiary.

Lancaster was charged with being connected with the lynching of a young man named Baird during the coal strike two years ago.

Baird shot and killed a state trooper who had just killed Baird's father-in-law. He was arrested and jailed and it is alleged that a band of state troopers went to the jail, took him out and shot him to death. Lancaster is charged with having been one of the party who did the lynching.

In two former trials the juries failed to agree and the case was transferred from Walker to Marion county. If he was guilty at all, his sentence is too light. If he is innocent he should have been given his liberty. There can be no just compromise verdict in a cold blooded case of murder.

Messrs. F. A. Gullidge and W. A. Gullidge, of Verbena, were in Clanton the day. These are two stalwart citizens of beat five.

SEVENTH GRADE EX- AMINATION

The regular County Seventh Grade examination will be held at the following points in the County on March 28 and 29, 1924.

Clanton, Ft. Payne, Verbena, Maplesville, Stanton, Isabella, Fairview, and at any other point in the county where a sufficient number of applicants may request same provided this request is made in time to make necessary arrangements for conducting the examination.

The subject on which this examination will be based will be:

Arithmetic, English, U. S. History, Agriculture, etc.

The standards of the examination will be the same as those of the State Department of Education. The examination will be held at the Clanton school building on the 28th and 29th of March. SHOULD CONSOLIDATE OUR SCHOOLS

Please allow me space to say a little more relative to the reading tests which were given in the county by a representative of the State Department of Education before Christmas, as similar tests are to be given again this spring and I want the people to become familiar not only with the results of these tests but of their significances.

Taking the results of these tests for the 6th grade pupils in the different schools it was found that the following percentages in the different type schools were two years or more below the standard for 6th grade pupils:

1-teacher schools	50%
2 teacher schools	40%
3 and 4 teacher schools	30%
Consolidated schools	13%

These percentages show the advantages of consolidated schools. In other words, half of the children in the 1-teacher schools are two or more years behind what they should be, while less than one-eight of those in consolidated schools are behind. The following will show the percent of children in the 3rd, 4th, 5th, and 6th grades of different schools which are up to the standard of the grade in which they now are:

1-teacher schools	24%
-------------------	-----

2-teacher schools	29%
3 and 4-teacher schools	35%
Consolidated schools	45%

It will be seen from the above that only 1/4 of the children in one-teacher schools are up to the standard while nearly 1/2 of those in the consolidated schools are up to standard for their respective grades.

These results can be accounted for in two ways, first, in the small schools, as a rule, inefficient teachers are employed. Second, very few of these Districts have a Dist. Tax to enable them to run longer than the County term, therefore, the children are not getting the advantages in these schools which they deserve, nor which those in the larger schools do get.

The day of the one-teacher school is past except in a very few communities where consolidation is not practical and where transportation cannot be furnished. There is no necessity in this County for more than 25 white schools and the sooner the people of the county become convinced of this, the sooner will their children receive the benefits from school that they deserve.

Distric Taxes are also necessary the same as consolidation for it is impossible for a child to learn as much in four or five months as the same child would learn in from six to nine months. The State law requires that with General funds all schools must be run for an equal duration of time, therefore, the only way to prolong the length of the term in any school beyond the County term is through the levying of District Taxes.

More than one-half of the taxable property of this county is now paying a District Three Mill Tax but the law provides that a District Tax can only be levied in the District which voted it and therefore to get the benefit of these taxes over a wide area, it is necessary to group Districts for taxing purposes just as was done last summer when 15 Districts in the Eastern and Northeastern part of the County united for taxing purposes into District "A." This summer the County Board desires to form Tax Dist. "B," which will include the schools in the Southeastern part of the County and it is hoped that many others of the Districts not now having Dist. Taxes will decide to vote same before the beginning of another school year.

Let me ask you readers to carefully consider the statements above given and then through your influence try to bring about such changes as will insure for your child better advantages than it has enjoyed in the past.

Respectfully,
HOWARD L. FOSHEE,
County Supt. Education.

SOME ELECTRICIANS

Wednesday morning a special train unloaded 175 expert electrical engineers at our depot and in a few moments 50 autos were lined up on the Dam road to convey them to their first stop, Lock 12.

From there they went by boat, over the beautiful Mitchell Dam lake, down to the wonderful giant at Mitchell Dam.

They are making a tour of the hydro-electric plants of the entire country and we surmise that nothing they have seen, or will see, will surpass what they found yesterday at Mitchell Dam.

MOVED TO PRATTVILLE

Dr. E. R. Steele, our chiropractor doctor, who has been in Clanton for nearly two years moved this week to Prattville.

We certainly regret that he found it to his interest to move away and we commend him to those good people as a mighty good clever man and one well up in the practice of this wonderful healing art.

Business Service
Aid for Farmers

To Meet Changed Conditions New Forms Have Been Devised.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

To assist American farmers in organizing their business to meet the changed economic conditions of present-day agriculture, new forms of agricultural information have been developed, and fundamental studies in farm organization, marketing and crop estimates have been expended by the bureau of agricultural economics during the past year, according to the annual report of the bureau.

"In the period of agricultural readjustment experienced during the past year, it was important for farmers to secure the facts bearing upon current problems that would give them the greatest aid in making accurate decisions in planning farm operations and in marketing their products," says the report. "The first attention of the bureau staff has been directed constantly toward these problems in response to the greatly increased demands upon the bureau for information on the general conditions of supply and demand, price trends, the effect of various domestic and foreign factors upon the farmer's returns, and for information bearing upon problems of crop readjustment."

Live Stock Surveys Help.

Special effort was made to strengthen present crop and live stock reporting methods, and to supplement these methods by surveys designed to give a more accurate knowledge of future supplies. The semi-annual pig surveys which give an indication of intentions of farmers regarding the production of hogs, and the reports of farmers' intentions to plant various crops are outlined as indicating the bureau's activities along this line. Numerous mechanical and other methods have also been developed to obtain maximum accuracy in acreage and production estimates.

A world-wide crop and market reporting service was developed by the bureau, to obtain the essential facts concerning probable foreign competition and demand for American farm products. Agricultural commissioners in England and Europe, and the International Institute of Agriculture at Rome keep the bureau constantly informed, regarding the current foreign agricultural situation. This news is broadcast by the bureau to farmers by radio and the press.

A study of the factors that influence the market demand in domestic markets, as expressed in the prices and movement of crops and in consumers' requirements was made. Results of several years of farm management surveys were reviewed to secure facts of value in the present agricultural readjustment, the objective being shifted somewhat from studies with the historical point of view to the current readjustment point of view.

A steady growth in the bureau's work in warehousing, improved farm finance and in the study of agricultural co-operation is required. The correlation of various research projects conducted by state and federal institutions such as in the establishment of the New England research council on marketing and food supply is also regarded as a forward step. A similar council has been planned for the Middle West.

Market News Service.

The market activities of the bureau have been extended along the lines of research, standardization, market news, and food products inspection at shipping points and terminal markets.
Grades were prepared for hay, wool, tobacco, rice, rye, peanuts, dressed meats, and a number of fruits and vegetables.

Farm management studies were expanded during the year to include studies of farm income on various types of farms, farm production in localities adjacent to cities, the organization of cane sugar farms, a special survey of cotton farms in boll weevil districts, studies of the earlier farm management records, surveys of regions on which studies have been made in previous years to discover important changes in management. Cost of production work was expanded to include wheat, cotton, tobacco, fruits, sugar beets, sugar cane, and cattle.

This extended service to farmers was made possible largely by the consolidation of three former bureaus into what is now the bureau of agricultural economics. In the new bureau the identity and the organization of the various lines of work formerly handled in the three bureaus has been preserved in the associated divisions under the three groups of production, marketing, and problems dealing with the economic phases of both production and marketing.

Rotted Manure Excellent

Fertilizer for Cucumber

Rotted manure is an excellent fertilizer for cucumber plants. The mixing of acid phosphate with manure is to be advised. If added before the nitrogen has a chance to escape it will hold the nitrogen in the manure. Acid phosphate contains gypsum and gypsum has this same power to hold the nitrogen, but acid phosphate is more effective than is gypsum alone and, of course, contributes valuable phosphorus. Acid phosphate retards the fermentation of the manure.

Acid phosphate may be added either before or after composting, and in either case is a valuable addition.

Dairy Cows Must Be Fed Liberal Ration

Hay, Silage and Grain Mixture Needed in Winter.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

If dairy cows are to be fed for profitable production they must receive a liberal ration at all seasons. In summer, pasture generally is depended upon, but often it must be supplemented by soiling crops or silage, and sometimes by concentrates as well. For winter feeding, the ration usually is composed of hay, silage, and a mixture of grains. In properly balancing the ration the grain mixture is compounded to fit the roughage with due consideration for cost, bulk, palatability, and physiological effect upon the cow.
For best results, cows must be fed individually, salted regularly, and furnished with all the clean water they will drink.

A few simple guides for feeding have been summarized by the dairymen of the United States Department of Agriculture as follows: (1) Under most circumstances the cow should be fed all the roughage that she will eat up clean, and the grain ration should be adjusted to the milk production. (2)
A grain mixture should be fed in the proportion of one pound to each three pints or pounds of milk produced daily by the cow, except in the case of a cow producing a flow of forty pounds or more, when the ration may be one pound to each three and a half or four pounds of milk. An even better rule is one pound of grain each day for a pound of butterfat that the cow produces during the week. (3) Feed all the cow will respond to in milk production. When she begins to put on flesh, cut down the grain.

Clutch-Holding Device

The Scientific American in Illustrating and describing a clutch holder, the invention of F. F. Wunder, Valley Falls, Kan., says:

The invention relates to devices which are adapted for attachment to the latter in position to occasion the releasing of the driving connection between the engine of the tractor and the engaging the gears of the transmission.

A further object is to provide a clutch holder which comprises but a single piece of resilient material.

Start Egg-Plant Early in Spring Under Glass

The egg-plant is a warm-weather plant as yet not acclimatized in the North. It should be started early, under glass. Plants should be "pricked off" when the second leaves appear, four inches apart, in boxes. "Pricking off" means removing the plants from their crowded position in the hotbed and placing at some distance apart in boxes or in flower pots. The boxes should be kept in a coldframe and plenty of light and air should be admitted on warm, sunny days in order to harden the plants. After frost danger is past and the soil is well warmed the plants may be transplanted. Care must be taken to avoid the use of extremely rich soil or the plants are likely to keep up their growth until too late in the season to escape the early fall frosts. The seed should be sown about April 10. A temperature of 65 to 70 degrees should be maintained in the hotbed.

Plants should be set about three feet apart each way. A dozen plants are sufficient for the needs of a family.
One ounce of seed will furnish 750 plants.

Inefficient Production

No Cure for Low Prices

In discussing various aspects of farm product values, Professor J. I. Falconer, agricultural economist, Ohio State university, says:

"Inefficiency in production is no cure for low prices. Experience and research have shown that farmers with high yields make greater profits than their neighbors with low yields. On high-priced land high yields are more economical to produce than low yields.
If a reduction in output of a particular crop seems desirable, it would be better to reduce the acreage or, for individual farmers, to abandon the crop entirely than to reduce the yields."

Dairymen Are in Favor of Calves During Fall

Dairymen have practically settled the question of having calves come spring or fall, in favor of the fall season, because cows that freshen in the fall always produce more milk and butterfat than those that freshen in the spring, and because there is more time to attend the cows during the winter. Hence from January 1 to March 1 is the most favorable season to breed.

Fertilizer must be "cured"

Great bins of Royster Fertilizer "cure," or "age," for months so that your results from its use will swell the earnings from your land.

PERHAPS you didn't know that fertilizer should be "cured" or "aged" in order that the food for soil can be more readily available when that food is needed.

This is one of the details of the fertilizer industry that few people know, but it's mighty important. Such "details" as this represent the difference between Royster's Fertilizer and less carefully prepared foods—and the difference between profitable crops and crops that are not so profitable.

To keep vast quantities of fertilizer for months represents an enormous supply and a tremendous capital. Therefore, only a large company like Royster's can offer this more effective "cured" fertilizer.

Rid yourself of the idea that all fertilizer is alike. This is no more true than that all land is alike.

The truth of this can be proven—not alone by the enthusiastic praise of successful farmers who have used Royster's, but by your own experience.

Use Royster's this year. Give it a fair test—and don't guess about fertilizer any more.

Grow better and larger crops by using fertilizer that has been "cured"—that is free from lumps—that has been proven chemically correct by forty chemists—and that has established a record for good works over a long period of years. Look for the name "ROYSTER" on the bags.

SHORT SMILES

Can't Get 'Em Alive.
Guide—Aim for his shoulder!
Excited Hunter—Shoulder! It's his ankers I want.—Life.

Don't Recognize Him.
S. J. Perkins, a well-known folks think he's a bit collector and refuse to open the door.

All Depended.
"Could you use some poetry?"
"Is it baited?"

Small Town Stuff.
"Is he prominent and influential?"
"Pretends to be; but I've seen him chasing his own hat."

Nothing Serious.
"I understand your dance writes poetry."
"Only during his spare time."

Posted.
"Now, Johnny, didn't your conscience tell you you had done wrong?"
"No, grandma; I knew it already."

Hello, There!
"Money talks."
"What language?"
"Chink."

BIG ORCHARD IN VERMONT

Privately-Owned One at Bennington Occupies 3,600 Acres and Has 65,000 Trees.

Vermont lays claim to the largest privately-owned orchard in this country. It is located at Bennington, being the property of Edward H. Everett of Old Bennington. In this planting there are more than 50,000 apple trees and 15,000 fruit trees, partly of pear, plum, quince and cherry.

The area occupies more than 3,600 acres of land at the base and on the eastern slope of Mount Anthony, and extends over a large portion of Carpenter hill. It is understood that the ultimate goal is 100,000 fruit trees.
Some of the rows of trees in this orchard are almost a mile long.

The orchard trees are set out in large divisions and the divisions are subdivided into blocks lettered after the alphabet. Some of the blocks are so numerous that the manager has had to double back on the alphabet in the same division. Every row of trees is given a letter and every cross-row is given a number. In this way each tree has its specific identification.

Different blocks in the orchard are insured against damage by hail, likewise against damage by fire.—Detroit News.

He May Have Been Extra Weary.
"You may like to know," said the landlord when he was making out his bill, "that General Lafayette once slept in the bed you occupied last night."

"Did he?" the motoring tourist replied. "He must have been some sleeper."

He Would Dare Say.
Prisoner—"But I would rather tell my own story. Don't you think it would be believed?" Solicitor—"I dare say it would. It is the sort of story that carries conviction with it."

'Too Gay for a Widow.
Saleswoman—"Madam, I know your husband would go wild over this hat." Customer—"Yes, and drop dead over the bill, and then I couldn't wear it."— Boston Transcript.

The First Step.
Pompous Perkins—"And now, my boy, what would you do if you were in my shoes." Dapper Danny—"Beg-gin' your pardon, sir, I think I'd have 'em shined!"

William's Earldoms Gone.
William the Conqueror divided England among the commanders of his army and conferred about twenty earldoms, not one of which exists today.

Quite Short.
Employer—"Your grandmother's funeral service seems to have been pretty brief." Office Boy—"Yes, sir; the same was forfeited in the first inning."

They Can.
What impressionable people call sentiment and clamor for, the stolid harshly call "bunk." Both can go too far.

Some Arts.
The art of talking is great; the art of listening is greater; the art of saying something is greatest.

For Auld Lang Syne.
First Barber—"Been busy this morning?" Second Barber—"No, just scraping an acquaintance."

Love and Suspicion.
Water will not extinguish the spark of love—and it takes something stronger to scint the breath of suspicion.

Different Now.
Love used to sit in bay windows and write twenty-page letters. Now it uses the telephone.

Sad Out of Sadrons.
Electricity and gas have taken the sad out of sadrons.

Prize Ruffian.
A most remarkable example of a dictator-tyrant was Juan Rosas, who, for 17 years, from 1835 to 1852, ruled the Argentine republic as an unchallenged despot. Rosas was born in 1793, and began life as a gaucho. He seized supreme power in 1835, and is credited with having put 25,000 people to death.
The "Nero of South America" was ably backed up by his seconds-in-command, Ortiz and Urquiza, two most consummate scoundrels. Rosas took refuge in the British legation and, for some reason, he was shipped to England on H.
M. S. Locust. He settled down at Southampton, where he died in 1877, after 25 years' peaceful residence. He was a peculiarly bloodthirsty scoundrel.

The Expert's View.
A green trimmer was told to put a piece of imitation mahogany in the window and mark it "Sheridan."
He thought he would improve on his instructions. Knowing nothing about furniture, he marked it "Fine Mahogany—Sheridan."

An expert happening along viewed the exhibit and observed: "Another case of Sheridan twenty miles away."

ALABAMA NEWS HAPPENINGS

A Resume of the More Important Events of Interest Condensed To An Epitomized Form.

Edward Doty, formerly of Tuscaloosa and Lafayette, who is here to establish the Huntsville Morning Star, a six-day morning paper, has announced in a circular that his staff will be composed of W. R. Jordan, associate editor; Mrs. D. G. O'Neil, city editor; Thomas J. Bryson, city editor; R. C. Montgomery, advertising manager; D. G. O'Neil, secretary and treasurer; G. B. Langdon, circulation manager, and A. M. Thompson, mechanical superintendent. Publication of the Star is expected to begin some time in February. It will use the wire service of the International News and Universal service, it is announced.

At a meeting of the board of Walker county commissioners the route known as the "Ridge Route" was selected for the new Jasper-to-Oakman highway to be constructed at an early date. The road will go by way of Calumet and connect with the old Parrish road a mile and a half east of Parish. At Parish the road will turn south of the Southern railroad and run westward to Oakman. Paul Haley, engineer in charge of the survey, says everything will be in readiness for starting work on the road by the first of April.

At a cost of approximately $70,000 the Gulf State Steel company of Gadden is installing an air cooling system in the drawing room of its wire mill.
It is said to be part of a general plan of improving the equipment and providing for the comfort of the men.
Four huge fans are being placed in position on the south side of the wire mill. They will force cold air through pipes to every wire drawing machine and operation, and will reduce the strain and discomfort caused by summer heat.

A portrait of Provisional Governor Lewis E. Parsons, of Alabama, has been presented to the Alabama State Department of Archives and History by Col. Kelly Parsons, of the U. S.
Army, a grandson of the provisional governor, and will be hung in the hall of governors in the capitol. The picture was painted by Kelly Kitzpatrick, of Wetumpka, whose work has received commendable criticism when shown at the Southern Artists Association exhibit in Charleston, S. C., and in Memphis, Tenn., as well as in the City of New York.

Boy Scouts are to govern Anniston for one day. This will be tried early in March, according to plans of Scout Executive Z. L. Strickland. A mayor and 12 councilmen will be elected at a meeting in March, according to present plans. The officials elected from the ranks of the scouts will in turn appoint a police force and other city employees needed. Citizens are interested in the experiments.

Three appraisers will be named by attorneys in the case to fix a value on the land sought by the Morgan county board of revenue for a highway across the farm of Charles Oden.
Judge L. P. Troupe, before whom the proceedings were brought, held his jurisdiction could extend only to appoint appraisers and the attorneys were requested to agree on the appraisal board.

At the regular monthly meeting of the Civic Improvement league of Phenix City, Ala., a suggestion was made to change the name of the town to the name of Columbus, Ala. Action toward this end will be pushed, it was announced. A. V. Jackson, member of the league, suggested the new name and emphasized the logic in such a move.

The plan of the Gulf Ports Terminal Company operating a railroad for 30 miles out of Pensacola, Fla., to bridge Mobile Bay for a distance of seven miles in order to extend the road to Mobile was approved by United States District Engineer Earl North.

Gadsden Lodge No. 20, Knights of Pythias, has organized a seven-piece orchestra, which is under the direction of Marion Smith. The members are all well known musicians attached to the 167th regiment band.

Glover's Bend, a deep valley in Shelby County, is being cleaned out, according to deputy sheriffs. Having received notice that this locality is thick with sfilie and moonshiners, members of the sheriff's force for the past month have been conducting frequent raids on the place.

George H. Perkins, president of the George H. Perkins company, with executive offices in New York and Boston and with branch offices in a number of other cities, has purchased a valuable tract of land on the main thoroughfare of the Muscle Shoals district, a short distance from government nitrate plant No. 2, and immediately south of Wilson dam. This acreage will be subdivided immediately and developed.

It is stated by Conservation Commissioner I. T. Quinn, with headquarters in Montgomery, that it is the intention of the department to establish fish hatcheries in different parts of the state in 1924, and he suggests Big Spring Lake at Tusculum as an ideal location for a hatchery. The Tennessee Valley Sportsmen's Association and the Spring Park Amusement Company of Tusculum will take up this matter at an early date.

Special gangs of workmen are busy at Wilson dam on the work of raising one of the big Terry traveling cranes to the height of the highway across the dam on the south side so that it may be possible to begin pouring concrete on the arches of the highway bridge, at an early date, probably within a week or ten days. This crane is one of the largest being used in the world today.

Montgomery's federal land office will be retained. Congressman J. Lister Hill of the second district, wired E. E. Winters, land agent, that the House of Representatives again voted against the abolition of the office and that the decision is final. The department of the interior had recommended the abolition of a large number of land offices and Montgomery was in the list.

Verdict for $125 was awarded the plaintiff in the case of James A. Meyers against the Galloway Coal Company in the Walker circuit court, being one of the cases in which the allegation was that farming lands were damaged by water from coal washers and coal mines passing through the property, coal dust and contaminated water injuring the lands.

Probate Judge E. J. Chesnut of Cherokee county has cancelled his order for ballots for the presidential primary of March 11 because of the state attorney general's ruling that the primary is not warranted by law. It is intimated that the Cherokee officials will not name clerks or managers unless forced to do so.

Despite the ruling made by Judge William E. Fort of Birmingham to the effect that the Alabama "blue sky law" is invalid, the state securities commission will continue to function as heretofore, it was asserted by A. G.
Patterson, president of this commission.

February 11, and continue through February 16th. A wild west organization has been signed for the week and a permit obtained from the city authorities for the staging of an old-fashioned stage coach robbery on the downtown streets.

Sentence of death imposed upon Bennie Cantalou by the Montgomery circuit court, following his conviction of the murder of Mrs. Susan Mastin, was affirmed by the Alabama Supreme Court, which set Friday, March 21, as the date for his execution.

Work on the Deshler High school building, the Tennessee Valley bank and the First National Bank of Tusculum, is being rapidly pushed to completion. These three buildings when completed will add much to the appearance of Main street.

Rev. Luther B. Wages, who recently resigned as pastor of the Parrish Baptist church, has been named pastor of the Vernon, Lamar county, church.
Rev. Wages will devote part of his time to work with the Kennedy and Millport churches.

Trial of Mrs. Edna Naro, charged with the murder of young Ralph Roberts, of Pratt City, probably will be set for the week of February 28, Assistant Solicitor J. P. McCoy, who is handling the prosecution, said.

The committee appointed by the Sheffield Chamber of Commerce to canvass the membership vote for directors declared the following elected:
Hal Richeson, J. F. Gammon and Clopper Almon. The directors will elect a president.

An innovation is being planned by the Service Men's club in connection with its indoor carnival and bazaar, which will open at the old post office building in Birmingham, Monday, Feb.
11, and continue through Saturday.
Reduced rates on cottonseed, carload, from points on the Memphis division of the Louisville & Nashville railroad to Birmingham, have been secured, effective March 1.

Raises and escapes of over $500,000 have been reported by S. A. Jordan, special agent of the Alabama Tax Commission, who has been working in Etowah County for some time.

An immediate expansion program, costing $4,771,200 is needed to relieve the fearful congestion in the Birmingham public schools, the board of education asserts in the third installment of its survey report.

Publication in eastern financial papers of the fact that the Southern railroad is in the market for 2,000 tons of structural steel was the basis of reports in Birmingham that this steel was to be used in building a car shop and locomotive erecting shop at North Birmingham.

WISPS OF WISDOM

The wrong road never brings you to the right place.

Content makes poor men rich; discontent makes rich men poor.

You may censure the faults of others when you have none of your own.

Troubles come to all men; but those who are looking for them will have the largest share.

Courage is a virtue which the young cannot spare; to lose it is to grow old before one's time.

Too many who does not have a hard time in his earlier years rarely has an easy time in his later ones.

Always strive to appear at your best.
Give the world your brightest thoughts, your most courteous speech, the outcome of your kindest impulses and purest motives.

Vengeance.

chance of our anarrelling."

That You May Decide-- Muscle Shoals Proposal

From statement submitted to House Military Affairs Committee, January 25, 1924, by Mr. E. A. Yates, vice president, Alabama Power Co., in behalf of the Joint offer by Southern Public Utility Power Companies and Associates for leasing the Muscle Shoals power project.

Compared With Offer By Mr. Henry Ford With Respect to Fertilizer Manufacture

Public Utility Power Companies' Offer	Ford Offer
Product 50,000 tons annually fixed nitrogen in form of fertilizers.	Product 40,000 tons annually fixed nitrogen in form of fertilizers.
Process Will use the synthetic ammonia process, which produces much cheaper than any other process known today.	Process No commitment to use a commercial process. Agrees to operate Plant No. 2. This is the cyanamid process, which is a rather high cost method of fixing nitrogen.
Cost of Product Cost of fixed nitrogen per pound is half that provided for in the Ford offer. Hence cost of fertilizer to the farmer is cheaper than under the Ford offer.	Cost of Product Cost of fixed nitrogen per pound is twice that provided for in Power Company offer. Hence Ford's fertilizer will cost the farmer more than that made by the Power Company.
Power for Fertilizer 100,000 H. P. at cost. 40,000 extra at price set by Federal Power Commission.	Power for Fertilizer No specific amount, or cost of power, for such fertilizer is provided, "using the most economical source of power available." The power could cost any amount desired up to the price at which someone else would furnish it.
Nitrogen Fixation Capacity Provided in Case of War 90,000 tons of fixed nitrogen per year, this being the 50,000 tons in new plants, plus 40,000 tons in plant No. 2.	Nitrogen Fixation Capacity Provided in Case of War 40,000 tons fixed nitrogen per year, this being the 40,000 tons at Plant No. 2.
Disposition of Nitrogen Plants Will maintain Nitrogen Plant No. 2 ready for operation and will build with Nitrate Plant No. 1 as a nucleus 50,000 tons of nitrogen annual capacity.	Disposition of Nitrogen Plants Will operate Nitrogen Plant No. 2 and apparently expects to scrap Nitrogen Plant No. 1.
Remedy in Case of Breach of Contract In case of violation of terms of the contract, Nitrogen Plant No. 2 is maintained in state ready for operation and Nitrate Plant No. 1 can be recaptured in better state for operation than at present.	Remedy in Case of Breach of Contract In case of violation of the terms of the contract, both Nitrate Plant Nos. 1 and 2 having been sold out right probably could not be recaptured, but only the power phase of the contract could be cancelled.
Profits Allowed Company Will sell to consumers at cost plus eight per cent.	Profits Allowed Company Will sell to consumers at cost plus eight per cent.

AND: A comparison of the Power Companies' offer, versus the Ford offer, on the basis of the power only, shows that the Power Companies' payments on the basis of a hundred years would exceed Mr. Ford's payments by $80,000,000 to $90,000,000; that the Power Companies would save the Government $25,000,000 to $30,000,000 of capital investment over the Ford offer.

Don't Let That Cold Turn Into "Flu"

Rub on Good Old Musterole

That cold may turn into "Flu," Grippe or, even worse, Pneumonia, unless you take care of it at once. Rub good old Musterole on the congested parts and see how quickly it brings relief.

Colds are merely congestion. Musterole, made from pure oil of mustard, camphor, menthol and other simple ingredients, is a counter-irritant which stimulates circulation and helps break up the cold.

As effective as the messy old mustard plaster, does the work without blister. Just rub it on with your finger-tips. You will feel a warm tingle as it enters the pores, then a cooling sensation that brings welcome relief.

To Mothers: Musterole is now made in milder form for babies and small children. Ask for Children's Musterole. 35c and 65c, in jars and tubes.

GOOD ROADS

CONCRETE WINS IN TEST OF MATERIALS

An interesting road experiment has been conducted in Illinois for the purpose of ascertaining the facts concerning the wearing quality of different road materials. This test road is known as the Bates experimental road. It consists of 65 sections of pavement each 18 feet wide and from 100 to 250 feet in length. They are laid end to end so that they make a continuous straight pavement two miles long. Twenty-two of these sections were of brick, 17 of asphalt and 24 of concrete. In each type of pavement the sections varied in thickness from those so thin that they were sure to break under the lightest test loads to sections which were considered strong enough to support successfully the heaviest load permitted by the state traffic law.

All of the materials for the pavements were made to conform to the high standard as required by state specifications, and the spirit of the whole test was to learn the facts. After this road had been constructed army trucks made 23,200 round trips over them. Each truck was loaded differently as the test progressed, starting with the lightest load possible for them, and gradually increasing the load until the greatest traffic imposed upon any such was 377,400 tons. Over 60 per cent of this was the legal load limit for four tons per rear wheel. After the test was completed it was found that the concrete had stood the test best of any material used. In fact, it was an overwhelming victory for concrete pavement and this can be better understood when it is given in percentage. Only 4 1/2 per cent of the brick pavement sustained this traffic without injury. Only 11 1/2 per cent of the asphalt sustained this traffic, whereas 41 2/3 per cent of the concrete sections satisfactorily sustained the entire test. The test will be still further continued this spring, and new sections of concrete have been put down having the edges thicker than the center. It will be interesting to note what the outcome of these tests will be.—E. B. House, Department of Civil and Irrigation Engineering, Colorado Agricultural College.

Link National Roads in West With Eastern Lines

Construction of highways in the Western states to connect that territory with the East and form transcontinental routes was approved by a delegation of representatives in congress from that section meeting with state and federal highway officials at Washington.

A committee was named to confer with the public roads bureau of the formation of plans which probably will call for government aid. Harvey M. Toy of the California highway commission presented the views of the state.

Representative Colton of Utah was named chairman of the committee to formulate plans. Other members include Representatives Summers, Washington; Slinnot, Oregon; Fredericks, California; Leavitt, Montana; Smith, Idaho; Richards, Nevada; Hayden, Arizona; Winter, Wyoming; Valle, Colorado, and Morrow, New Mexico.

Immense Sum Spent for Good Roads in Missouri

A. G. Lingley, engineer of construction of the state highway department, gives out figures showing that since the establishment of the department there has been expended in the construction of roads and bridges the sum of $25,284,000.

This represents completed work on complete and incomplete projects. The total mileage is 2,082, of which there are 1,018 miles of graded earth yet to be surfaced. The cost of completed bridge construction was $1,792,000. Graded earth cost $7,098,000, concrete and brick $9,054,000, gravel $6,384,000 and macadam and asphalt $878,000. The hard surfaced roads, 1,014 miles, have cost $18,896,000.

Order Advertising Signs From Arizona Highways

Advertising signs have been ordered removed from the sides of all roads that traverse the forest reserves of Arizona and New Mexico. District Engineer E. S. Wheeler of the bureau of public roads hereafter will permit only roadside signs that have been placed by highway organizations or automobile clubs. There is suggestion that a bill be offered in the next legislature prohibiting disfigurement by advertising of any state highways, as well as of the erection of billboards at intersections where they shut off the view and thus conduce to ward accident.

High Heels Are Hard on Pavement in French City

Paris pavements are very largely of wood and deteriorate very rapidly. When the cause was sought by the city engineers it was found that the heels of women's shoes were largely responsible. The feminine shoe heels are so narrow at the base as to be almost points, and these penetrate the wood, punching holes in which the water settles, thus rotting the paving.—Scientific American.

DADDY THE DAIRY

YOUNG CALVES LIKE GRAIN GROUND FINE

The kind and amount of grain fed a young calf has much to do with its vigor and growth. Most calves will get interested in the grain box when two or three weeks old. Grain is a cheaper feed than whole milk so the calf should be encouraged to eat it at an early age.

About the time the change is made from whole milk to skim milk, some grain should be placed before the calf. If grain is left in the feed box all the time, it is likely to become stale. Calves should have only what they will clean up in one feeding. Feeding grain immediately after the skim milk will help to prevent the calves from sucking each other.

Young calves prefer grain finely ground, but older calves like it coarsely ground. After the calves are two or three months old, whole grains may be satisfactorily fed. A calf will consume two to three pounds of grain daily when three months old if fed twice a day, and usually more if allowed grain at will.

Such feeds as corn, oats, barley and kaffir are excellent calf feeds. A good mash can be made from equal parts of ground corn and oats. Wheat bran may be substituted for ground oats if oats are not available. Equal parts of bran, ground corn and oats make a good feed. Oilmeal added to the ration tends to keep the calves sleek and in good condition.

Calves will begin to eat small quantities of hay about the time they take an interest in the grain. For calves eight to ten weeks old, red clover or mixed hay is recommended in preference to alfalfa hay, due to the latter often causing intestinal trouble. Legume hays are very palatable and contain a large amount of protein and mineral matter which are necessary for growing animals.

Good quality corn silage may be fed when the calf is three months old or older. Only the finer parts of fresh silage should be fed. Do not allow it to lie around in the manger until spoiled.

Well-Designed Barn Has Much Advertising Value

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

A well-designed attractive dairy barn has an appreciable advertising value, especially when the owner derives a portion of his income from the sale of surplus animals. The cost of a new barn, however, should not go beyond the point where the interest on the investment, plus depreciation, will become an excessive overhead load.

Some of the other factors to consider in building are climate, topography, drainage, location relative to other buildings, size and state of the dairyman's business, fire risk, materials available for construction, and local regulations covering the production, handling and disposal of milk. Farmers' Bulletin 1842, Dairy Barn Construction, just issued by the United States Department of Agriculture, answers many of the questions suggested above. It gives correct principles of construction of dairy barns; plans of one and two-story buildings; and details of the construction of windows, ventilating flues, cow stalls, doors and drainage systems.

This bulletin may be obtained, while the supply lasts, upon application to the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Every Dairy Cow Should Have Rest of Six Weeks

Every dairy cow should be "dried off" for at least six weeks before calving and it is the practice of all up-to-date dairymen to so treat the cows. It is accomplished by milking her only every other time for a few days, lengthening the intervals until there are practically no milkings. Reduce the food during the drying-off period. Rub camphorated oil under the udder each night and morning if milk secretion persists.

Inexpensive Powder for Killing Lice on Cattle

Cows rub their necks? Act as if they had bugs? Probably they have. Get a good louse powder. Usually the trouble is local and the whole hide doesn't need to be treated. The best and cheapest powder is made from three pounds of flowers of sulphur, one pound of sabadilla powder and a half pound of insect powder. Mix well and put in an old pepper shaker. Sabadilla should be asked for first because some drug stores don't keep it in stock.

Box Stalls Recommended for Maximum Production

Cows kept in box stalls produce more milk and slightly more butterfat than those kept in stanchions, according to the United States Department of Agriculture, but the slight increase in product does not balance the added expense for space, bedding, and labor. Box stalls are to be recommended only when maximum production is desired regardless of expense, as in testing cows for records.

Sick for Ten Years Gained 60 Pounds by Use of PE-RU-NA

Read This

Mr. John Wick

No matter how long you have been sick or how much you have suffered, you must not give up hope. Mr. John Wick, of Monocome Falls, Wisconsin, did not and is a well man today. In September, 1918, he wrote: "I have been a user of Pe-ru-na for nearly twenty years. I had catarrh of the stomach for ten years. Nothing did me any good. I grew worse until a friend advised me to try Pe-ru-na. While using the first bottle, I felt I had found the right medicine. I am entirely cured. My weight was down to 135 pounds and now I weigh 195 pounds. I have used very little medicine for the last ten years."

The condition known as catarrh is not confined to the nose and throat. It may be found wherever there are mucous membranes and is responsible for a multitude of troubles. Coughs and colds are catarrhal as well as stomach and bowel disorders.

Do as John Wick did. Keep Pe-ru-na in the house. It stimulates digestion, aids in throwing off the poisonous secretions, enriches the blood, increases the resistance to disease and promotes good health generally.

Insist upon having genuine Pe-ru-na in either tablet or liquid form. Your dealer has it.

LESSON FOR FEBRUARY 10

THE FAILURE AT KADESH

LESSON TEXT—Num. 14:1-10. GOLDEN TEXT—"The Lord is with you, but then how can you say, 'I will not go up'?" IN EXERCISE, LAY AND SENIOR TOPIC—Why Israel failed at Kadesh. ANNO—1401 LE and ADULT TOPIC—The Crisis at Kadesh.

1. The Spies Sent Out (Num. 13:17-20).

Less than two years had passed since the Israelites were delivered from their Egyptian bondage. They were now at Kadesh-barnea, within sight of the promised land. Moses urged them to go in and take immediate possession (Deut. 1:21), but they failed because of their unbelief (Heb. 3:19). The record in Deuteronomy 1:19-25 shows that God did not take the initiative in sending out the spies but that request was made by the people. Representative men, a ruler from each tribe, were secured. There was a three-fold purpose in sending out the spies:

1. To see whether the land was as God had told them (v. 18).

2. To see whether the people who dwelt there were strong or weak, few or many (v. 18).

3. To see whether the cities were made up of strongholds or tents (v. 19).

II. The Commission Executed (Num. 13:21-23).

They entered the land from the south and traversed it to its northern limit. They spent 40 days in this investigating exploration. On their return from the north, they gathered some specimens of the fruit of the land. Two of them, perhaps Caleb and Joshua, bore a cluster of grapes upon a staff between them as a witness that God had spoken the truth about the land.

III. The Spies Rendered a Report (Num. 13:26-33).

On their return this committee of explorers rendered a report to the whole congregation. It was not unanimous.

1. The Majority Report (vv. 26-29).

(1) A land flowing with milk and honey (v. 27). As a proof thereof, they exhibited the fruit. (2) The people who live there are fierce (v. 28).

(3) The people live in walled cities (v. 28).

(4) The land is inhabited with giants (v. 28; cf. v. 33). They saw themselves as grasshoppers. Furthermore, they saw the people so distributed, the Amalekites in the south, the Hittites, Jebusites and the Amorites in the mountains, and the Canaanites along the sea, that it was impossible to take them.

2. The Minority Report (vv. 30-33).

In part this report agrees with the first. It does not ignore the difficulties nor dispute the facts. It denies the conclusions of the majority. They did not minimize the task before them, but asserted that with God's help they were well able to take possession of the land, and urged immediate action. The ten had their eyes on the difficulties, but Caleb and Joshua fixed their eyes upon God. Caleb lived to see his suggestions made real.

IV. The Rebellion of the People (Num. 14:1-10).

This rebellion began by crying, which shows that they were cowards, having left God out of the question, they now weep and howl.

1. Murmuring (vv. 1-3). This weeping and howling was turned into murmuring against Moses and Aaron. Though too weak and cowardly to take their enemies in the power of God, they could assail their leaders. They even wished that they had died in Egypt.

2. Proposition to Organize to Return to Egypt (vv. 3, 4). They proposed to select a captain as their leader. God took them at their word—sent them back to wander in the wilderness for 38 years, during which time they all died except Joshua and Caleb.

3. Moses and Aaron Prostrate Themselves (v. 5).

4. Joshua and Caleb Protested (vv. 6-9). They rent their clothes. They insisted that the land was good and that, if the Lord delighted in them, He would bring them into the land.

5. The People Were Filled With Murderous Hate and Proposed Stoning Joshua and Caleb (v. 10).

6. God's Interposition (v. 10). He manifested His glory before all the children of Israel in vindication of the loyalty of Joshua and Caleb. God then proposed punishment for Israel.

Kingsport, Tenn.—Mrs. Fannie V. Thompson, who lives just across the state line from here in Scott County, Virginia, is the widow of George Washington Thompson, who fought in the War of 1812. Although that was over 110 years of age, Mrs. Thompson herself is but 75 years old and doesn't look that age. Her life has been, and still is, an active one, and she takes a great interest in the affairs of the day.

"Two years ago," says Mrs. Thompson, "while I was visiting relatives in Russell County, Virginia, I read about Black-Draught. It seemed to be a very remarkable medicine, so I thought I would try it. When I got home, my daughter got a box of this medicine at the store and we began to use it in our family.

"Black-Draught is a good reliable medicine. It is a household remedy with us for all troubles, which is caused by the strong lime-stone water we have to drink in this country.

"Occasionally I suffer from headaches caused from constipation and biliousness and for it I have invariably used Black-Draught for the past two years. My health has always been good."

Black-Draught is used, with satisfaction, by millions. Try it.

What's in a name? A boycott by implication means the same.

How about drawing the sex line on barber shops and have some male and some female tiousorial parlors?

A spirit of intolerance has wrecked larger organizations than the Chilton "black and tan" party.

It's about as foolish to try to "convince a fool against his will" as it is to cast your pearls before swine.

A person who can't distinguish between a personality and an entire political party is certainly to be pitied.

A person is not prominent at all in Washington society now unless his pocket book smells like kerosene oil.

We don't know how to class a person that will boldly deny a fact that is perfectly plain to everybody else.

Wonder if Clanton will have any early gardeners this year? We want to get a line on a tomato patch or so.

If all of the chronic grouchers were to drop dead some day there would be lots of real estate left without an owner.

If the ground hog came out in this section Saturday he certainly saw his shadow. So there you are. Order more coal Congress is trying to hand Muscle Shoals over to Henry Ford on a silver platter now. Henry will have to show his hand now.

It is hard to tell which is developed the fastest by the oil industry—millionaires or swindlers. Or maybe it's both swindlers.

Had you noticed that the physical charms of a woman have more to do with the length of her skirt than anything else.

When a person is so prejudiced that in his political frenzy he will "cut off his nose to spite his face" he becomes an object of pity.

If the democrats of Chilton county have any resentment at all it looks like the time has arrived for them to turn like the worm.

Three days in succession as fine as last Saturday will put the fisherman on his way. Angle worms better than out and migrate right now if they don't want to adorn some anglers hook

The scandal in the Teapot Dome oil investigation broadens out every day. Secretary Fall has already fallen with a dull thud and Secretaries Daugherty and Denby are toppling fast.

The output of automobiles is expected to be 4,000,000 this year. The man who walks will have to cut through the fields and follow the swamps if we expect to go anywhere.

PRINCIPLES NOT PEOPLE

The Union-Banner was pleased to take another shot at us—or something—last week.

Before we consume any more time or space in trying to comprehend what our neighbor is driving at, in its weekly ebullitions of inconceivable innuendoes and covert threats, we want to make one more effort to induce him to tell us plainly what it is all about and what he is attempting to drive at.

So far, every proposition he has made and every brilliant flight he has taken into the hazy editorial heights, his one persistent theme has seemed to be that somebody was "persecuting" Judge Reynolds.

Honestly now, as we have intimated before, this is beyond our power of comprehension. He seems to cling tenaciously to the idea that Judge Reynolds is the all and in all of the Chilton county republican party, and he may be, for all we know, but we want to assure him with all of the candor that we can command that such is not our conception, nor that of our party.

The contest is not waged at Judge

Reynolds personally, but at the party he represents. Surely you know that much. Personally we have only the kindest feeling for the Judge, but politically we are bitterly opposed to his party and practically all of the things it stands for, especially social equality.

The democratic view of the whole matter, as we have told you before, is an assumption of their rights as citizens, before the law, to appeal to the courts of the land to adjudicate a perfectly legal matter of difference between them and the republican party. It may be that you have grown up under the domination of the "big stick" until you can not realize that democrats are real citizens of our common country and have the same rights before the courts as do other people.

There, may be as you charge, some democrats in Clanton and Chilton county, who have worn the yoke so long and taster of the emoluments that "wait upon fawning," who fear the terrors of your threatened boycott, and who prefer to still lick the hand that chastizes them rather than be real independent Americans. We dare say you are correct in your assumption, and if you are, all the democratic party has to say is, that they would be glad if they would cease to fall under the flag of a buccaneer and hoist the flag of their own affiliations over their ship.

From the tenor of all your writings you seem to be laboring under the erroneous impression that Chilton county is a preempted reservation, set aside especially for the propagation of a species of republicanism that wants to hang on, like grim death, to the Washington bread wagon, and at the same time try to locally disown their affiliation, or perfect alignment with that parti-colored organization. It can't be done, brother, for next summer, when your state and national conventions meet, the cat will sore get out of the wallet, and Cuffie will be sitting in with the game, life size, and you know that, Bro. Wyatt, just as well as we do.

For instance, you quote the names of several prominent democratic gentlemen as having signed the democratic bond for the contest. You even refer to two of them as being on the Board of Directors of the Peoples Saving Bank. Your intention in doing this is very clear. You hoped to injure that splendid home institution and to frighten these other gentlemen with an implied boycott.

Old boy, that day has passed in Chilton county. Suppose you were able to make politics an issue in business and bring about the very issue you so bravely hint at. Who would suffer most? Are the democrats of Chilton county, who pay 75 per cent of the tax and do 90 per cent of the business afraid of such a pitiful bogey man as that? A spirit like that in operation will certainly bring about retaliation and which party, do you think, is best able to live up to your suggestion? For shame, Bro. Wyatt, be a broader and a better citizen than that. Your duty and ours is to foster friendliness and not to encourage strife and bitterness. Remember that all people in a free country have their own, inalienable rights of opinion and are not subjects of slander and abuse so long as they exercise only those rights.

In another place you make grave charges against democrats for contributing to a campaign fund, remembering, as you do, that your own delectable party put up over $12,000,000 to control the last national election. Yes, some of them contributed to a campaign fund, and if we had time to get up the list, we would be delighted to publish it, as an honor roll to the credit of some of the best men in Chilton county. They are the kind who delight to be known as southern democrats, and belong to that class who are now, and have been for more than 50 years, making the South a safe and decent place to live, free from negro domination and racial social equality. You owe them, at least, your respect for the protection they are giving you and yours and more especially so right now, for your president has announced his intention of forcing a social equality measure through the present congress, if he can, and will do so unless the democrats, there can again wad off the nefarious scheme.

You also do us the honor to intimate that we secured $1,000 campaign bonus from the state organization at Birmingham. Our grapevine radio certainly must have been out of static—or something—when you "heard" that statement. We are very sorry to inform you that you made a mistake in that shot. If truth would permit us, we would be glad to admit its absolute validity, but, unfortunately, you missed your guess again.

Now, Bro. Wyatt, if you could only realize that democrats, even in Chilton county, are entitled to their rights and freedom the same as other people, and that the expression, or the exercise of these rights should not subject them to insult and attempted intimidation, also that the expression of a democratic opinion is, in no sense a "persecution" of Judge Reynolds, or any other individual, it is possible that you could write more sanely and more soundly about the questions at issue. Any individual is a mere incident and not a personal factor in this, or any other election contest we ever heard of. Confine yourself to political issue and we can fully appreciate your position but we do not make personal fights nor allow parties to become personal in our columns.

Three speeders in Birmingham have had their license revoked and their cars put up for 12 months by the courts. Good! Maybe when they walk that long they will manage to absorb a little sense.

In spite of this tremendous increase in production, it was impossible to meet delivery requirements during the spring and summer months when orders for 350,000 Ford Cars and Trucks could not be filled.

This year winter buying for immediate delivery has been more active than ever before—and in addition 200,000 orders have already been booked through the Ford Weekly Purchase Plan for spring delivery.

OSCAR UNDERWOOD --- DEMOCRACY'S SAFEGUARD

Record of Senator Underwood One of Service—Opposition Appeal ing to Prejudice in Selfish Fight to Prevent Alabama Taking Great Forward Step.

ISSUE IS NOT: "UNDERWOOD OR ANOTHER," BUT: "ARE WE ALABAMIANS."

The Democracy of Alabama will go to the polls on March 11 to say to the nation, "We are (we are not) ready to see a Southern man elevated to the high office of President of the United States."

Stripped of all garb, excess verbiage and political partisanship, that is the proposition which will face the voters—Alabama's (or is not ready to see her foremost son placed in charge of the nation's affairs. That her loyal citizens will vote affirmatively is conceded by even the bitterest foe of Alabama's present great opportunity—as evidence mounts up in all sections of the state showing the tremendous drift of public sentiment toward Senator Underwood and his sterling leadership in this, Alabama's brightest hour.

The present campaign is not just an ordinary political battle, but is a permit Alabama to tender wholeheartedly her greatest citizen to the nation to be its chief executive. It is not a choice of two issues; nor of two men—but simply, and finally, an endorsement of the man who, representing Alabama in the halls of Congress, brought recognition to her far and away beyond any ever known before, and in serving her rendered such signal service to the people of the whole country that a nationwide campaign is going up for "UNDERWOOD."

UNDERWOOD—THE MAN

Oscar W. Underwood, the only Alabamian who is a bona fide president of the United States, is a Protestant (an Episcopalian), is both a York and Scottish Rite Mason (being one of the very few 33rd degree Masons in this country), and is a member of the Knights of Pythias and Red Men.

He is the head of a family, the father of two sons, both of whom participated in the world war. His long life of service to his state and people, begun when he was still a young man, fits him most exceptionally for the high position of Chief Executive at a time when he is still in the prime of life. He is a lifelong Democrat. Sincere, candid and of a broad understanding, equip him splendidly to properly interpret the thoughts and respond to the wishes of the people and their many problems.

Oscar Underwood is a man who stands for the cleansing of politics, the honest and fearless enforcement of all laws, the reduction of a ruthlessly dishonest tariff, favoring vast financial interests as against the masses, and for a foreign policy which upholds the rights of American citizens, while giving every consideration to the people of other lands.

UNDERWOOD—HIS RECORD

The record of Senator Underwood is one of long service and valuable accomplishments. He wrote the one irreproachable tariff bill. His part in the construction of the great Federal Reserve Bank, the expense are always fair, exact, briefly stated and unanswerable. He supported and expedited passage of the Webb-Kenyon shipping bill—the prohibition measure protecting dry territory. He was the author of the 18th Amendment; he voted for the Reed Bone Dry Law; he supported the Federal Reserve Act; Good Roads Bill; Muscle Shoals and the National Defense Act; Farm Loan Act; Rural Credits; the Frey Ship Subsidy Bill; he supported the employer's liability bill; the Federal Vocational Education Act; the Lever Agricultural Extension Act; and many other places of constructive legislation. Right now he is doing all he can to secure an immediate and decided reduction in taxes.

UNDERWOOD—AND PROHIBITION

Quoting from Senator Underwood's speech made in Montgomery July 31, 1923: "That decision made by the people of this country (adopting the Eighteenth Amendment) foreclosed the issue so far as I was concerned. . . . and now I know it is the supreme law of the land I would enforce it in its entire integrity. I know of no reason why any man should doubt my integrity on that question. "Every appropriation that has been presented to the Senate for prohibition is necessary to enforce prohibition in this country I have voted for." . . .

In response to the Senator's ringing declarations regarding prohibition Rev. W. B. Crumpton, the patriarch of prohibition in Alabama, and president of the Alabama Anti-Saloon League, said: "I have always admired Oscar Underwood, and I have offered him on only one question, prohibition. When he declares for the enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment in its entire integrity, that satisfies me."

Later Senator Underwood wrote Dr. Crumpton: "The cry that is being made for light wine and true enforcement of the law of the land, as the prohibition amendment is today. I have no desire for any concealment about the matter, as I always conduct my political affairs in the open."

Following this letter Senator Underwood wrote again to Dr. Crumpton: "In the letter I wrote you I was endeavoring, as far as I know how, to make it perfectly clear and plain that I believe in the enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment in its entirety; that there was no subterfuge or concealment on my part, and I stood for the honest, full and true enforcement of the law of the land, as the prohibition amendment is today. I have no desire for any concealment about the matter, as I always conduct my political affairs in the open."

Commenting on the foregoing, Dr.

Crumpton says: "These splendid words should satisfy the most exacting prohibitionist. Alabamians have a great opportunity to honor their state by casting a solid vote for her Senator. Fellow-Democrats and prohibitionists, let's get in behind the movement and put Oscar Underwood in the presidential chair! In honoring him we honor our country and ourselves."

Bravely and wholeheartedly reinforcing Dr. Crumpton's splendid stand for Alabama and her gifted son is Dr. H. H. McNeil, one of the Fathers of Methodism in Alabama, who was vice-president of the Alabama Anti-Saloon League when it was in the midst of the fight for prohibition.

Despite all this an effort is being made to inject the prohibition issue in the present campaign, but it just will not "inject." The men who have done the real work in the prohibition ranks are, largely, enthusiastically supporting Senator Underwood.

UNDERWOOD—AND THE FARMER

Some of the measures of supreme interest to farmers in which Senator Underwood has assisted are: The establishment of the great nitrate plants at Muscle Shoals, which will eventually mean so much to farmers all over the country; Farm Land Bank and Rural Credit legislation; Soil Survey appropriations; and the first Soil Survey in Alabama; Good Roads appropriations; flood relief; experimental work; the Smith-Lever bill; farm demonstration work, and many others.

Throughout his thirty years' service Mr. Underwood has followed a consistently constructive policy with respect to the treatment of agricultural interests. This has been embodied in two fixed principles: First, that every possible aid should be advanced to help the farmer increase his productivity, and, second, that an avenue should be provided through which he can profitably dispose of that which he produces. Mr. Underwood has consistently advocated "co-operative marketing," and aided materially in government assistance thereto.

UNDERWOOD—AND LABOR

The friends of Labor among public men are generally of two types—those who act and those who articulate; and it not infrequently happens that he who harangues the most accomplished the least.

During his thirty years of service in Congress Senator Underwood has received at his hands fair, honest and conscientious treatment. His record with respect to the measures in the interest of the man who earns his bread by honest toil has been one which will stand the test of time. He has been a consistent advocate of "co-operative marketing," and aided materially in government assistance thereto.

The record shows him to be a real and true friend of the workingman without having sought advantage, credit or gain for having done that which he regarded as beneficial and just. The fact that for twenty years he represented in the House a strong Labor section without serious opposition is conclusive that his record was generally regarded as fair.

UNDERWOOD—AND TAXATION

Senator Underwood has ever stood for equitable taxation for revenue only. Right now his voice is lifted in an effort to relieve the tremendous burden of taxation under which our people groan. Hear his words: "The people are becoming overburdened by extravagant appropriations of public moneys on the one hand, and the reckless and oppressive levies of taxes on the other."

"The drain upon the private resources of the people has already become so great that it stands forcibly in the way of business expansion." . . . "The only justification for taxation must be the collection of money in order that the government may economically function for the benefit of the people, and, when a greater burden of taxation is laid upon the people than is necessary to meet governmental expenditures, in my judgment there can be but one course to pursue, and that is to reduce the taxes." Senator Underwood is standing today for an immediate and decided downward revision of taxes.

UNDERWOOD—AND THE BONUS

Senator Underwood considers the bonus as unwise, equally for the soldier as for the civilian.

It is proposed to engage in a wild orgy of giving away money, without first making ample provision for the money to give away. Those who favor the bonus say that it will be a tax on the rich man. The bonus will be a tax on the people. It will be a doubtful blessing to a few and a positive burden to the many. The bonus would even pay two or three dollars, very likely, for every one given to the soldiers. The bonus is un-American and un-American and should not be countenanced. It can and tax reduction do not go together and cannot possibly go together.

UNDERWOOD—AND MUSCLE SHOALS

No one questions the loyalty of the Sheffield Standard to the cause of Muscle Shoals. Hear what that paper says of Senator Underwood in connection with this gigantic proposition: "For years they (the people of the Tennessee Valley) have fought for the development of Muscle Shoals! For years they have dreamed of 'The Valley Blooming Like a Rose.' All that time in Washington they have had the service of a leader, renowned from coast to coast, from the great lakes to the Gulf, for his courage, his statesmanship and ability (Underwood). Recently when Senator Underwood was asked his opinion of the joint power company bid for Muscle Shoals and its effect on the Muscle Shoals proposition, he stated 'that he had not read it; that he started out with Ford and it was his intention to stop with him.' The prosperity the people of the Tennessee Valley have enjoyed since the government plants have been located here; the steady employment that our people have had in all trades and all walks of life, are all directly attributable to Oscar W. Underwood. Knowing these things, we are confident that the people of this district will go on record without a dissenting vote, proclaiming to the world that our folks are appreciative, that we believe in love and respect, and are anxious to see the highest honor attainable by man, 'The Presidency of the United States,' won by 'our state's' most able leader and distinguished son, Oscar W. Underwood."

UNDERWOOD—AND THE OTHER ISSUES

No one who is at all informed is in doubt as to where Senator Underwood stands on any of the issues of the day, either state or national. His wisdom and his courage, both well known, cause him to take a stand and then make it known to all men. He never appeals to prejudice, he never plays to ignorance. He is four-square, open and aboveboard, and his political enemies all respect him for his fearlessness.

UNDERWOOD—AND THE PRESIDENTIAL ELECTION

The Democratic State Executive Committee is the constituted authority of the party. Its mandate is the law of the party. This authority has duly and regularly called an election in which each Democrat is given the opportunity to directly express his choice. That election on March 11 will be binding upon the party and regular members of the Democratic party.

In this duly and regularly called election of the Democratic party the members of that party will vote their choice for the Democratic nomination for President of the United States. They vote directly. Therefore they will vote for whom they desire as the Democratic nominee.

UNDERWOOD AND THE NOMINATION

The time has come to destroy that miserable political theory, now largely confined to the South, that a candidate from the South cannot be elected President of the United States. The prejudice which once existed against a Southern candidate has just about disappeared. If any basis ever existed for it the course of events has swept it away. Since the Civil War the United States has been engaged in two foreign wars, in both of which the South has played its full part and sealed with the blood of its sons the pledge of its loyalty to the Union.

For sixty years the South has been the backbone of the Democratic party. It has been content to be considered ineligible for anything but furnishing the votes. Now the whole country is ready to do away with this lingering ghost of sectional feeling. That a man from the South can be elected is proven by the expressions of the most influential papers in all sections of the country, commenting on Senator Underwood's candidacy.

In Senator Underwood we have, as is universally conceded, a candidate who rises to the full stature of a Presidential candidate; and now is the time to wipe out all sectional lines in politics by naming up political heroes who are men from Alabama who have a chance to win.

UNDERWOOD—AND HIS OPPOSITION

In the great service which Senator Underwood, called by a nation's people, stands ready to render his country, he finds himself opposed by a little band of self-seeking individuals. They have no dissenting hope or belief, developed idea of being successful in their efforts to discredit Senator Underwood before the people of the nation; but, piqued at the public's recognition of their presidential aspirations, they run on, hoping against hope that the impossible is to happen. There is nothing constructive in their candidacy or past record.

UNDERWOOD—ALABAMA'S OPPORTUNITY

The Pledgment Journal, under the caption: "Underwood—Alabama's and the South's Opportunity," says: "Senator Underwood, like many others, has not agreed with all the political views of Mr. Underwood, (but) regardless of any personal or political differences in which the Journal may have with Mr. Underwood, we are laying stress on the spirit of loyal home pride, eager to unite in the greatest opportunity Alabama of the South has ever had, and which the people of the United States, the opportunity confronting a Southern state, Alabama, in its own right, of fulfilling the man for the greatest political honor in the world is the honor that comes seldom and honor in fact, not accorded any southern state in many years, and the magnitude of the possibilities of Alabama's opportunity should inspire every loyal Alabama Democrat at least to stand one hundred per cent for Oscar Underwood. Anybody with any knowledge of things political should know that no other candidate in Alabama, and the South, is considered in the slightest degree, as a formidable candidate for the tremendous political honor. The movement of Senator Underwood is not merely Alabama-wide, it is nation-wide. From every section of the nation, and from every loyal citizen, there are thousands of letters to fall to realize that he is the most logical and most prominent candidate for the Presidency of the United States. Anybody with any knowledge of things political should know that no other candidate in Alabama, and the South, is considered in the slightest degree, as a formidable candidate for the tremendous political honor. The movement of Senator Underwood is not merely Alabama-wide, it is nation-wide. From every section of the nation, and from every loyal citizen, there are thousands of letters to fall to realize that he is the most logical and most prominent candidate for the Presidency of the United States. It is a great honor and one that comes seldom and honor in fact, not accorded any southern state in many years, and the magnitude of the possibilities of Alabama's opportunity should inspire every loyal Alabama Democrat at least to stand one hundred per cent for Oscar Underwood. SUDDEN DEATH

As we go to press news comes that Mr. Wm. Gore fell dead while sawing wood this morning. We have no other particulars.

MRS. WILEY GRAGG DEAD

Mrs. Wiley Gragg, mother of Mrs. Kelly Campbell, died at the home of Mrs. Campbell yesterday morning. She was an aged lady and the sands of her life had all run. The remains were buried at Pleasant Grove church this morning.

OYSTER SUPPER

Circle No 3 W. M. S. will give an oyster supper at the Baptist church tomorrow, (Friday) night, Feb. 8. Everybody is cordially invited to attend. A good feed in a good cause. Come and enjoy yourself.

MINISTER AND WORKERS MEET

Ministers and workers Conference. The Ministers and church workers of the Unity-Chilton and Bibb associations will meet at Maplesville, Monday Feb. 11th and continue until Friday. Many state leaders will be present as well as many leading pastors, to lecture and teach. Free Books and free entertainment. All are urged to come and stay.

A LANDMARK TO GO

As soon as the weather opens up for spring, the firm of Mullins & Moore will proceed to remove the large two story wooden building they have occupied for so many years with their mercantile business, and build in its place a modern two story brick that will be an ornament to the downtown district. Clanton will look real odd when that big old red building disappears, for it has been a landmark ever since the days when Clanton was only a village. All of us rejoice at this great improvement and also are pleased that this firm of splendid business men and citizens have been so successful in their labors that they now are able to erect a building in keeping with demands of their large trade. The News congratulates them and Clanton also for this splendid addition to the city.

TEMERSON STORE GONE

The dry goods and notions store conducted by Mr. Temerson is only a memory in Clanton now. Last Friday they quietly packed up and moved to pastures new. It is reported that it went to Dora Mines in Walker county. Every time one store moves out two come back in the place and so Clanton continues to expand.

GETTING READY

Workmen are fitting up the Woodard building, on 2nd avenue, west of the railroad, for the Wadesonian Theatre. Mr. Wade tells us he hopes to have his theatre installed and in operation there within two weeks. This gives him a central location down in town and will increase the popularity of his show a great deal. He expects to arrange this new place up to date, and make it not only comfortable but an ornament to the town. Mr. Wade operates a large chain of movie houses and is jam up on "his stuff." He knows how to select popular pictures and he does it.

BETWEEN SEASONS

Following Christmas every year since we can remember has always been a period of dull times. All lines of business appear to pause for a short time to take stock of the situation and make plans for another year after the holidays, and the consequence is that we always experience a period of dull times. The same thing has happened this year that always happens and there is nothing to indicate any continued stress of business inactivity. In fact, the banks and big industrial concerns say that the future is very bright and promises another year of increasing prosperity. So, lets cheer up now as the spring time draws near and make our arrangements to take advantage of the tide of good times as it comes our way. An intensified cultivation of cotton with a decreased acreage is the proper thing for the farmer to do. With ample food and feed crops planted and a small highly fertilized and intensely cultivated area in cotton is the program that will put the farmer on easy street in 1924.

REGULAR AUCTION SALE

There will be an auction sale every Saturday at the W. W. Fox old stand. Bring your goods, farm tools, buggies, wagons, cars, or in fact, anything, from a box of potash to a steam piano and we will sell it for you. JNO. W. COX.

JULIA BEAUCHAMP O. E. S. ENTERTAINED

Mrs. Hinkle entertained the officers of Julia Beauchamp Chapter O. E. S. with a spend the day last Thursday. A beautiful basket of fruit adorned the center of the table, and a lovely course dinner was served at the noon hour. Plans were discussed for the year's work. Those enjoying this lovely hospitality were: Mr. Omar Reynolds, Worthy Patron, Mrs. Hinkle, Worthy Matron, Mrs. Gragg, Associate Matron, Mrs. Guy Higgins, Conductress, Mrs. Hays, Associate Conductress, Mrs. G. C. Harris, Secretary, Mrs. M. A. Gore, Treasurer, Mrs. Pipes, Marshal, Mrs. Pifer, Chaplain, Mrs. B. M. Roberts, Organist, Adah Mrs. H. F. Downs, Ruth, Mrs. Lande, Esther, Miss Dollie Harris, Martha, Mrs. Robert Williams, Warden, Mrs. M. L. White, Sentinel, Mr. Pipes.

FOR RENT—13 acres land and good house. One and one fourth miles from Clanton. For particulars see, J. Hance Alred, Clanton, Ala.

W. M. S. MEETING.

The W. M. S. Circles No. 3 and 2 will meet at Mrs. V. J. Gragg's Monday, Feb. 11th at 3:00 o'clock. Circle 3 will have charge of the program.

UNFAIR METHODS

The anti-McAdoo campaigners are trying to injure and hurt his political chances because he was employed as an attorney by an oil company after he quit the government job he had. Our recollection is that he gave as his reason, at the time he resigned his government job, that he was going back into the practice of law to make more money for his family. Can any one blame him for that? He accepted a fee from the oil company, as a free American citizen had a right to do and the good salary his services demanded is only an evidence of his worth as an attorney. He did no wrong. Why not play fair? This hitting below the belt is not calculated to help his enemies much. Lawyers are like the rest of us, they work for wage and the man who pays the highest price is the one they work for.

You will lose money if you don't get our prices on bulk garden and field seeds before buying. Alred Drug Co., Clanton, Alabama.

Salmon Eggs Are Used To Lure Mountain Trout

Salmon eggs are another delicacy that the mountain, cutthroat, dolly varren and rainbow trout of the western ranges are very partial toward.

This bait is fished in the swift and tumbling waters of the little mountain rivers of Idaho, Washington and Oregon to a large extent, as they are obtained in the vicinity of the great salmon canneries.

Used in connection with a small spinner or double spoon spinner these eggs are a deadly killer on the western trout. They are also great lures for the gray trout of the northern lakes.—Sportsmen's Digest.

One Reason for Nervous Disorders

YOUR doctor can tell you that nervous disorders are very common among Americans. One reason for this is found in the fact that they are great coffee drinkers.

Coffee contains caffeine, a drug, prescribed by doctors as an emergency stimulant for the heart and nervous system. It has a tendency to increase blood pressure, develop heart irregularities and cause digestive disturbances.

If you feel that coffee is not good for you, serve Postum as your meal-time drink.

Postum is a pure cereal beverage that refreshes and satisfies. It is absolutely free from caffeine or any other irritating drug.

Try a cup of Postum with your dinner or supper tonight. Postum is sold everywhere.

Postum for Health

"There's a Reason"

Postum comes in two forms: Instant Postum (in tins) prepared instantly in the cup by the addition of boiling water. Postum Cereal (in packages) for those who prefer the flavor brought out by boiling fully 20 minutes. The cost of either form is about one-half cent a cup.

Big Increase in Number of Cows

Dairying Around New York and Other Cities Makes Good Showing.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

That farmers are constantly on the alert to take advantage of new opportunities as they arise is typically illustrated by the development of dairying around New York city, says the United States Department of Agriculture. Growth of the urban population and improved methods of handling and shipping milk have steadily widened the field of distribution. This is shown by the fact that from 1880 to 1920 the number of cows on farms in counties nearest the city increased 50 per cent, while the number on farms from 200 to 225 miles away more than doubled.

Increase in Fluid Milk.

Fluid milk sold from the farms nearest the city doubled in quantity from 1880 to 1920, and quadrupled in the case of the farms farthest away. Counties nearest the city reached their maximum dairy production by 1900. Those situated more than 150 miles away made a gain of practically one-third between 1900 and 1920. Similar extensions of dairying areas have been made, through a lesser degree, around other large cities.

Another example of wholesale readjustment in farming policies due to a changed condition is furnished by the country along the Gulf and Atlantic coasts, where climatic conditions make the fight against the boll weevil exceptionally hard. Cotton acreage in parts of this region has been cut 50 per cent. Farmers are turning to the production of farm maintenance crops, velvet beans, peanuts, other forage crops, and pasture for the extension of hog raising, beef production and dairying. In some localities sugar cane for sirup, sweet potatoes, watermelons and other truck crops, are receiving increased attention.

Farming Is Uncertain.

Readjustments now taking place in agriculture, say officials of the department, draw attention to a fact sometimes forgotten, namely, that changes are always going on in the basic conditions of farming due to the growth and distribution of population, the rise or fall of wages and prices, the heightened or lessened cost of transportation, crop pests and diseases, and other influences. Wide-awake farmers are quick to note these changes and modify their production policies accordingly. Farming today is more uncertain than it has been for many years. It is undergoing more necessary readjustments. Farmers who study the situation, and alter their plans to suit the circumstances, will be the first to cut their losses on crops that for any reason have become unprofitable, and the first to get their farms back on a paying basis.

Finds Cut-Over Land Is Good Place for Poultry

Profitable use of cut-over land is one of the problems of any section in which much lumbering is done. F. M. Harrison of the Sunset Hill Farms, Lake, Miss., with the advice of the county agricultural extension agent, has tried poultry raising as a solution of the problem both for his own and for his neighbors' information. Starting in 1920 with one male bird and five hens of high-producing strains, he had by the next spring about fifty pullets, and by January, 1923, it had increased to 400 pullets. For the eight months from January to September, 1923, Mr. Harrison realized from his flock a profit of $400 in addition to the value of the birds, which, by September, numbered 600. The profits were made almost entirely from the sale of eggs, according to reports to the United States Department of Agriculture, the price received averaging about 35 cents per dozen. Many people have visited the farm, some coming a distance of 75 miles, and reports show that nearly a hundred farmers who have studied the methods used on this farm are starting flocks. Mr. Harrison is increasing his flock and expects to devote additional time to his poultry plant.

Some Things Live Stock Shippers Should Not Do

Don't fail to examine cars for nails and holes before loading.
Don't fail to erect partitions separating each kind of stock in the car.
Don't fail to bed cars well, using sand, cinders or shavings in summer and straw or sawdust in winter.
Don't fasten partitions to interfere with opening doors.
Don't use poles spiked to side of car for partitions. They come loose and are likely to cause serious damage to passing trains and are difficult to remove at destination without injuring the car.
Don't build temporary upper decks in single-deck cars. They are likely to fall down in transit and jockeys are not equipped to unload them.
Don't overcrowd in the cars. Hogs should have sufficient room to lie down. It is cheaper to use two cars than to cause dead and crippled stock by overcrowding.
Don't load calves in upper deck.
Don't load hogs in the upper deck if you have a double-deck load of hogs and sheep.
Don't load hogs under cattle.
Don't load bulls loose with other stock. Partition off the them.—Farmers' Exchange.

Liming in Winter Is Good Judgment

Haul Larger Loads on Sled Than on Farm Wagons.

Some New York state farmers may find winter a good time to haul lime stone for their land. Those whose farms are so situated that they have a long uphill haul from the railroad, and who wish to haul by sleigh, are likely to find winter hauling especially desirable, the New York State College of Agriculture says.

When the sleighing is good, larger loads can be drawn on a sled than can be hauled on a wagon at other seasons of the year. In winter there is a period of several weeks when this work may be done. This will enable one to haul the limestone without interfering too much with ice harvesting, butchering, wood cutting and other winter farm work.

If the weather is favorable and the snow is not too deep, limestone may be applied at any time during the winter. Burned and hydrated lime, however, may be put on more advantageously when the land can be worked so as to mix the lime with the surface soil soon after spreading. It will give better results this way than if left for some weeks on the surface. Unless mixed with the soil soon after spreading these more active forms go over to the same chemical form as limestone in chunks which cannot be mixed with the soil so completely as if stirred soon after spreading. Whatever form, an intimate mixture of lime with the soil always gives best results.

Any kind of lime should be kept in a dry place. Lump lime is sometimes piled in the field to slake. This results in considerable waste. Hydrated lime must be kept dry or it continues slaking and the bags may burst open, making it difficult to handle them and causing some waste. Further, it takes up weight so there is more to handle when it comes to hauling and spreading. This increase in weight and bulk may well be considered in spreading, so as to be sure that enough is used to grow the desired crop.

Clover in Garden Will Provide Green Manure

It is a very good plan to sow some kind of clover in part of the garden each year and, after letting it stand one season, plow it under for the green manure. It not only tends to place the soil in better condition mechanically, but the nitrogen the clover gathers from the air will be valuable. The roots and tops plowed under will furnish humus. The rest from garden crops starves out a lot of the insects, and when the ground goes back into garden it will be like a new soil of great fertility.

It is well to manure heavily just before seeding the clover, as this will cause a heavier growth and the manure itself will be largely available when the garden crops need it the following years. Garden crops always get the best from manures after they have had a chance to rot well. Alfalfa is even better than clover, and sweet clover will produce more root growth in one year than seed and the second year after the seeding the roots naturally decay, and are easily plowed. It produces a very heavy growth quickly the second spring, and this can be plowed under then, but the heavy roots make this pretty difficult, though it permits using the ground for cropping the same year.

Liming the soil before seeding to any clover will be an advantage, for if the land is very sour no clover will make much growth. The first seeding to clover in the garden should be inoculated, but after that, if rotated every three or four years, no further inoculating will be needed, as the bacteria will remain there.—L. H. C., Kansas.

Destroy All Cedars to Control Rust of Apples

Apple rust inhabits apple leaves and fruits during part of its life history and cedar trees during the other part. It is the fungus which causes the "cedar apples" which are so conspicuous during wet weather in the spring. The infestation on the apple is often severe enough to produce serious damage, and farmers who wish to fully protect their crop of apples should waste no time in destroying the cedars, as infection will occur during any wet spells for the next five or six weeks.

No profitable method of control has been devised except to destroy the cedars. If it is possible to control by spraying but the cost is too great for it to pay. On the contrary, cutting the cedars for a mile or two on all sides of the orchard will accomplish control without further efforts. The profit from this operation depends on the size of the orchard, the number of trees to be cut, and the number of neighbors willing to co-operate. There are other similar rusts of pears, quince, and haw which have one stage of its life history on cedars; but they are not so important economically as the apple rust.

Use Grain for Horses

After Roughage Diet Horses that have been wintered mainly on roughage, such as hay, oat straw, and corn stover, should be started on grain again a month or six weeks prior to the beginning of spring work, because they must be gaining in weight and hardened up if they are to "hit the collar."

Is Winter Time Your Backache Time?

DOES every cold, chill or attack of grip leave you lame, achy and all worn out? Does your back throb and ache until it seems you just can't keep going another day? Do you know these troubles are often due to weakened kidneys?

Winter's colds and chills throw a heavy strain on the kidneys. The kidneys are apt to weaken and fall behind in filtering the blood. Poisons accumulate and upset blood and nerves.

Then comes constant backache, rheumatic pains, headache, dizziness and kidney irregularities.

Don't wait! Delay is often serious. Use Doan's Pills—a stimulant diuretic to the kidneys. Doan's have helped thousands. They are recommended by users everywhere. Ask your neighbor!

"Use Doan's," Say These Good Folks:

Mrs. J. F. Deane, 12 S. Jordan St., Samson, Ala., says: "I had an attack of kidney trouble which made my back lame and weak. My back ached from morning until night and there was a soreness across my kidneys which prevented me from doing much about the house. Sharp pains were frequent and annoying. I also had headaches and dizzy spells. I used Doan's Pills and they rid me of the trouble."

A Road from Alaska to Peru~

Few people realize the size of the Louisville & Nashville Railroad System, and the extent to which its tracks cover and serve the heart of the Southland.

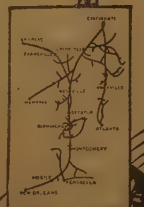

The L. & N. operates 5,040 miles of road, to which should be added 2,690 miles of double and switching tracks, making a total of 7,730 miles in all.

If all of the tracks operated by the L. & N. were placed in a continuous line, they would form a road stretching from Alaska, to Peru in South America; or, they would lay a double track from Boston to San Francisco, with some to spare.

The L. & N. enters thirteen states; connects more than a dozen large cities and serves a vast urban and rural population. The L. & N. System is one of the vital links of the great chain of railroad transportation in this country; and it renders to the people living within its territory a freight and passenger service unsurpassed.

Look at the map. See how well the L. & N. tracks blanket the territory from the Ohio to the Gulf—uniting and serving the many important communities located therein.

VERBET NEWS

There appeared in recent issue of the county newspapers an article published by County Superintendent Foshee giving facts connected with the recent Thorndyke-McCall Reading tests that were conducted by a representative of the State Department of Education. In September these same tests were given to the pupils of the Verbena school in the grades 2-11 inclusive. The results given solely for the purpose of finding the reading ability and to stimulate the act of pupils along the lines of more accurate reading. Recently we have received a second form of the test, difficult, and when the results have been tabulated we shall be glad to furnish the analysis of the tests to our readers if they desire them.

The following median grades, with basis 100 as an average for U. S. in the several grades:

Second Grade	73
Third Grade	93
Fourth Grade	76
Fifth Grade	84
Sixth Grade	79
Seventh Grade	80
Eighth Grade	81
Ninth Grade	82

Tenth Grade	91
Eleventh Grade	91
Grades 2-11	82
Grades 2-6	82

These tests have enabled us to determine accurately the chief faults in each pupil's reading—ability to understand the printed page and expression of his or her answer to questions. Of course, they are of no service unless the teacher use them as a basis for correction of the defects.

We found on examination of the higher scores—and some few are as high as 130—that they are made by pupils who have been regular in attendance of eight and nine months schools. And those making the lower scores in some cases as low as 43, are pupils who have had only short term schools and have recently come into Verbena, or of pupils who have begun school late in the fall after crops were gathered and who are the first to drop out of school in the spring to begin plowing. Should the scores of pupils who have attended five months or less be eliminated, the average would be between 90 and 95.

It might be of interest to the people of the county to know how these tests are made and the scores determined. The tests are prepared by Thorndyke and McCall, two prominent educators, and sent out to schools scattered throughout the United States.

tes, and thousands of pupils take them. Then the papers are collected and worked over with the intent of establishing averages for certain grades in school and also with relation to the age of pupils. For instance, if a pupil makes a score of 50 actual points, and is 181 months old, the percentage of that pupil is 97. The pupil should read that well at the age of 175 months. Again, a pupil makes a score of 40, age, 108 months. The percentage is 110, because the average reading age on that score has been determined to be 121 months. A pupil may make as high a score as 77, and yet have a percentage of 85 due to the fact that his age is relatively high.

If parents who have been habituated in keeping their children from school will only realize that year by year they are retarding their children's progress and keeping them much below the average for their school mates who attend regularly, let alone the 100 percent average of the country, then Chilton county will advance rapidly educationally. This does not mean on paper, but in the intellectual growth of the children. The same things may be said of the other subjects in school besides reading. And the same facts are true in each case.

Let us have regular attendance in long term schools.

W. E. G. SUTTON.

New Year Greeting

The good old year of 1923 has become now a memory of the past. With all of its joys and sorrows it is buried and, as the days go by, it will become merely a misty dream.

We have all had to face some trials and sorrows, but in the main, it was a kind and gracious year to us all. In bidding it good bye, I wish to express my sincere thanks to the many friends and customers who have loyally stood by me with their friendship and patronage and have enabled me to wind up the old year with a feeling of satisfaction with my success and with a steadfast hope for the future.

I wish for you one and all, the successful culmination of your brightest hopes for the New Year. May good health, happiness and prosperity attend you through the days to come. May 1924 have for all of us happy surprises and untold blessings.

I am deeply grateful to every one who has favored me with their patronage during the year just gone and most respectfully ask that you will continue to give me the opportunity to deserve your confidence and trade.

Your friend,

DO IT NOW

In a few weeks the long hot days of summer will be with us again and the horses and mules that are driven in from the country by people who come and spend their good money here will have to stand all day without a drink of water and suffer the agonies of thirst, just as they have in the past because there is no place provided for them to get a drink. The News did its best last summer to get the ear of those in authority on the subject, but failed. We are going to begin earlier this time and are going to call on the good women of the town and help us.

Mr. M. F. Jones says he stands ready to do all the work required in establishing a cement drinking trough for these dumb and faithful animals and that he will so construct it that it will never overflow, and waste any water nor make a mess on the streets. It will cut off automatically and just keep the trough supplied with fresh water as fast as it is used out.

That is exactly what we need and if the town will furnish the material for its construction and the water for these suffering beasts of burden to drink, we can take care of them this summer. How about it?

OYSTER SUPPER FRIDAY EVENING

The ladies of Circle No. 3, of the Methodist Church are going to give an Oyster Supper at the Tea Room of Mrs. C. L. Branch tomorrow (Friday) evening, Feb. 15, beginning at 5 o'clock.

They solicit the patronage of the public and we sincerely trust that everyone will remember the time and place and call down and not only enjoy an oyster feed, prepared in any style to suit, but will help these excellent ladies in raising funds to complete their beautiful church building.

THE TRUE MAN

There's to the Old Man, sans peur et reproche—
Love, loyalty, and the faith of one cool comrade to another!
He is gentle with all men because he knows what clay they are made of;
He is true to all men, because he feels that each one, even his enemy, holds within his breast a tiny spark of God;
He is faithful to all men, because he knows that out of great darkness in a man's soul will finally come the light that brings dawn to all of the struggling races in the world;
He is brave and determined in the face of odds, courageous against the foes of patriotism and righteousness, because he believes that when a man's ideal is the highest he can dream and his faith the truest he can conceive some great Power will at last reward the world and make straight the crooked paths of humanity saving for God his country, his people and his flag!

DISASTROUS FIRE

Rev. W. S. Cox Loses Barn Contents and Live Stock By Fire

Last night, about 8:30 o'clock, while Rev. W. S. Cox and his wife were out at a neighbor house, his barn was discovered to be on fire and before anything at all could be done to check the conflagrating the entire building was enveloped in flames and it and its contents were a total loss.

In the barn was stored all the corn, hay, fodder, potatoes and other farm products grown on the farm the past year together with the tools and farm machinery belonging to the place.

Also two very fine milk cows were in their stalls in the barn and were burned along with the other losses. A horse who also occupied a stall in the barn happened not to be fastened in and he was out in the lot and escaped.

This is a most serious blow to Mr. Cox, and we learn that no insurance whatever was carried. We have no estimate of the amount of the loss, but it will total up to a large amount.

The impression is that some one entered the barn for the purpose of robbery and set it off, either by accident or on purpose to secure what they were after. Our sympathy is with this good man in his misfortune.

A REAL TREAT

Last week sure enough good luck stopped at our house again.

Mr. Harmon Hendley, one of the real farmers out on Route 7, left at our home a basket of splendid fresh eggs and some nicely cured sweet potatoes.

We don't wonder that he is so "fat and sassy." A fellow who lives on such rations as that would naturally gravitate into that condition.

Our hat is off to Harmon for his kindness and may his hens always work overtime and the products of his farm multiply an hundred fold.

KILL THE RATS

The Civic Club is waging a campaign against the rats and mice and are offering prizes to the boys of Clanton for the largest and, next largest kill.

A first class baseball glove is offered as first prize to the boy who kills the largest number of rats and mice. This prize is given by the Chamber of Commerce.

The second prize, given by the Civic Club, is a genuine, first quality baseball, to the boy who kills the second greatest number of rats and mice.

These prizes have been selected by Col. Victor J. Heard, who, you all know, is a competent judge of baseball equipment.

The prizes are on exhibition down in town and can be seen and examined.

The only conditions on this contest is that the contestant must reside inside the corporate limits of Clanton and must turn in, to the proper persons designated below, the tail of each rat or mouse destroyed.

The committee of awards consists of Messrs. Macy F. Jones, J. Mel Martin and J. L. Johnson.

Mr. Jones has kindly consented to act as chairman of this committee, and you can find him at the Boy Scout's Headquarters every Friday afternoon at 5 o'clock, the only time designated for receiving the rat tails, and checking them to the proper contestant. One penny each will be paid for each tail delivered.

The Town Council kindly agreed to furnish the cash for this payment. This campaign opens February 23 and closes March 28. On Tuesday April 1, the prizes will be awarded.

Make your arrangements, boys, and get busy.

IN MEMORY OF

Mrs. Ann Penilton. On last Wednesday morning as the sun was rising so glorious out of the east, the grim messenger of death visited the home of Mr. Joe Penilton and carried away his beloved wife, Mrs. Ann Penilton.

She had been sick three weeks when God thought best to call her home. She leaves her husband seven grand children and seven great grand children to mourn her loss.

Weep not dear friends, for our loss is heaven's gain.

Mrs. Penilton was a missionary Baptist. She remembered to begin to serve God in the days of her youth and until the day she died God was first in deed and thought. Blessed comforting thought that when all is said and done her last words were, "I'm going home."

A loved one from us has gone a voice we loved is still a place is vacant in our home which never can be filled.

By one who loved her.

THE UNDERWOOD CAMPAIGN

Hon. Oscar Underwood has certainly been the unfortunate victim of his friends more times since he announced for president, than any man we ever heard of.

In the first place, the Alabama legislature, in its wild enthusiasm and hectic desire to "make his calling an election sure" tied a mill rock around his neck by attempting to settle the question in the legislative halls instead of at the ballot box. This very move has done the candidacy of Mr. Underwood untold harm, both at home and abroad.

Another unwise step which was no doubt urged upon him by some of his friends, was his uncalled for attack on the Ku Klux Klan.

That order was not an issue in the election and would not have been had he not forced the matter by making an unwise and uncalled for attack on them, on his own volition or upon the advice of his friends.

That has not only hurt him so far as the individual members of the Klan are personally concerned, but the public at large looks upon that attack as a direct bid for the foreign and Catholic vote, because this Order is supposed to strenuously oppose both, and there are a great many voters who do not belong to the Klan, who are bitterly opposed to these two elements and who refuse to support Mr. Underwood for that reason.

Another thing that is doing his campaign a great amount of injury is the belief, in the minds of a large number of people, that in case he goes in to the convention with not enough delegates to nominate him that he will legally throw his support to Al Smith, of New York and, as he is a Catholic and an avowed whiskey man, the voters fear that the anti-Catholic and prohibition vote of Alabama would ultimately find itself supporting the very two questions, above all others, that are abhorrent to them.

Then the effort to make it appear that Mr. McAdoo, his strongest opponent, has been criminally connected with the Tea Pot Dome oil scandal, is another place where his friends are doing Mr. Underwood a great deal of harm.

The average American voter is an ardent believer in fair play, and this subterfuge is too palpable a fraud to fool anybody. It is only another boomerang that will return and smite the very circulators desired to help.

Mr. Underwood personally is a great man and tutored statesman and it is a very great pity that in the greatest political crisis and opportunity of his career that he should have fallen into the hands of such misguided and self-serving friends.

As an Alabamian his state would delight to honor him, but as the advocate of such sentiments as his friends and advisers have saddled him with, his people at home are left in a very grave quandary as whether it is safe to be loyal to him, or whether it is wiser to be true to their convictions as to prohibition and Americanism.

GRADE ORDINANCE

No. 2.

An ordinance fixing and establishing the grade of Second Avenue North from the East property line of Sixth Street, to the East property line of First Street, and of First Street, from the South property line of Second Avenue North to the South property line of Second Avenue South, also the curbs and walks on both sides thereof.

Be it ordained, by the Council of the Town of Clanton, Alabama as follows:

Sec. 1 That the grade of Second Avenue North from the East property line of Sixth Street to the East property line of First Street, and of First Street from the South property line of Second Avenue North to the South property line of Second Avenue South, also the curbs and walks on both sides thereof, be, and the same are hereby fixed and established as shown on profile sheets number 6, 6 A 6 B and 6 C, heretofore exhibited to this Council and now on file in the office of the Town Clerk.

Read approved and adopted Feb. 13, 1924.

Approved: V. J. GRAGG, Mayor.

A true copy,
ADA M. ATKINSON
Town Clerk.

THE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

At a meeting of the Chamber of Commerce last Friday night, new life seemed to be infused into the body and the outlook for this year indicated that some real things were going to be done.

The time having arrived for the election of officers the following well known and popular citizens were duly elected:

Dr. V. J. Gragg, President, W. W. Fox, first Vice president, V. J. Elmore, second vice president.

Board of Directors.

C. B. Cox, J. P. Lawrence, Tom Kemp, J. Lee Smith, T. H. Neidhart. With an official head made up of such wide awake and progressive citizens as these, we think it is a safe bet to predict, for the Chamber this year, an active useful and pushing career.

A chamber of Commerce properly conducted, is a great, and almost necessary, adjunct to the prosperity of any town or community. It should be wide in its scope and progressive in all of its activities. Never made the agent of individual or personal business, but always working for the greatest good to the greatest number and for the material upbuilding and the general welfare of all alike.

We have great confidence that the new board of officers will have these ideals in view and will give us an administration that will leave a record of real achievements behind them.

A SANITARY SURVEY

A sanitary survey of the city is being made now by Mr. M. F. Jones, city plumber, and will be completed in a few days.

This is an actual estimate of what work will be required, the kind and amount of material it will take and the other minor details, to complete a sanitary toilet system all over the parts of the city supplied by sewerage.

This survey is following up the lines of the new sanitary ordinance recently adopted by the Council, and the putting in of this equipment will be made mandatory in every case where the conditions fall under the terms of said ordinance.

Sanitation is an essential and necessary part of any town where living conditions become congested and we feel sure the property owners will all cooperate with the city in this very important matter of sanitation.

ALWAYS GETS 'EM

Federal enforcement officer, Walter Gillispie, was in town the first part of the week.

No matter where he is he is always carrying on. Finding a scarcity of his kind of game in Chilton County, he crossed over into Coosa and rounded up a bunch of old timers with a record of years as moonshiners.

Sooner or later Walter always gets in the game and when he does illicit stills and moonshine liquor always go up in price on account of the scarcity.

Mr. C. B. Cox will motor to Tallahassee Florida tomorrow.

THE ELECTION CONTEST

When Court was called Tuesday morning, attorneys for both parties to the contest had a conference with the Presiding Judge, and the attorneys for Contestant explained to the Judge that since they had checked the registration and poll tax records before they served the list of challenged voters on contestee, and from such examination made up the list of those shown by these records to have been disqualified, and that after Court adjourned Monday afternoon they had again examined these records, and found that they had been added to since this examination was made by showing a large percent of the voters challenged to now be shown to be qualified.

The attorneys stated to the Judge that they did not claim that anything improper had been done, but that they were entitled to have time to compare the tax collector's report of poll taxes paid with the list of qualified voters to see if they were correct.

There was no opposition to this by the attorneys for the contestee, and on account of the large number of attorneys engaged in the case it was found that Monday the 5th day of May was the earliest date that would be suitable to all those interested, then the case was continued to that date and Court adjourned.

IT WON'T DO

Old man Asa Chandler, the Coca-Cola King, who resides at Atlanta, Ga., is having his connubial ups and downs now.

He is very old and he is very rich. A woman of New Orleans has just unsuccessfully sued him for $500,000 for breach of promise.

In the mean time the old Adonis fell for a young flapper and she put the marriage over.

Just the other day this love bird of the amorous old gent, was arrested in an apartment in the city in company with two men.

The whole bunch was haled into court together but the versatile Mrs. Chandler ran away.

Now she is using some of old Chandler's money to employ lawyers in an attempt to clear herself of the disgraceful charge.

We have no interest in old man Chandler, nor in the young flapper who roped him in. He is only getting exactly what he bought. He was foolish to think that any young woman could fall in love with him in his doddering old age. Everybody but him could have told him what he was heading into.

There are immutable laws of nature that will always exist and when you undertake to run counter to them you usually get it right where the chicken got the axe.

The violets of May don't ever bloom successfully in the lap of winter. All things have their season and never prosper under a forced growth.

Plant your garden now and then plant it over if it gets killed.

Good many people are gardening today.

Statewide Association of Business Interests Faces Prosperous New Year Will Continue to Oppose Exodus of Workers From the State.

Effective January 1st, 1924, the Associated Industries of Alabama supplants the former Alabama Manufacturers' Association as the body which will represent the collective business and manufacturing interests of Alabama. Announcement of the change in name and enlargement in the field of the association's constructive service to the state is made by L. Sevier, president.

The Associated Industries of Alabama enters the new year, according to Mr. Sevier, with a membership distributed in 47 counties from Huntsville on the north to Mobile on the south; Talladega on the east and Fayette on the west. The capital investment of member firms is approximately $500,000,000, it is stated, and the annual payroll of these institutions is approximately $140,000. Employees of firms contributing to the support of the association are reported to number 130,000.

"These member firms," says Mr. Sevier, "aid in the support of between 500,000 and 600,000 people and furnish the railroads a greater volume of traffic than the membership of any other single agency."

Reviewing the work of the association in its annual report for 1923, and pointing out these possibilities for an enlargement in its sphere of usefulness to Alabama, Mr. Sevier notes that it has cleaved closely to the line of its announced policies which are summed up as follows:

"To promote safety first measures; to conserve life and health; to eliminate illiteracy; to obtain enactment of sound, economic legislation and oppose laws injurious to the industrial development of the state; to abate trade abuses and harmonize business relations; to obtain freight rates and classifications; to extend the market for Alabama products; to disseminate trade information tending towards the incultivation of sound economic views and relations; to promote the best interests of its members and the public."

One of the outstanding accomplishments of the association during the year ended has been its vigorous and well conceived campaign of opposition to negro migration from Alabama, which has proved of incalculable benefit to both agricultural and industrial sections, it is pointed out. Through its accredited representatives in Montgomery, during legislative sessions, the Association has also opposed legislative enactments of distinctly socialistic and paternalistic nature, it is stated, and has worked at all times for sound economic laws which will facilitate Alabama's harmonious commercial and industrial development.

Ancient Blue Seal Ring.

Tut-Ankh-Amen's ring is said to have been in the museum of the New York Historical society for the last sixty years. The presence of this ancient ring is explained by the habit of the monarchs of old Egypt of bestowing rings and other personal objects on lucky persons who won their favor. Inscriptions on their tombs frequently picture pharaohs presenting such trinkets to court and other attendants. Each sovereign was well provided with rings, it seems. The blue seal ring in the museum in question was identified as King Tut-Ankh-Amen's by Dr. Caroline Williams, Egyptologist of the Metropolitan museum and Bryn Mawr, from a three-year study of its inscription. It is part of the collection of Dr. Henry Abbott, an American physician, who practiced in Cairo from 1832 to 1832. His accumulation of 3,000 objects was bought by public-spirited citizens and presented to the museum.

ALABAMA NEWS HAPPENINGS

A Resume of the More Important Events of Interest Condensed To An Epitomized Form.

If a person learned 130 laws a day it would take that person just 10 years to learn all of the laws that are now on the statute books in this country and that person would then only know what the law was 10 years ago, because he would not have had time to learn the new ones adopted during his period of study, according to the statement of W. J. Wynn, in an address before the League of Women Voters at Fairfield.

Something over $350,000 is being spent in the way of improvements in Russellville and Franklin county at this time. The expenditures include a new water system, a new ice plant, the finishing of the Jackson highway between Russellville and Phil Campbell, Ala., a distance of 25 miles, installation of new lighting and power wiring by the Alabama Power company and several new dwellings.

All necessary arrangements for holding the state primary set for March 11 will be made and carried out, K. B. Evans of Birmingham, chairman of the state democratic executive committee, said in a statement issued. Mr. Evans stated that the ruling of Attorney General Harwell G. Davis, that the primary set for March 11 is within the party jurisdiction was correct.

Experiments under way at the Southern Experiment Station of the Department of the Interior, University of Alabama, Tuscaloosa, under the direct management of the United States Bureau of Mines, will bring about wonderful results in a recovery of profitable products in the blast furnace dust, heretofore a waste product, it is said.

The fact that Joe Lucy, a child under 16, was allowed to work in a coal mine of the Railway Fuel company, despite the provisions of the state labor law and that he met death through accident in the mine, gave the administrator of his estate ground for action under the homicide law of Alabama, according to a decision by the supreme court.

LESSON FOR FEBRUARY 17

JOSHUA AND THE CONQUEST OF CANAAN

LESSON TEXT—Josh. 1:1-9; 23:1-3. GOLDEN TEXT—Not one thing hath failed of all the good things which the Lord your God spake concerning you.—Josh. 23:14.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Lessons From the Life of Joshua. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Joshua and the Conquest of Canaan.

The book of Joshua, from which our lesson is taken, is a history of the conquest of the Promised Land and its apportionment among the tribes of Israel. It takes its name from its principal character, Joshua. During the wilderness journey he was Moses' minister and captain of his army. When Moses was denied the privilege of going over the Jordan, Joshua was appointed to the leadership of Israel. Moses, the representative of the law, brought Israel to the borders of Canaan. Joshua was the man chosen to lead the people into the place of rest. The name, "Joshua," has the same derivation as the name "Jesus".

I. Joshua's Call (Josh. 1:1, 2). Moses was dead, but God's work must go on. The work was continued by calling Joshua to take it up. Joshua, no doubt, was sorrowful over the loss of his master, but there was now no time for mourning.

II. God Renews His Promise of the Land to Israel (Josh. 1:3, 4).

This promise had been given to Abraham and renewed to Isaac, Jacob and Moses. It is now renewed to Israel when they are about to enter upon its possession. The borders of the land were "from the wilderness and this Lebanon even unto the great river, the river Euphrates, all the land of the Hittites and unto the great sea toward the going down of the sun" (v. 4). The nearest it was ever possessed was during the reigns of David and Solomon, though not then fully realized. This land still belongs to the Jews and in God's own time they shall possess it. Their possession of this land was due entirely to themselves. God promised them that wherever their feet set upon the land, it was theirs. If they failed to secure possession, it was because they failed to claim it.

III. God's Presence Promised to Joshua (Josh. 1:5).

Joshua was entering upon a perilous and difficult enterprise, but the Lord said, as He was with Moses so He would be with him. The difficulties before him were:

1. The Jordan River (v. 2). This river was now at its flood (Josh. 3:15), making it impossible for armies to cross.

2. The People Were Living in Walled Cities (Num. 13:38). Notwithstanding this, God is ready to insure success. (1) "I will not fail thee, nor forsake thee" (v. 5). (2) "There shall not any man be able to stand before thee" (v. 5). (3) "As I was with Moses, so will I be with thee." Joshua had been with Moses throughout their forty years' experience, from the Egyptian deliverance to the time of his death. Because he believed that God was with him, he was willing and ready to cross Jordan at its flood and courageously meet the enemies on the other side.

IV. Conditions of Blessings in the Land (Josh. 1:6-9).

1. "Be Strong and of Good Courage" (v. 6). His mission was to go in and divide the land among the tribes for an inheritance. It required strength and courage to do this.

2. Unwavering Obedience to the Word of God (v. 7). In a land of idolatry it required much courage to be true to God. Prosperity and success are conditioned upon unswerving obedience to God's commands. In all his work he must conform his life to the law of God. To pass from the path outlined therein would bring disaster and ruin. I order to accomplish this, the law of the Lord must be in his mouth continually. He was to meditate therein day and night. Joshua rendered prompt obedience. He did not stop to cavil, but at once gave orders for the march. God made the plan and gave the directions.

V. Joshua's Retrospect (Josh. 3:1-3).

As his life was now drawing to a close, he summoned the people and rulers to give some farewell counsels.

1. Rehearses God's Goodness (v. 1). God had given rest unto Israel from all their enemies.

2. All That Had Happened Was Done by the Lord. God had fought for them. No one had been able to stand against them; therefore He urges upon them fidelity.

God's Way.

I find my Lord Jesus cometh not in the precise way that I lay wait for Him. He hath a manner of His own. Oh, how high are His ways above my ways!—Rutherford.

With God. Give God the blossom of your life! Put Him not off with the fallen leaves!—Nicholls.

SO WEAK, WAS LIKE A SHADOW
Oklahoma Woman, After Much Suffering, Began to Take Cardui—Says She Was Strengthened and Built Up.

Fort Towson, Okla.—"I used Cardui for years," says Mrs. M. C. Ragdad of this place, "and I know it did me more good than any medicine I ever used."

"I used to suffer with womanly trouble that weakened me until I was a mere shadow, nervous, and could not eat or sleep. I did not feel that I could live."

"It seemed that nothing I took helped me till I heard of Cardui and began to use it. It strengthened me as it was recommended to do. It regulated and built me up till I was like another woman."

Cardui is a safe, mild-acting extract of medicinal herbs and contains no harmful or deleterious ingredients. One of its chief ingredients has been in use for hundreds of years for the treatment of certain female troubles. It is a scientific medicine, made in a scientific way.

Thousands of women have written to describe how Cardui has relieved them of pain and suffering, and helped them to build up their health and strength.

Produce Superior Lambs for Market

Breeding, Feeding, Castration and Docking Among Important Factors.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Producing desirable lambs for the market is dependable to a large extent on the three following principles of management, namely, good breeding, proper feeding, and castration and docking of the lambs. Of these three factors, the latter is probably more abused than any of the others, especially when it is considered that docking and castrating are easily done and add much to the desirability and value of the lamb carcass. The most desirable, and thus the most profitable, lamb carcass cannot be produced from lambs which have not been docked and castrated, says the United States Department of Agriculture.

Hinge Real Profits.

The farmer does not market his bull calves as bulls, nor his boar pigs as boars, says the department. Why, therefore, should he market his male lamb carcasses as lambs?

Docked Lambs Look Better and Sell at Higher Prices.

lamb carcasses as lambs rather than as wethers? The correction of this neglect by castrating and docking the lambs is vital, and upon a more general observance of the practice in the farm flocks hinge the real profits and more general success. It is conservatively estimated that 90 per cent of the native lambs—those marketed from farm flocks—reach the markets come undocked and uncastrated, and that the percentage of ram lambs among the offering during the last year has been as large as ever before.

Universal in Range Flocks.

On the other hand, the custom of docking all lambs and castrating the males is almost universal in the range flocks, and to this practice in a large measure may be attributed the fact that lambs produced on our western ranges outsell native or farm-raised lambs at the market on the average of from $1 to $1.50 per 100 pounds. These operations have been found profitable, and that is the big reason that they have become so commonly practiced on the western range. They are likewise applicable to the farm flock and just as necessary for the production of the best lambs and consequently the most profit.

Take Drastic Measures for Controlling Crows

Drastic measures for the control of crows include the use of strychnine in corn, in hens' eggs or in meat, trapping by means of specially designed steel traps, the destruction of nests, and shooting at winter roosts. Beef heads or fresh carcasses of animals may be treated with strychnine and placed in trees or places frequented by the crows with good results. Great care must be exercised in the use of poison corn to prevent the poisoning of domestic animals.

Three Great Things in Keeping Farm Accounts

Three things should be kept in mind in keeping farm accounts. First, enter every expense or receipt item. Second, enter each item in its proper place—expenses on the left hand pages and receipts on the right hand pages. Third, make the entry clear and complete so that you can tell exactly what it is when you refer to it later and have forgotten the details and possibly the entire transaction.

Soy Bean Rotation Will Increase Soil Fertility

A rotation that is being used to a considerable extent, is soy beans, wheat, clover and corn, the corn being used either one or two years. This has the advantage that the wheat can be sown in the soy bean stubble. The rotation also increases the soil fertility and gives a more economical distribution of labor.

Use Carbon Bisulphide to Kill Bean Weevils

Carbon bisulphide is the correct remedy for bean weevil. After the treatment is given the beans should be aired for some time and after that there should be no harm in eating the sound ones. An easy way to pick out the sound ones is throw all of them in water. The ones containing the weevils will rise to the top and float.

Farmer Organizations Doing Large Business

More Than $2,000,000,000 Worth Done During 1923.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

More than two billion dollars of business was done by farmer business organizations in 1923, according to estimates made by the United States Department of Agriculture. The estimates are based upon reports from 6,839 organizations which did a total business of $1,200,000,000. Reports have been received from 8,313 associations and additional reports are yet to come in from approximately 2,000 organizations.

Of the 8,313 organizations reporting, approximately 90 per cent were primarily engaged in selling farm products, and about 10 per cent in the collective purchasing of farm supplies. Grain marketing organizations comprised more than 30 per cent of the associations; dairy products 22 per cent; live stock 14 per cent, and fruits and vegetables 11 per cent.

Two thousand six hundred grain organizations did a total business estimated at $490,000,000; 1,841 dairy products organizations a total business of $300,000,000; 1,182 live stock shipping associations a business of $220,000,000, and 958 fruit and vegetable associations a total business of $280,000,000. Seventy-eight cotton co-operatives did $100,000,000, and 14 tobacco organizations $132,000,000.

Protein Usually Lacking in Ration for Poultry

The most popular ration being fed by the farmers who are feeding a balanced ration is known as the Purdue standard laying ration. The scratch feed consists of ten pounds of corn, ten pounds of wheat and five pounds of oats. The mash is a mixture of five pounds of bran, five pounds of shorts and three pounds of high grade tankage. Plenty of grit, oyster shells, succulent feeds and water are kept before the hens at all times. The unbalanced rations which are being fed to some of the flocks consist of corn and wheat; corn, wheat and bran; wheat and bran; wheat; and corn. The principal thing lacking in the unbalanced rations is an animal protein. The hen manufactures eggs from the feed that is given to her. The number of eggs she will lay depends upon the kind and amount of feed she receives. She cannot maintain her body and manufacture a large number of eggs from feeds which do not contain the proper kind and amount of nutrients.

Eggs for Hatching Must Be From Healthy Stock

Good eggs are the foundation of good hatches. The best incubator in the world can't hatch bad eggs. Make sure the eggs you set come from healthy stock kept under sanitary conditions; then select only those of normal size and shape, free from imperfections of shell.

Eggs for hatching should be as fresh as possible—not over ten days or two weeks old—and they should be gathered three times a day in cold weather to prevent chilling—then kept in a room of steady temperature at fifty to sixty degrees.

When an egg tests fertile at the end of the first week of incubation, it doesn't necessarily mean a chick. Beginners often blame the incubator when the real fault may be that the eggs are too old. Or they may have been subjected to rough handling or kept in too cold or too warm a temperature. In such cases the germ will start, but hasn't the strength to complete the process.

Vitamin "A" Essential to Swine Development

Vitamin "A" which is found in yellow corn, alfalfa hay, cod liver oil, buttermilk and green feeds, is essential to the proper development of swine according to results obtained from investigations conducted at the Kansas State Agricultural college.

Valuable breeding animals may often be saved after breaking down by the prompt addition of cod liver oil to their feed. From a production standpoint, the practice followed by many successful swine growers of adding alfalfa hay to the swine ration during the winter is basically sound and one that may well be followed more generally, results of the test indicate.

Japanese Clover Adapted to Poor Land Pasturage

Scattered abroad in many sections of the country is found a small clover known as Japanese or Little Java clover. This clover is excellent in many respects and is almost unknown for pasture on poor land, especially hilly land due to the fact that it is a great legume bearing many nitrogen nodules upon its roots. It grows from about 4 to 10 inches in height depending upon the soil. This clover is relished by practically all farm animals.

Improvement Association Against Imported Seeds

The International Crop Improvement association, which is composed of 17 state crop improvement associations, went on record at its fifth annual meeting held in Chicago as being in favor of national legislation against imported alfalfa and clover seeds.

ROAD BUILDING

LOAD FOR HORSE DEPENDS ON ROAD

That the size of the load horses or mules can move depends upon the road was determined in contests recently held at the Iowa state fair. The teams tested developed all the way from 8.8 to 21.2 horse power and exerted from 2,000 up to 2,900 pounds in tractive pull, but the pull exerted by the teams which developed a 2,300-pound tractive pull was sufficient to start and pull 38.4 tons of coal over a level concrete pavement.

These tests—the first ever held—were made possible through the horse and mule dynamometer, the invention of Prof. E. V. Collins of the agricultural engineering section of the Iowa State College of Agriculture and Experiment station at Ames, Ia.

With the Collins dynamometer, predetermined loads can be imposed on horses or mules for any required distance or time, and pair after pair can be tested with absolute assurance that the load is the same.

"Tractive pull" refers to energy exerted in a direct pull, and is the same as the pull required to pull a weight out of a hole in the ground. The tractive pull required to pull an ordinary walking plow in stubble, turning a furrow six inches deep and 14 inches wide, is about 400 pounds; or, in other words, the team has to expend the same energy as it would in pulling a 400-pound weight out of a deep hole in the ground.

The load a tractive pull will move depends on other factors. To illustrate—a demonstration load was shown in connection with the Iowa tests. A new farm wagon was loaded with sacked grain weighing 6,240 pounds—equivalent to 134 bushels of wheat or 111 7/10 bushels of shelled corn.

To move this load which, plus wagon, weighed 7,720 pounds, or 3.88 tons, required on concrete pavement a tractive pull of 125 pounds, or 32.5 pounds per ton; on brick pavement a tractive pull of 200 pounds, or 51.8 per ton; on asphalt, 300 pounds, or 77.7 per ton, and on the dirt and cinder-surfaced road where the pulling tests were being held it required 520 pounds, or 134.7 pounds tractive pull per ton. These results, corroborated by other tests, show that it is easier to pull three tons on a concrete road than one ton on a firm dirt road, and indicate, forcefully, the value of hard roads.

Watt's definition of one-horse power, laid down centuries ago, was approximately correct in measuring the energy which a horse can expend continuously throughout a working day; but he failed entirely to recognize the remarkable reserve power seasoned horses or mules possess. When a single pair of horses, rated at two-horse power, can exert over 21-horse power, it is obvious that they have a value far above their theoretical two-horse power. Above all other considerations, however, is the fact that draft horses and mules can now be listed on a basis of performance, as dairy cattle or race horses are tested.

Brake-Testing Proposed in State of Washington

Automobile brake-testing stations and the use of a little "moral suasion" on the part of the state highway patrol to require drivers to have their brakes regularly tested, is the next development being shaped by Director L. D. McArdle, chief of the highway patrol of Washington.

A plan similar to that used in promoting light-testing will be employed where an arrest slip is issued for some minor infraction, to be canceled only upon securing the required certificate of inspection.

Certificate of inspection, dated, will be attached to the outside of the car. When a car is stopped for any reason, the patrolmen are to try the brakes, and if they are not good, the arrest slip is to be issued to be redeemed only by proper brake inspection certificate. In this way it is planned largely to overcome the lack of specific brake-testing legislation.

Constructing System of Hard-Surfaced Highways

If Alabama citizens will get in the game and see to it that the millions of dollars voted in bonds to build roads are used at once to build roads in every county, these roads will help and they will be the means of bringing our people to a realization of the importance of good roads and more money will be raised in each county with which to build a system of hard-surfaced roads.—Andalusia Star.

THE STICKPIN PAVED THE WAY

By H. ARVING KING

(© 1924, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

ONCE upon a time there was a young man named Lancelot Griffin, and he was hard up, and he wanted to give a birthday present to his best girl. So Lancelot dug up an old scurpin that he hadn't worn for years because he always hated the hideous thing. It had been presented to him by a great-uncle. It was a highly "hockable" affair. Lancelot obtained enough of the coils of the realm to buy a little gift with which to delight the heart of Flora Gummell. Lancelot had a birthday a few months later. His dearly beloved Flora had her eye attracted—and held—by this very same stickpin in the pawnshop's window. Flora bought the pin. She presented it to Lancelot with a pretty little speech.

"The beauty of the pin was what attracted me," said Flora. "It seems as if it was just meant for you—just as we are meant for each other, aren't we, Lancelot, dear?"

"You bet we are," replied Lancelot in his crude, coarse way, "and this pin shall never get out of my possession again—that is never—"

"Of course it won't," replied Flora. "You must wear it, always, for my sake."

"Oh, it is much too beautiful to wear every day," said the wily Lancelot.

"No," replied Flora firmly, "you must wear it constantly or I shall think you don't value it as my gift."

Now, this ancient aunt of Lancelot's lived in a far country; somewhere around Bogota, N. J., and seldom came to the big city. But Lancelot wrote her a very dutiful letter announcing his engagement to Flora and hoping that his esteemed relative's days would be long in the land. He received a highly edifying Mr. George-to-Little-Rollo sort of a reply, closing with the announcement that Aunt Sophronia would arrive in New York the next week, and that he and Flora might call upon her at her hotel.

Now Lancelot was a lawyer's clerk at a modest salary, whose parents would never be able to leave him much money, and it was rather imprudent for Flora and him to become engaged. But they were young, and could wait. They would not be married until his prospects were a little brighter—which, of course, they would be soon. Lancelot had many schemes in mind for the acquirement of wealth. Given time and opportunity with the electrical inspiration of New York, and what is it that a young man has not a right to expect?

If Lancelot's parents had not been foolish enough to quarrel with Aunt Sophronia things might have been different. Lancelot would have been the old lady's heir. As it was, she had publicly announced her intention of leaving her money to a distant branch of the family in Schenectady and was known to have made a will accordingly.

Well, Aunt Sophronia arrived and Flora and Lancelot called upon her, Lancelot wearing the stickpin of destiny. He knew that Aunt Sophronia would recognize it and say something before Flora, which would, as Henry James would say, "give the snap away." But there was no way out of it.

Flora had especially said, "Now don't forget to wear that beautiful pin I gave you," and if he did not do so she, Flora, would be sure to remark it and say something which would make for confusion. He faced the music; confident that it would be even louder than the pin itself.

The blow fell with its dull, sickening thud shortly after greetings with the aunt had been exchanged. "Why, Lancelot, dear!" cried the old lady, "you are still wearing my pin! How nice of you. So you have not forgotten your old aunt after all. Well, well, I am glad there is one member of your family possessed of common gratitude and affection." He could feel Flora's eyes boring through him as the old lady spoke. For the rest of the evening, whenever he caught Flora's eye, he caught a cold, stony stare. It made him nervous. The old lady kept them to dinner and sent them home in a taxi. In the taxi Flora said: "Now, sir, I would like an explanation."

"Of what?"

"That pin."

"If you must know, auntie gave it to me; I hooked it and bought you a birthday present," said Lancelot. "Flora broke into a laugh. 'Of course you very thoroughly, and I gave such a flattering account of her nephew that, after swearing me to secrecy, she agreed to come on and see if the goods were as represented. She told me all about the pin, describing it minutely and wondering if you ever wore it. When I saw it in the pawnbroker's window I recognized it at once. Two such pins were never made in this world, wicked as it is. I guessed why you had pawned it, and wrote the story to Aunt Sophronia, who agreed to forgive you if I would make you wear the thing by way of penance until she met you again. She changed her will in your favor. Now what do you think of me?'"

Whatever it was, he said it with kisses.

Shall we refer to the election contest as the eternal law case?

A nickel has even lost the respect of a bootblack in these abnormal times.

"A fool and his money soon parts." He is not by himself in that respect these days

If it ever gets warm enough to go fishing we bet the creeks will all be so low you can't catch a think.

When ever a Ford car falls into the hands of the right boy they can make a machine gun ashamed of itself.

Who remembers the day when a nickel tip to the colored waiter caused the ivory to shine from ear to ear.

For the past week the plows have been making full timer. A little corn patch and a big cotton field is what it looks like now.

The oil investigation at Washington spreads worse than the itch. New names are added to the dishonest roll every day.

Tag days are coming so thick and fast now that the ladies accuse some of the men with keeping on hand a full line of counterfeit tags.

Plant plenty of cotton and bring the ipce down to 10 cents and then, perhaps, a nickel can gain its old time social recognition.

It requires long years of earnest and consistent effort to build up a reputation and then you can ruin it all by one false lapse from duty.

Even a lawyer with a big reputation can be made to look pee wee size when he undertakes to build up a theory on hot air before a trial judge.

The question has been asked: Is blushing a lost art with the fair sex? The paste and paint is so thick these day, that it is impossible to give an accurate answer.

The public man who undertakes to 'run with the hare and catch with the hounds' generally succeeds in loosing out with both sides and winding, up as a niny.

The damage proposition is being agitated again. It is now very probable that work will be commenced on this enterprise before the summer is past.

This is valentine day when birds are supposed to choose their mates and boys and girls used to send each other fond tokens of love, but now a drink of hooch, a cigarette and a starlit joy ride fills the entire order.

The Senate, by resolution, has requested the resignation of Secretary Denby. President Coolidge announces that he will take the matter under advisement. That oil scandal is no respector of persons.

There has been so many crooked deals pulled off by the official family at Washington, that Congress is entirely taken up by "investigations" while needed legislation is laid on the shelf.

It begins to smell like spring at all events. A few wagons loaded with fertilizer were stirring in town this week and the old familiar odor carried us back to days of bare feet, fallow ground and tin guano trumpet.

There are only 689,749 laws on the statute books of the United States courts. No wonder you better plead guilty when they get you. It would be impossible for one to dodge that many shots at him.

M. W. P. Splawn, of Leeds, formerly a very valuable citizen of our country, was in to see us Tuesday. Mr. Splawn is general manager of the Vida Lumber Co. and tells us that the lumber market is on the up grade and that the business future looks good to him.

LET'S ALL HELP

Since the Chamber of Commerce has reorganized and prepared to put on an intensive Spring and Summer campaign for the improvement of Clanton and Chilton county, let us all lay aside all factional differences and make up our minds to cooperate with them in every move they make in an effort to build up our town and county.

This is in no sense a local nor a selfish movement to only help "me and my wife, my son John and his wife," but is an earnest effort to encourage any and all enterprises that may be organized in an effort to better the conditions of this entire section.

The desire of the Chamber of Commerce is to lend its help and influence to any worthy plan of improvement that may develop any where in Chilton county.

On this broad basis, we feel like any citizen who declines to cooperate in this worthy effort is in his own light and recrcant in the duty he owes to good citizenship.

Political differences are one thing, but the person who is not broad enough to absolutely eliminate them from his action as a good citizen is certainly an object of pity.

Fight these matters out in the sphere where they belong, but when it comes to a question of doing your very best towards the betterment of your county in every way, these differences should be put away and your duty, as a worthy citizen of any community is to know no party lines or creeds, but to buckle right down in your harness and do your bit for the common good of your home town and county.

LABOR OPPOSED TO IMMIGRATION

The threatening lifting of the immigration restrictions by Congress has aroused labor unions of Toledo, Ohio, to take action opposing such possible action. Laborers see in the attitude of big corporations heads and other large employers a move to let down the bars to the European hordes. Unio organizations are sending in resolutions to representatives in Congress urging a more strict law, one that will limit immigration, with the idea of examination of the immigrant before he can leave his home shore.

PLAY IT SAFE

If you are going to farm this year don't make it a gambling proposition by planting more cotton than you can work as a surplus, but play the game safe.

Plant plenty of corn, cane, potatoes, peas and grain to feed yourself and family and all your stock and then some to fatten your hogs on. Make this an assured fact and you will be safe.

Plant a small acreage to cotton, fertilize it highly and work it fast. Poison the weevils as soon as you chop your cotton. Kill all the old ones you can and thus reduce the number in the second crop. Rush the plant all you can and get it off early. By this means you can raise more cotton and do it for less money than if you plant a large acreage.

Figure this thing out for yourself before you pitch your crop and then go to it. This is based on safety first, the all cotton idea is a gamble with all the odds against you.

Take your choice.

INCOMPATIBLE

Environment, training and temperament account for the fact that great men differ fundamentally in their points of view. Theodore Roosevelt and Woodrow Wilson were contemporaries and rivals, both were statesmen. Both were popular leaders. Both were unquestionably great men, both were patriots, both entertained a pronounced sympathy for the average man. Both were idealists. Yet they had little in common. They had little patience with each other.—Advertiser.

USING STREETS FOR AUTO STOREHOUSES

Street car riders won't be held up much longer by streets being used as storehouses for automobiles, Peter Witt, Cleveland traction Club of Buf-falo.

"The streets were laid out for vehicular motion and not for storage purposes," Witt declared.

"The time is coming, and it's not in the far distant future, when you men who bring your automobiles down in the morning and park them on the street and let them stand there for 10 hours, won't be able to do it. It is idle on your part to bemoan the fact that your streets are congested when you yourselves are using the best part of them for storage purposes.

"There is a feeling on the part of the people that now the automobile has come, the street cars are going to go. Of course they are not. The street cars are going to be here. Either the street car or the automobile shall survive. This we have to learn: We have got to clean up in our American cities. We must deny the rights of any man to use the streets for storage purposes.

"You who are the drivers of automobiles, of course, know the expense of such a vehicle. The time is not there and the time, in my opinion, never will come, when you will be able to transport the people on rubber tires, as on steel wheels.

"If the automobile is to play a part in the transportation of the cities of this country, it can only come as a result of its supplementing the street cars that are on steel wheels. There must be one head, there must be one company, there must be one monopoly, if transportation is to be given to the people at the cost they are entitled to receive it—and you can't ever arrive at that place through competition. It is utterly impossible."

SAFETY FIRST

Some of the merchants who operate supply stores, and carry the farmers through the crop season, have adopted a policy of refusing to sell any farmer on time who will not agree to purchase and apply a certain amount of boll weevil poison to their cotton.

Perhaps this is a wise policy, and to say the least of it, the merchants have confidence in the value of poison as a boll weevil remedy and they are well within the bounds of good business policy to insist upon its use as a method of "safety first" in helping the farmers to be able to pay an account in the fall.

It is our opinion that this plan will cause a pretty general use of poison this year and, if it does the thing claimed for it, the result will be highly profitable, not only to the farmer, but to the entire community.

The poison does not cost much and the only draw back we see is in obtaining the intelligent cooperation of the farmer to induce him to properly apply the poison.

THE U. F. OF A.

It affords us much pleasure to say that the well known farmers organization, the U. F. of A., in Chilton county is taking on new life as the sun begins to shine occasionally with the promise of a prosperous year just ahead.

There is no real doubt existing in these days in the mind of any intelligent person but what organized cooperation is necessary to the progress of and industry, and it is most essentially important for the farmers to cooperate with each other if they expect to keep up with the march of progress.

Over in Fayette county today they are having a big birthday celebration of U. F. of A. It was born on Feb. 14, 1921 and is indeed a lusty infant for its age.

State manager, Mr. A. B. Baxley, of our town will speak at this celebration today over there at Mars Hill, in company with several other noted workers in the cause.

The News is always glad to note a spirit of organized effort among the farmers, for it always tends towards better success and more prosperity.

more Ford cars and trucks were produced last year than the previous year, an increase of over 50 per cent.

In spite of this tremendous increase in production, it was impossible to meet delivery requirements during the spring and summer months when orders for 350,000 Ford Cars and Trucks could not be filled.

This year winter buying for immediate delivery has been more active than ever before—and in addition 200,000 orders have already been booked through the Ford Weekly Purchase Plan for spring delivery.

These facts clearly indicate that the demand during this spring and summer will be far greater than ever, and that orders should be placed immediately with Ford Dealers as a means of protection against delay in securing your Ford Car or Truck or Fordson Tractor.

A small deposit down, with easy payments of the balance arranged, or your enrollment under the Ford Weekly Purchase Plan, will put your order on the preferred list for spring delivery.

The Cost of a Car

is no measure of its value

These are the things to consider

The cost of a car depends in large part on volume and efficiency. It is no criterion of value.

Studebaker builds 150,000 fine cars yearly. All of them are Sixes. The main costs are divided by that enormous output. Thus at prices of $975 and up we offer the utmost in quality. We offer maximum values.

Don't judge these cars by prices. Under other conditions they might cost twice as much, yet offer less than these.

Some Major Costs

Quality cars require costly facilities. Studebaker has $50,000,000 invested in modern plants and equipment. $8,000,000 in drop forge plants alone. $10,000,000 in body plants, to carry out the Studebaker standards.

There are 12,500 up-to-date machines employed to build these cars. Some are enormously expensive.

Few outputs justify such facilities. Then parts must be bought outside, and profits paid to others.

Studebaker engineering costs $500,000 per year. That to us is $3.33 per car.

Our department of Research and Experiment employs 125 skilled men. It makes 50,000 tests per year to maintain our standards.

Our Bureau of Methods and Standards fixes the requirements for every part and detail. 12,000 inspections are necessary for each car to insure against flaws and mistakes. We employ 1,000 men to make them.

Cars like the Studebaker cannot be built without such facilities, such research, such care. Yet enormous output alone makes them possible at Studebaker prices.

The Best We Know

Studebakers represent the best we know. And with our army of engineers, with our wealth of experience, we probably know what is best.

We use 35 formulas for steels. Each is best suited to certain parts, as proved by years of tests.

On some steels we pay the makers a bonus of 15% to get them exactly right. There is no room to excel us there.

We machine the entire surface of each crank shaft, as was done on Liberty Airplane Motors. That extra cost is heavy. But thus we get that perfect balance, that absence of vibration.

We use more Timken bearings than any other car which costs under $5,000. They cost considerably more than ball bearings.

The Studebaker coach work has been famous for decades. No one can excel it.

The finish is produced by 26 operations, including 15 coats of paint and varnish.

Open cars have real leather cushions. They cost, over imitation leather, about $25 per car.

No closed cars could be more luxurious. That lining of Chase Mohair is made from the soft fleece of Angora goats. A velour lining would save about one-third that cost—up to $100 per car.

Note the completeness of our larger size cars. That, as you know, is expensive.

Note the completeness of our larger models. The nickel-plated bumpers, extra disc wheels with cord tire, a steel trunk, a courtesy light, even on the costliest cars.

Nothing is Stinted

Compare part by part with any rival cars. Studebaker will show you some scores of advantages.

Then consider Studebaker history. For 72 years this name has stood for quality. When people rode in carriages, Studebaker built the best. Now those same traditions are applied to motor cars alone.

Consider Studebaker records. Mark how these cars in service have multiplied demand, until people last year paid $200,000,000 for Studebaker cars.

Consider their service records. One Studebaker car, built in 1918, has run 475,000 miles. It is still in active service. It lately made a mid-winter trip from Los Angeles to New York. That means 80 years of average service, of 6,000 miles per year.

What more can you dream of in a motor car than the Studebakers offer?

JUST GO AND SEE

Studebaker is today the leader in the fine-car field.

Studebaker builds more quality cars than any other concern in the world.

Buyers of fine cars last year spent over $200,000,000 for Studebaker models.

The demand for Studebakers has almost trebled in three years—as people found them out.

Then go see them. Compare them with any car you will. Don't spend $1,000 or over without knowing what Studebaker offers. You owe that to yourself.

These facts apply to all Studebakers, of all styles and sizes. The materials used in all classes are alike.

"BETTER MAILING WEEK"

Since the days of Benjamin Franklin every Postmaster General has found occasion to inveigh against a condition which has been the bane of the postal service since its foundation. Periodic and systematic campaigns have been waged against it but the evil grows as fast as the rapidly increasing business of the postal service itself.

The Post Office Department, or in the final analysis, the tax payer, pays an annual toll for the support of this malignant growth, amounting, in round numbers, to $1,740,000.

Of late years, however, it has become more and more apparent that the Department and the tax payer are not the only sufferers from the evil. Private business and private industry every year lose millions of dollars from the same cause, which strange to relate, is, in most part preventable.

This economic waste—this strange disease—is nothing more or less than the careless addressing of mail matter; the depositing of letters and packages with incomplete, inadequate or incorrect addresses, an overwhelming majority of which comes from large patrons of the mails.

In another effort to stem the tide of this waste; to save money for the taxpayer and to turn back into constructive business channels the millions now lost through mistakes, Postmaster General New has designed the week of February 18 to 25 as "Better Mailing Week."

During that week he will seek the cooperation of chambers of commerce, boards of trade, large business and industrial enterprises, and the press of the country, with a view to having antiquated mailing lists brought up to date and every check placed against the possibility of letters reaching the postal system without accurate addresses.

The Post Office has gone a long way toward assisting business men in solving the problem. Postmasters have interviewed heads of firms who, due to the fact that their mail is handled by subordinates, often are not aware of their own mailing difficulties. The Department has even offered to furnish its own clerks to correct and bring mailing lists up to date at the nominal charge of 60 cents an hour.

At one-time the proposal was made to Congress to place a one cent charge upon each letter requiring directory service, thus attacking the problem through the pocket book of the mailer as the only means of solution.

It is believed, however, that if the individual, firm or corporation, depending to any extent on the mails for its business, can be brought to realize that the delay, and often non-delivery of mail, results in loss of business and profits, the most important step will have been taken to correct the evil.

It is estimated that 200,000,000 pieces of mail are yearly given "directory service," which means that postal employees must take time from the regular handling and dispatching of mail in the endeavor to provide correct addresses for this huge volume of misdirected matter. In New York City alone the cost of this service approximates $500 daily.

There is every evidence that the matters of incompletely addressed mail believe that to the postal service nothing is impossible. The implied compliment is appreciated but it must be remembered that this no longer is the age of the town pump and that our cities have grown so that no longer can a mail distributor be expected to know "everybody in town."

Mail inadequately addressed and requiring directory service, of course, means delay. Often it must be returned to the sender for a new address. For the lack of a return address nearly 20,000,000 of these are sent annually to the Dead Letter Office.

No matter which course these letters take it means loss of money. Directory service and the Dead Letter Office are costly to the Postal Service. Delay and non-delivery are more often than not, costly to the mailer.

Solicitations for orders cannot produce results if the customer does not receive the solicitation. If he receives it a few hours late a competitor may get the order which otherwise would have gone to "you." Often the solicitation does not contain the street address of the advertising firm and then the customer's order is subjected to the same directory service and resultant delay which befall that of the advertiser. Any business commercial house knows that the delay to an order often means cancellation, as well as the loss of future business. Moral: Put your street address plainly, not only on all letter-heads and envelopes, but on newspaper and magazine advertising.

The reaction of a business man to the return for a letter address of an important order can easily be imagined. If he knows another firm handling the same commodity he does not attempt to locate the one to which he first sent the order.

Many of the largest and most progressive firms in the country have long since realized that while, at one time, to appear streetaddressless may have given an air of importance, this condition no longer exists. Accordingly their exact locations now are registered on order blanks, letter-heads, envelopes and on all advertising.

On the other hand, many firms have still to learn this lesson.

Recently a list was selected at random disclosing that 250 business houses were using stationery upon which no address was to be found other than the city in which they functioned, and in some cases even this was missing. Thus firms represented the entire category of business, their products ranging from "accelerators" to "zithers."

It is felt that a great public service can be rendered in reducing the enormous extent of this careless and expensive practice. The cooperations of chambers of commerce, boards of trade and civic organizations, and publicity by the press, can go a long way toward relieving the postal service of this unnecessary drain and the result will be the saving of countless sums to American business.

INTELLIGENCE VS. IGNORANCE

If we are to have another contest in the near future of our national existence, I predict that the diving line will not be Mason and Dixon's, but it will be between patriotism and intelligence on one side, and superstition and ignorance on the other. In this centennial year, the work of strengthening the foundation of the structure laid by our forefathers one hundred years ago, should be begun. Let us all labor for the security of free thought, free speech, free press, and pure morals, unfettered religious sentiments, and equal rights and privileges for all men, irrespective of nationality, color or religion. Encourage free schools, and resolve that not one dollar appropriation to them shall be applied to the support of any sectarian school; resolve that any child in the land may get a common school education, unmix with atheistic, pagan, or sectarian teachings; separate. —General Grant, speaking before the army of the Tennessee, in 1876.

CHARACTER TELLS THE STORY!

People throughout this country are giving more thought to hygiene and to the purity of remedies on the market, but no one doubts the purity of Doctor Pierce's vegetable medicines, for they have been so favorably known for over fifty years that everyone knows they are just what they are claimed to be. These medicines are the result of long research by a well-known physician, R. V. Pierce, M. D., who compounded them from health-giving herbs and roots long used in sickness by the Indians. Dr. Pierce's reputation as a leading and honored citizen of Buffalo, is a sufficient guarantee for the purity of that splendid tonic and blood medicine, the Golden Medical Discovery, and the equally fine nerve tonic and system builder for women's ailments, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Send for trial bottles of these medicines to Dr. Pierce's Invalids Hotel, Buffalo, N.Y.

Not Guilty

An old negro went to the office of the commissioner of registration in a Missouri town and applied for registration papers.

"What is your name?" asked the official.

"George Washington," was the reply.

"Well, George, are you the man who cut down the cherry tree?"

"No, suh. I ain't de man. I ain't done no work for nigh onto a year."

PLAN FOR COOKING RICE PROPERLY

Cooking Rice So That It Is Flaky and Each Grain Separate.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Rice can be cooked so that it is flaky and so each grain remains separate, say food specialists in the United States Department of Agriculture. To obtain this result wash the rice thoroughly, boil it in a large proportion of water, and do not overcook.

To 1 cupful of dry rice, use 4 or 5 quarts of water, and 1 teaspoonful of salt. Wash the rice through several waters until all the loose starch is removed, and drain it. Have the boiling water ready in a deep saucepan, add the salt, slowly drop in the rice, and allow it to boil rapidly for about 15 or 20 minutes, or until a grain when pressed between the thumb and finger is entirely soft.

In order to prevent the rice from sticking to the pan, lift it if necessary from time to time with a fork, but do not stir it, for stirring is likely to break the grains. When sufficiently cooked, turn the rice into a colander or a sieve, and after the water has drained off, cover with a cloth and set over a pan of hot water on the back of the stove or in the oven; or turn the rice into a shallow pan, cover with a lid, and place it in a warm oven for a short time. Treated in this way the grains swell and are kept separate.

PROPER CARE OF FOOD WILL PREVENT WASTE

Many Little Details Which Escape Attention.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

While most good housekeepers pride themselves on being able to care properly for the food they purchase and prepare for their families, there are many details in connection with the handling of specific foods which may have escaped the attention of many housewives unless they have made a special study of the subject. Again, although everyone knows that spoiled food is both unpleasant and dangerous, many persons do not know that food may be contaminated with dangerous bacteria and yet show no outward traces of spoilage.

Farmers' Bulletin 1374, "Care of Food in the Home," prepared by the bureau of home economics, gives information as to the forms and causes of food spoilage and suggests methods for keeping various ordinary foods in good condition.

Emphasis is placed on keeping all foods clean; that is, protected from visible dirt and from contamination by insects and other carriers of dangerous micro-organisms. Most kinds should also be kept cool. Dry foods, such as crackers, need to be prevented from absorbing moisture, and succulent foods, such as fresh vegetables, from losing it.

The following practices, which are brought to the reader's attention, in connection with the home care of food, serve to remind the experienced housekeeper as well as the novice of points that will bear watching in her kitchen, pantry and icebox, whether she cares for the family food personally or intrusts it largely to servants or other persons.

Milk, fresh meat, poultry and fish, and many fresh fruits and vegetables should be kept at a temperature of 50 degrees F., or preferably less, in order to check the growth of micro-organisms that cause souring and decay.

All fruits and vegetables that are to be eaten raw should be thoroughly washed, for even though they look clean, dangerous bacteria may cling to skins or leaves. As a rule, uncooked meats of any kind should not be eaten. Smoking meat does not kill parasites.

Left-over cooked foods should be kept cold and covered, used promptly, especially in warm weather, and, if possible, heated thoroughly before being served again. Dangerous poisons sometimes develop in such foods without making noticeable changes in taste or smell.

Flour, sugar, cereals and other dry groceries should be kept dry and protected from household pests. Tea, coffee and spices hold their flavor best in air-tight containers.

Canned foods keep best in a cool, dry closet or storeroom. Those in glass jars should be shielded from the light to prevent possible fading.

Under household conditions, the refrigerator is oftentimes the best means of keeping food cool. Choose one with well-insulated walls, put only clean ice and clean food in clean containers into it, and keep it clean by the daily practice of genuine neatness.

Food must be safeguarded from spoilage by bacteria, yeasts, and molds, by changes produced by heat and cold, light, and loss or absorption of moisture, by insects and household pests, and by animal parasites.

Adequate storage places and containers make for economy and safety in handling food in the home.

Farmers' Bulletin 1374 may be obtained free as long as the supply lasts by applying to the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Vegetable Water Is Useful in Cooking

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Save your potato water and rice water as well as that in which many other vegetables have been cooked, for water in which vegetable matter is dissolved will in many cases make gravies and soups better flavored. Some vegetable flavors, especially those which are slightly sweet, are less useful than others in this way. Cooking green vegetables in a small amount of water is in all cases better than in a large quantity, according to the United States Department of Agriculture.

Sharpen your paring knives, and pare such things as apples and potatoes as thinly as possible. Peaches, beets, and tomatoes may be blanched and cold dipped to get the skins off quickly and economically. When beets, turnips and kohlrabi are young and fresh the tops may all be boiled and served as greens, as may also cauliflower stalks, the coarse stalks of celery, and the outer leaves of lettuce. Small amounts of different kinds of greens can often be combined in one dish.

Making Sweet Potato Pie Is Not Difficult

Somewhat similar in flavor and appearance to pumpkin pie, sweet potato pie is deservedly popular in districts where sweet potatoes are abundant. The recipe below was tested by extension workers in the Texas Agricultural and Mechanical college, working cooperatively with the United States Department of Agriculture.

Sweet Potato Custard Meringue Pie. Line a pie tin with pastry. Fill with the following mixture:

1/2-2 cupfuls mashed sweet potatoes
1/2 cupful sugar
1 cupful sweet milk
1 teaspoonful salt
2 eggs
2 tablespoons lemon
2 tablespoons rind
butter

Leave out the egg whites for the meringue. Beat the yolks of the eggs into the cooked and mashed potatoes; add the melted butter and the other ingredients; pour into the pastry and bake in a moderate oven until the custard is set. Add a pinch of salt to the whites, beat until dry; add two table-spoonfuls of sugar. Mix well. Spread over the top of pie and put into a very moderate oven until it is a delicate brown. A very light delicate custard may be had if the potatoes are rubbed through a sieve or strainer, or put through a ricer.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

by MARY GRAHAM BONNER

TRAIN SMOKE

The smoke curled up above the train's engine. Up and up into the air the smoke curled, and more and more kept coming from the stack.

Great clouds of smoke seemed to be shot out—oh, how much smoke there was! And it almost seemed to stop in the air for a bit and wait for the clouds of smoke from below to join it all before it disappeared into the air.

"We belong to the train family, too," the clouds of smoke were saying.

"Curling, curling, curling, we, too, belong to the train family."

"The engine and the coal cart, the baggage car, the passenger trains—all belong to the train family, but so do the clouds of smoke."

"The whistle belongs to the train family, all the different parts do, but so, also, the clouds of smoke belong!"

"We are sent up into the air by the engine's smokestack. We go when we are told and we let the countryside around know that a train is passing by."

"Some of us do this work at one place and some at another, and so it is all along the line."

"And as we go up into the air we are proud that we belong to the train family."

"For the train family is a family of travelers. There are no stay-at-homes among that family. Sometimes they stop and rest for awhile—sometimes for only an hour or so, sometimes for but a few moments.

"Sometimes, though, they stop for awhile in the car yards and in the car barns and have a real rest."

"But there is no mistake in saying they're a family of travelers."

"Trains are such travelers—such a family for going and going and going that they had to fix sleeping cars for passengers."

"True, the passengers who go on trains are travelers, too."

"But if trains, in the first place, hadn't wanted to go on all night, they wouldn't have needed the sleeping cars."

"The real travelers are the of the train family."

"And though some of the smoke stops here and some does its curling act a little further along the line, we all feel like travelers because of the family to which we belong."

"This is our curling song, which now we will sing before we disappear into the air:

Curling, curling, curling,
Up in the air quite high,
Curling, curling, curling,
Before we disappear.

To show that a train's nearby,
Curling, curling, curling,
Looking so fluffy and fine,
Curling, curling, curling,
Over the railway line.

Curling, curling, curling,
Up in some form or other,
Curling, curling, curling,
As long as we are here.

Curling, curling, curling,
Up in some form or other,
Curling, curling, curling,
Is to us no bother.

Curling, curling, curling,
We belong to the train family,
Curling, curling, curling,
As you can surely see.

That was the end of their song. They had disappeared, but following along the train, from out the smokestack of the engine, came more and more members of the Train Smoke family.

Drink Milk You Fish.

The local workers of the National Dairy council, in a certain city, offered a prize to the schoolboy who would get up the most attractive poster.

Little Sammy showed his teacher a picture of a boy with a bottle of milk in one hand and a bowl of goldfish in the other. He was pouring the milk into the bowl.

"But Sammy," the teacher said, "there is no lettering on this, what do you mean?"

"Don't you get the idea?" asked Sammy. "It means, drink milk you poor fish."

NERVOUS & HALF-SICK WOMEN

Relieved by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

These Three Letters Prove It

Lowell, Mass.—"I am sending you a few lines to let you know what your medicine has done for me. I want you to let every one know that it has helped me in nervous troubles. I have four children and you know there is a lot to do where children are. They would come in from school and they would start telling me about their little troubles but I could not stand it. I had to send them away. I could not even walk on the street alone I was so nervous. I found one of your books and read it and then I saw in the paper about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I got it and had taken one bottle when I saw a change in myself. I was surprised. The children can talk all they want to now and it does not bother me. I am still taking the Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. JOSEPH LEMER, 84 South Street, Lowell, Mass.

Felt Like A New Woman

Springfield, Missouri—"For four or five months I was run-down, nervous, my back ached and I did not feel like doing a thing. Sometimes my legs ached and felt like they would break and I had a hurting in my sides. I had been reading in the newspapers the letters of other women who had taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and the advertising of it appealed to me so I bought some and saw results in almost no time. I had hardly been able to do my own work and after taking the Vegetable Compound I felt like a new woman. I recommend it to my friends who have troubles like I did, and hope they will find the same results."—Mrs. M. CARPENTER, 607 W. Chase Street, Springfield, Missouri.

40 Years Old, Feels Like 20

Hagerstown, Md.—"I was very bad off with backache, a bearing-down feeling in my body and a pain in my left side. I could not be on my feet at times and once I was so bad I walked bent over to one side for three weeks. My sister read of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and got me a bottle. I got so much relief that I took more until I was well. I am 40 years old and feel like 20. I am sure this medicine will help all women."—Mrs. MARY E. SANDY, 436 W. Franklin Street, Hagerstown, Md.

Over 100,000 women have so far replied to our question, "Have you received benefit from taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?" 98 per cent of these replies are "Yes."

That means that 98 out of every 100 women who take this medicine for the ailments for which it is recommended are benefited by it. All druggists are having increased sales of this medicine.

Temple of Diana One of World's Seven Wonders

One of the seven wonders of the ancient world, was the Temple of Diana at Ephesus, built in the Fourth century before Christ, and burned by the Goths in 282 A. D. But the temple was doomed to early destruction at the hands of a half-crazed Greek named Herostatus. In 356 B. C., on the night when Alexander the Great was born, he burned the temple to the ground. When he was arraigned for his crime he said he had done it to make an immortal name for himself, and he had chosen the night Alexander was born because Diana was the goddess of childbirth, and he believed that she would be in Macedonia to bless the little prince's arrival.

A new temple, started in 350, became a storehouse for great gifts. In 262 A.D. invading Goths destroyed the city and burned the temple. Only a few of the columns escaped, and they were used in the mosque of St. Sophia at Constantinople.—Detroit News.

Interesting Story About "Devil Bridge" in Wales

There are many "devil bridges" in Europe, and yearly all have legends to account for the name. One of the more picturesque of these satanic bridges is in Wales, at Aberystwyth.

The story, as told by an English writer, is that Megan Llandunach was one day at her wife's end to know how to bring her only cow across the chasm. The devil then appeared to her and offered to bridge the gorge if, in return, he might have the first living thing that crossed it. Megan agreed, and the devil, thinking the woman would be the first to pass, flung down his bridge. But Megan was no fool. Taking a crust from her pocket, she threw it to the other side of the gorge and sent her dog after it. The outwitted devil, so the story goes, took his defeat very sensibly and left his bridge there for future generations of the clever Welsh.—Detroit News.

The DAIRY

RAW LINSEED OIL IS BEST TO KILL LICE

The little red lice or biting lice of cattle are common to young and mature animals alike. "They do not suck the blood of the host but feed upon loose scales of the skin and portions of the hair. Their multiplication is favored more by the dry, scaly skin of the cow than by any other condition. They are smaller than either of the other kinds and are red in color, but can be seen with the naked eye.

The eggs of the fed louse hatch in five to seven days and it takes about fourteen days for the young lice to mature and begin laying eggs. The red lice are more active and move about from place to place on the host.

None of the lice can live any length of time away from the host. But their eggs are carried by means of loose hairs from animal to animal. This is the most probable manner of spreading infestation and the hardest to control. It is practically impossible to disinfect all objects that are capable of transmitting the loose hairs. Especially is this true where the cattle have the run of pasture and yard. Whitewash can be used effectively around buildings.

Effective control measures must be directed against the lice during the period after they are hatched from the eggs and before they mature and start the egg-laying process. Any substance that will destroy the eggs will be injurious to the skin of the animal. Any substance that is poisonous to the cow should not be used.

The most lasting control depends upon killing the lice and putting the hide of the animal in the condition that will be unfavorable for the growth and development of the lice. For this purpose raw linseed oil has given most satisfactory results in the experiments made at the Connecticut experiment station. Linseed oil has been used for years by many dairymen, but its use was not general.

The raw oil is not poisonous. Only a small amount is required for each cow, one pint being sufficient to treat four or five cows. It is not injurious to the hide of the animal but will kill the lice.

The raw linseed oil may be supplied with a stiff brush when the cows are being cleaned or groomed. Treatment should begin in the fall and early winter before the lice become numerous. The second application of the oil should be made in 12 to 13 days. All of the three kinds of lice will have had time to hatch from the eggs during the interval but will not have had time to mature and in turn lay eggs. The second treatment should be followed by an application of the oil every 30 days during the winter and early spring in order to keep the lice under control. It is practically impossible to permanently rid an entire herd of cattle of lice.

The boiled linseed oil is not recommended because there is more danger of its blistering the hide. When using the raw oil, precaution should be used not to rub the hide too strenuously when applying, as burns may result. Strong sunlight will sometimes cause burns also.

Improper Feeding Cause of Trouble With Calves

Scours in calves may be due to over-feeding, irregular feeding, feeding cold milk, sour milk, dirty milk, use of unsanitary feeding pails, etc., says J. P. LaMaster, chief of the dairy division at Clemson college, who makes the following suggestions for treatment:

1. For ordinary scours, as soon as symptoms are observed, omit one feeding and reduce next feeding to half, and then gradually bring up to original quantity.

In case the disease becomes obstinate, give from 1 1/4 to 2 tablespoonfuls of castor oil, repeating the dose on the second day if necessary.

Scours may be due to the mother's milk being too rich in butterfat.

2. To prevent white scours, tie the navel string close to the body and paint with iodine as soon as the calf is born. There is no cure for white scours.

Calf Will Learn to Eat Hay Very Early in Life

A calf will learn to eat hay very early in life, and it should be clean and leafy and replaced often with fresh hay. In ten days or two weeks it may be taught to eat grain. It is often easily started by placing some oats or ground barley on its wet nose and will soon be eating from a box or dish. It is a great mistake to allow grain or feed to stand before it, as the feed soon becomes soiled and sour.

THAT COUGH IS ONE CAUSE FOR ALARM

Get Rid of It by Taking Cheney's Before It Turns Into Something Worse

Does that hacking cough worry you because it hangs on so? Really it is a cause for worry, for if you don't get rid of it you may find yourself the victim of a far more serious malady. Thus it would be worse than foolish to let it go on, getting worse and worse, without taking the easiest and quickest method of putting an end to the trouble and so save yourself from what might turn out to be a very serious complication.

Suppose you go to the drug store and get a bottle of Cheney's Expecto-rant and begin taking a teaspoonful every two hours. Keep it up and you'll find that by tomorrow the cough will have almost entirely disappeared and in a few days will be completely gone. The time to get the best of a cough is right at the beginning—when you first notice it. Each day you neglect it only makes it more difficult to pry loose its hold on you. The sooner you begin treatment the sooner you will get over the trouble. Begin now.

Club Comedy

An Englishman tells a story about a caddie who tried in vain to get the job of carrying the clubs of a pompous amateur player. When it was the latter's turn to play, he placed the ball carefully, threw himself into position, swung his club like a forge-hammer and—missed.

The rejected caddie laughed joyfully. "Once more the novice drove and missed and the caddie's laughter became uproarious. At the third try the ball was dislodged from its perch and spun over the turf for about six feet. "Hi, man!" yelled the caddie derisively, "I'll carry your clubs for the fun of the thing."

Some Mistake

The telephone in a well-known surgeon's office rang and the doctor answered it. A voice inquired, "Who is this?"

The doctor readily recognized the voice of his seven-year-old son. Although an exceedingly busy man, he was always ready for a bit of fun, so he replied:

"The smartest man in the world." "I beg your pardon," said the boy. "I have the wrong number."

The Boy Grew Older

"And has he learned to talk yet?" "My, yes! We're teaching him to keep quiet now."

A Raw, Sore Throat

Eases Quickly When You Apply a Little Musterole

And Musterole won't blister like the old-fashioned mustard plaster. Just spread it on with your fingers. It penetrates to the sore spot with a gentle tingle, loosens the congestion and draws out the soreness and pain.

Musterole is a clean, white ointment made with oil of mustard. It is fine for quick relief from sore throat, bronchitis, tonsillitis, croup, stiff neck, asthma, neuralgia, headache, congestion, pleurisy, rheumatism, lumbago, pains and aches of the back or joints, sprains, sore muscles, bruises, chilblains, frosted feet, colds on the chest. Keep it handy for instant use.

To Mothers: Musterole is now made in milder form for babies and small children. Ask for Children's Musterole. 35c and 65c. Jars and tubes; hospital size, $3.00.

Source of Sun's Heat

The source of the vast amount of heat which the sun gives off cannot be the result of combustion, for if such were the case it would have been consumed long ago. The Helmholtz theory is generally accepted. It assumes that the sun's bulk is gradually contracting, and that the energy thus produced is turned into heat. It has been calculated that a contraction of 150 feet a year would be enough to account for the heat developed.

New Traffic Light

Lights to direct traffic have been invented that can be set in the surface of a street, being supported by springs that raise them into place again if run over by a vehicle.

Some silence may be golden, but much of it is ironical.

An Amazing Fact

TO many people it may seem incredible that a habit so common as coffee-drinking can be harmful. Yet if your doctor were to enumerate the common causes of indigestion, headache, and run-down condition, he would be likely to mention coffee.

If you are troubled with insomnia, nervousness, or are inclined to be high-strung, try Postum in place of coffee for thirty days, and note the difference in the way you feel, and how much better you sleep.

Postum is a pure cereal beverage, absolutely free from caffeine, or any harmful drug.

Postum

for Health

"There's a Reason"

Your grocer sells Postum in two forms: Instant Postum (in tins) prepared instantly in the cup by the addition of boiling water. Postum Cereal (in packages) for those who prefer the flavor brought out by boiling fully 20 minutes. The cost of either form is about one-half cent a cup.

How to know "cured" fertilizer

Great bins of Royster Fertilizer "cure" or "age," for months so that your results from its use will swell the earnings from your land.

HOW can you tell Royster's "cured" Fertilizer from fertilizer that has not been aged? The greatest difference is seen in the more profitable crops grown by the cured fertilizer, but there is a difference even to the untrained eye!

After the first mixing, Royster's goods are placed in great bins where they age from four to six months. They are then re-milled and bagged.

The fine grinding of the ingredients and the close association of the plant-food elements bring about a more complete chemical action during this aging, making a fertilizer which is readily available to the plant from seed time to harvest.

The curing and re-milling are two of the reasons successful farmers say "Royster's helps to make bigger and better crops."

Don't buy fertilizer in a hit or miss fashion any longer. Put your faith in the old, well-known Royster reputation and ask for Royster's Fertilizer by name.

IMPROVEMENT ORDINANCE No. 2.

An Ordinance to provide for certain improvements on Second Avenue North from the East property line of Sixth Street to the East property line of First Street and on First Street from the South property line of Second Avenue North to the North property line of Second Avenue South.

Be it ordained by the Town Council of the Town of Clanton, Alabama, as follows:

Section 1. That Second Avenue North from the East property line of Sixth Street to the East property line of First Street, and First Street from the South property line of Second Avenue North, to the North property line of Second Avenue South, shall be graded.

That the North and South sides of a fifty foot roadway on Second Avenue North from the East property line of Sixth Street to the West property line of Fifth Street, the North and South sides of a forty five foot roadway on Second Avenue North from the East property line of Fifth Street to the West property line of First Street, and the East and West sides of a thirty six foot roadway on First Street from the South property line of Second Avenue North to the North property line of Second Avenue South be curbed with Portland cement concrete combined curb and gutter, the curb and gutter to be six inches thick and the gutter thirty inches wide.

That the side walks on each side of Second Avenue North from the East property line of Sixth Street to the West property line of First Street, and First Street from the South property line of Second Avenue North to the North property line of Second Avenue South, shall be paved with portland cement sidewalks paying for a width of five feet.

That vitrified clay drainage pipes, inlets of brick, laid in cement mortar with cast iron covers shall be constructed where necessary along said street and avenue.

That alley crossings shall be paved with portland cement concrete paving eight inches thick.

Section 2. That said improvements shall be made in accordance with the established grades on file in the offices of said Street and Avenue, and according to full details, drawings, plans, specifications and surveys of said work, and estimates of said work, which shall be prepared by the City Engineer, as early as practical, and placed by him on file in the office of the Town Clerk at Clanton, at least two weeks prior to the date hereinafter fixed for hearing objections, remonstrances or protests before the Town Council where property owners who may be affected by said improvements, may see and examine the same.

Section 3. That the cost of constructing said improvements shall be assessed against the property abutting on the portions of the Highway, so improved.

(a) That the cost of improvements at or upon street, avenue, intersection shall be assessed against the lots or parcels of land abutting on said highways, so intersecting for one half block in each direction.

(b) That the cost of said sidewalk or alley paving at the intersection of any alley with said street or avenue, where said improvements are made shall be assessed in fair proportion against the respective lots or parcels of land abutting or cornering on the alley at such intersection.

(c) That the cost of laying drainage pipe and constructing inlets shall be assessed against all lots or parcels of land abutting on the portion of the highway, so improved and drained by said drainage pipe and inlets.

(d) That no assessment shall exceed the cost of such improvements, or the increased value of such property by reason of the special benefits derived from such improvements.

Section 4. That the property owners along said Street or Avenue shall be required to see their water pipes are placed at least eighteen inches below the grade of the Street or avenue and should, any property owner fail or refuse, upon demand to comply with this section then the contractor in charge of said work shall lower or relay said lines, and the cost of such work be charged to the property owner and included in the assessment against such property owners, and collected as such assessment for street and avenue improvements are collected.

Section 5. That the estimated cost of said improvement is $12,500.00, and that the Council of the Town of Clanton, will meet on the 3rd day of March, 1924, in the Council Chamber of the Town office of Clanton, at 10 o'clock a. m. to hear any objections, remonstrances or protests that may be made against said improvements, the manner of making the same or the character of material to be used.

Read, approved, and adopted, this 15th day of February, 1924.

V. J. GRAGG, Mayor
 Authenticated:
 ADA M. ATKINSON,
 Town Clerk.

New Year Greeting

The good old year of 1923 has become now a memory of the past. With all of its joys and sorrows it is buried and, as the days go by, it will become merely a misty dream.

We have all had to face some trials and sorrows, but in the main, it was a kind and gracious year to us all. In bidding it good bye, I wish to express my sincere thanks to the many friends and customers who have loyally stood by me with their friendship and patronage and have enabled me to wind up the old year with a feeling of satisfaction with my success and with a steadfast hope for the future.

I wish for you one and all, the successful culmination of your brightest hopes for the New Year. May good health, happiness and prosperity attend you through the days to come. May 1924 have for all of us happy surprises and untold blessings.

I am deeply grateful to every one who has favored me with their patronage during the year just gone and most respectfully ask that you will continue to give me the opportunity to deserve your confidence and trade.

Your friend,

G. C. Armstrong

How Population Has Grown in L&N Served Territory~

Population is always the gauge of prosperity. No matter what a state or community's natural resources are, its real wealth is no more than the extent to which its resources are developed. People are needed to till the soil, operate the mines, husband the stocks, run the factories, and carry on the other work necessary to upbuilding all land.

Intercourse between the states, and with the rest of the world, has been made easy of accomplishment.

Important as this has been, the L. & N. has done still more. Through its Immigration and Industrial Department it has invested time and money in exploiting the South to other parts of the country. It has induced many farmers and manufacturers to come in and settle here; thus—in addition to its basic service as a carrier—making a definite contribution to the South's growth.

This work the L. & N. will continue to perform, constantly striving to make its service a greater and more helpful factor in the upbuilding of its territory.

NUMBER 24

A MANUFACTURING PLANT FOR CLANTON

There is a movement on foot now that has about definitely arrived, for the establishment here of a real furniture factory with a sash and door department attached.

This is one industry that will be a winner from the start. They are going to employ expert labor trained for the business, who are fully acquainted with all of the details of fine furniture constructions and are going to install the necessary machinery for doing the work up to the most finished standard.

The sash and door department will be prepared to build any kind, style, size door or window desired for any kind of abiding.

We are not permitted to give the particulars yet, but are confident that this industry is an assured fact in Clanton.

Who will be next? Plenty of room

OUR SCHOOLS

From what we can gather, both of the local schools are scoring a very successful estimate among the patrons a year.

Prof. Stevenson, the new principal of the High School, is already looked on as an eminent success and the principals down there say that it takes efficiency in your studies to pass him.

Prof. Martin, at the grammar school, becoming more and more popular the months go by. He is not only popular with the patrons but is loved by all his pupils.

With such fortunate educational opportunities as these it would be the wisdom for every patron in town to give these schools every possible cooperation.

Back them up and do your part in keeping Clanton in the front rank as an educational center.

MR. GEO. FOSHEE VERY SICK

Mr. George Foshee, who lives out four miles west of town, is quite ill from some kind of gravel or gall bladder affliction.

The last news we had from his bedside was quite unfavorable and his friends entertain grave fears for him. He is a prominent farmer in his neighborhood and has lots of friends who are hoping for a favorable change in his condition.

MRS. JNO. T. ELLIS ENTERTAINS

The Ellis home was thrown open a number of friends on last Wednesday when Mrs. Ellis was charming guests to a "spend the day." The party home was all aglow and frayed with potted plants and carnations. Fancy work was indulged in at the noon hour a beautiful four course dinner was served. The table was centered with a beautiful basket of carnations. Those enjoying this hospitality were Mesdames S. J. Bell, J. P. Hayes, Grady Broadhead, E. Upchurch, P. T. Hinkle, M. L. White, J. Watts Moore, Latham Ellis and Jaddie Middleton.

Mr. H. J. Foshee, of Maplesville, was here Monday.

A SPLENDID RECORD

The Central Alabama Hospital is Doing a Great Work. A Few Facts and Figures

It affords us much pleasure to give a few statistics in regard to the successful career the Central Alabama Hospital has carried out for itself as a splendid institution of healing in our midst.

The following list of the activities of this model hospital has been kindly furnished us by Miss Gardner, the efficient matron and head nurse up there:

The cases treated up to January 1st, 1924 include the following:

Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat	42
Obstetrics	13
Pelvic Surgery	24
Appendicitis	52
General Surgery	103
Medical Cases	91
Total	325

These are in addition to numerous small emergency dressings and accident cases that have not been enumerated.

These cases were the patients of nearly every doctor in the county as well as some doctors from Birmingham and Montgomery.

The hospital is, now, as it always been, open to all ethical physicians and their patients at all times.

Our office and library is open to all physicians who patronize our hospital and all ethical physicians and surgeons are now, and always have been treated, in an equal and ethical way.

These doctors and patients have our sincere thanks for all past favors as well as the assurance of our appreciation of future patronage.

Yours respectfully,
ANNIE H. GARDNER,
R. N. Supt.

MRS. M. L. WHITE ENTERTAINS

Last Thursday afternoon Mrs. White was the charming hostess to the Wednesday Sewing Club. The living room and dining room were made attractive with beautiful potted plants and cut flowers, which made a beautiful sitting for the guests. Music on Edison was enjoyed and fancy work and at a late hour the hostess, assisted by Mesdames Armstrong and Taylor served a salad plate with coffee. Besides the club members Mesdames V. J. Elnore and F. G. Taylor were present.

BITTEN BY MAD DOG

Little Dolphin and Dolphin Powell, six and a half year old twin sons of Mr. and Mrs. Powell, who live out near the Nivens and Shaw mill, were both bitten by a rabid dog recently.

The father has been bringing them here for the Pasture treatment which treatment they will finish this week.

It is certainly fortunate that this wonderful service can now be obtained close to home. We congratulate those brave boys and their parents on getting treatment promptly.

Wm. Walker, of Maplesville, was on the streets Monday. Mr. Walker has a large farming interest in his part of the county.

A STRANGE VIEW

In looking over exchanges we find that business all over the south is undergoing the same period of slackness that always happens in January and February.

That is a perfectly natural condition.

In all of these other towns, big and little, the merchants always redouble their advertising campaigns when a dull period is on. Among the large advertisers and the mail order houses when trade gets dull they intensify and enlarge their efforts by advertising. That is especially the time when they need it. They have learned by this long years of experience and, in fact, this policy is recognized by advertisers everywhere as good business.

But in Clanton our merchants are just the reverse. If trade is good they are willing to donate a little advertising to the local papers, apparently as an act of charity and not a paying business investment.

It is strange that all the balance of the business world look upon advertising as a real business investment and one that pays large dividends; and that dull times are the most important times of all to advertise, while here in Clanton our merchants seem to think it merely a matter of sentiment or an act of accommodation.

Space in a newspaper is just as much a commodity for sale as meat and bread. It pays larger profits than any other article of merchandise we know of except moonshine liquor. It is so considered by all large business industries in the world, and has an untold number of millionaire mail order houses built entirely by its efforts and through its use.

The Chilton County News has a circulation of over 1,000. According to government figures prepared from the census reports an average of five people read every bona fide paper subscribed for. That being true, our paper is read, once every week by 5,000 people. All of them necessarily buy more or less merchandise.

The established rate, by all newspaper associations in the United States for papers of 1,000 circulation is 20 cents per column inch. This rate is willingly paid by all foreign advertisers and no questions asked, because they know it is a settled business proposition—that the paper is giving full service for the money.

If you were to ask that price for a local ad the decided probability is that you would never get an order.

These conditions are to be deplored but they are true. We solicit your business as a business, but not as an act of charity, that costs us more to accept than it would do without.

As long as we conduct this paper we are going to make it honest, truthful and fair to everybody. We have done so in the past and we have no idea of changing our ideals now.

From the personal experience of hundreds of the best people in Chilton county, our policy has made friends and we certainly appreciate them every one.

We are, prepared to give every month in the year, to our advertisers, the very latest illustrations in styles that may come up in any line of merchandise. You may see these illustrations when you want to advertise and choose just such service as you want. We will be pleased to serve you, just like you are pleased to serve us when we have a dollar or two to spend.

OUR COMMON GOOD

All over the country the wheels of progress are moving upward and onward. Now is the time for Clanton and Chilton county to get in on the ground floor and take advantage of the sentiment that is sending cotton mills, and other important industries to the southland.

A wide spread movement is at work now causing large northern investors to seek locations in the South, where the climate is open the year around and where labor troubles are unknown. Other states, and even other portions of Alabama, are receiving the benefits of this exodus, while Clanton and Chilton county drift along without an effort, it seems, to benefit by this condition of change.

Perhaps, our political differences have something to do with the spirit of progressive apathy that prevails here. It is more than probable that we go suffer, in material things, from this unfortunate state of affairs, but if we do, we feel like it is the height of folly to allow politics to develop into personal affairs, or to permit our political opinions to prejudice our actions to the extent of causing all to suffer financially because we can not agree politically.

As we have said, time after time, in the News, every man has an indisputable right to vote as he chooses. He is absolutely free to exercise that right here on anywhere else in the United States. Then why fall out with him for doing what he has a perfect right to do.

We are a democrat. Have always been a democrat and will go down to our grave as a democrat. That is our inalienable right and we propose to exercise it to the fullest extent, still, while we do that, we have always been fair enough and broad enough to recognize our neighbor's right to differ with us. We do not fall out with him for it and we wish him every possible success personally. He may be our enemy, but if he is, he is by himself, for we have nothing but the kindest of feeling for him personally.

There is no possible excuse for real people, who are honest and have good intentions and clean principles, to fall out with each other because they differ politically. If you are an honest clean and honorable citizen, no matter what your political creed is, you are entitled to the confidence and respect and every other citizen of like character.

It has been the policy of the Chilton County News, from its very first issue until the present to preach this doctrine and to live up to it. Our columns have been fairly open to all sides alike and our back files will bear out the statement that we have, at all times, refrained from personal abuse of anyone and have persistently declined to lower our democratic standards of truth and honesty to the level of dealer in personal abuse or vituperation. The high principles of our party mean a great deal to us, but the filthy billingsgate and slime exuded by some so-called political writers for personal reasons mean nothing to us and mean with only a merited contempt.

Industrially Clanton and Chilton county needs the earnest, concentrated and cooperative efforts of every good citizen, but the fellow who is not big enough to forget politics when it comes to working for the general uplift of his county, would not be big enough to profit by a broad gauge march of progress. But all of the others, whose intelligence and patriotism is sufficient to cause them to rejoice at a season of business advancement, will not pawn their spirit of progress on the turn of a local political issue.

We wish to be the friend of every good, honest citizen of Chilton county and wish to assist every one of them in every way we possibly can, regardless of his politics.

We may not vote alike, but we certainly can afford to work in harmony when it comes to building up our county and town.

Stop this senseless bitterness and remember that all of us are citizens of a common town and county and every thing we can do towards the advancement of our homes is equally beneficial to all.

COMING HOME

The many friends of Mr. R. J. Jones who has been at a sanatorium in Mont gomery for several weeks, will be glad to learn that he has improved to such an extent that he expects to return to his home here this week.

THE REAL CONTEST FACTS

A Real Statement of Why The Contest Was Put off

As soon as the mandamus case was finally passed on by the Supreme Court and the contest filed and an order made by the presiding judge setting the case for trial, the attorneys for the contestant got busy and began checking the judge of probate's record of registered voters and poll tax payers, selecting from it the names of those who appeared from the records kept by the probate judge to be disqualified and from this list served on Judge Reynolds the list of challenged voters.

Monday afternoon after court adjourned the attorneys for the contestant again examined the judge of probate's records and found that about an average of seven of ten who were shown by the records to be disqualified when the first examination was made were qualified according to the records, the probate judge having entered up on the poll tax records the fact of payment of these voters poll taxes which appeared on the prior examination to have not been paid. During that afternoon the attorneys only had the opportunity to check a very small part of the list and in this found several where it appeared that the poll taxes due as shown from the former examination had either not been in fact paid, or if paid, they were paid too late to qualify them to vote in the general election in November, 1922.

Desiring to be absolutely fair to Judge Reynolds and not wishing to cause any unfavorable comments to be made on his action even though the attorneys contended that he had no right to make any change in these records until after the tax collector had reported the poll taxes collected for 1923, the attorneys presented this matter to the presiding judge with no one present except the attorneys for Judge Reynolds. We wonder if conditions had been reversed if the other side would have been so fair.

The attorneys for the contestant asked the presiding judge to give them time to check these changes that had been made in the records against the tax collector's report of poll taxes paid and the poll tax stub books to see whether or not the poll tax payments would support the changes that had been made in the records. The attorneys did not contend that anything fraudulent had been done, but that it had been done at a time when such corrections were not authorized, and this being true they had the right to check what had been done against the actual poll tax payments. The presiding judge without hesitation granted the request and in fact the attorneys for Judge Reynolds did not make any objection to the granting of the request.

BUSINESS FORGES AHEAD

Railroad car orders, placed and pending, total more than one million tons of steel, and the unfilled tonnage of the United States Steel Corporation continues to show an increase monthly. These are doubly encouraging facts, because they represent a pronounced improvement in the steel situation since last November, and they are indications of industrial prosperity for 1924. The unfilled tonnage of the Steel Corporation at the end of November showed a decrease unit, the preceding month, and this decline had been evident for several months in succession. The turn of the year, however, found a pronounced upward tendency both in steel and iron, and those industries are consolidating their gains and preparing for still greater improvement. Indications are that the Steel Corporation's booklets will show an even greater increase for February.

American railroads are expected to consume fully thirty per cent of the nation's steel output in 1924, and their liberal equipment buying shows a lessening of the apprehension which the prospect of "presidential year" induced some months ago. Business is forging ahead in spite of politics.—Age-Herald.

A SAD DEATH

Last Saturday, February 16, death came to Mr. Hugh M. Foshee, Acre 18, at the home of his brother, Dr. Foshee, in Battle Creek Mich.

The circumstances surrounding the passing away of this young man are especially horrifying. He was afflicted with some peculiar nervous disorder that suddenly attacked him at intervals and rendered him helpless and unconscious. He was living with his brother and undergoing treatment.

Last Saturday he went in to the bathroom, as was his custom to take a bath. Soon after he entered Mrs. Foshee heard some unusual sounds in there and went to see what the trouble was. She found the door locked and her blows on the door and her calls were unavailing. She ran out and secured aid and had the door knocked down, but when they finally got in the poor young man was lying in the bath tub dead from drowning.

His parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Foshee, who live near Billingsley, in our county were wired at once. The body was prepared for shipment home, and arrived, on the fast Pan American train, at 12 o'clock at the depot here, where it was met by Undertaker Martin, who conveyed it to the stricken home that night.

Interment followed Tuesday at the New Cedron cemetery, where religious services were conducted by Rev. W. S. Cox.

The family of Mr. Foshee are long time residents of our county and have a world of close friends who grieve with them in this awfully sad hour.

The Chilton County News extends to them its most sincere sympathy, realizing from experience, that sorrow in the hearts cannot be abolished but the real sympathy of friends help to lighten the blow and makes us feel that life is real and holds something almost Divine.

Have You a Daughter?
Is She Nervous?

Then You Cannot Afford to Overlook
One Word of This

Augusta, Ga.—"For some time my daughter was in real poor health. She suffered with her head and back and was also very nervous. After trying several remedies which did her no good, I got Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, and when she had taken a few bottles she did not complain any more, but was feeling better than she had for a long time. I think the 'Favorite Prescription' is the best woman's tonic that can be had."—Mrs. J. C. Cadle, 1450 Silk St.

A beautiful woman is always a well woman. Get this Prescription of Dr. Pierce's for your daughter, in liquid or tablet form at any drug store, and see how quickly she will have sparkling eyes, a clear skin and vitality. Write Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel in Buffalo, N. Y., for free confidential medical advice.

ROAD BUILDING

TRUCKS AND ROADS HELP CREAMERIES

Some fifteen or more years ago we predicted larger co-operative creameries would be established and that the smaller ones would pass out of existence on account of the coming of the truck and better roads. The small local creamery has served its purpose well, but we have come to a period in the development of the creamery industry when larger local creameries are essential. The advent of the truck and good roads makes this possible and practicable.

It is well known to every manufacturer that he must have a certain volume of business in order that his products be manufactured at the least expense. There is such a thing, however, as an institution being too large to be economical, as well as too small. There is a happy medium for the size of our local co-operative creameries. An institution manufacturing 1,000,000 pounds of butter in a year will have a minimum manufacturing cost provided the management is efficient.

We think well of having a creamery in every community and of sufficient size that it can carry on its business upon the proper basis. It is something every community can be proud of; it gives increased value to the land, for when a creamery is situated close to the farm there is always a sure market for the cream or milk produced on the farm. When milk or cream was delivered by team it was essential that the creameries be closer to the farm for in most cases it was not economical to haul milk more than three or four miles. A local creamery now can be ten miles from the farm and the product can be delivered to that creamery cheaper by truck than when the patron lived but three miles away from the creamery when horses were used for hauling the raw products of the farm to the creamery.

Good roads and auto trucks are changing our creamery system. They are changing it for the better, for they increase the capacity of creameries, making it possible for them to render a better service to their patrons, produce a more uniform quality of product, and engage in other activities like the handling of poultry and eggs.—Hoard's Dairyman.

Compound Interest Paid on Highway Investment

The gradually accepted figure of 10 cents a mile as the cost of operating the average automobile was adopted recently by the Wisconsin railroad commission as its official standard. The rate is held interesting for its many applications.

In Minnesota, for example, the recent traffic census showed that the average section of the state trunk highway system is traveled by 834 vehicles a day. If a new location or other change shortens the distance on a route carrying average travel it follows that it would mean a saving to 834 car owners—auto taxpayers who are bearing the big share of trunk highway costs.

At 10 cents a mile, that saving would be $83.40 a day—more than $30,000 a year, and $300,000 in ten years, all exclusive of the cost of improving and always maintaining the extra but unnecessary mile.

Highway Billboard Nil in State of Minnesota

Minnesota's new law passed by the last legislature, prohibiting all advertising signs on trunk highways, has gone into effect. Thousands of signs ranging from small tin tags to billboards of various sizes on state rights of way, were removed. Only signs expressly excepted by the law are to be left. Bulletin boards for legal notices and marking of trails are the main exceptions.

According to highway department officials, the removal of the signs will not only take away unsightly objects but eliminate billboards which obstruct the view and distract attention at dangerous cross roads.

Reclaimed Rubber Made Into Bricks for Paving

New tires roll over old in an experimental pavement laid by the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul road at the Main street grade crossing at Racine, Wis. The paving material is a "brick" made from scrap tires by a new process recently developed. The design of the pavement was made by C. W. Brainbridge, chief engineer of design of the railroad, and the rubber bricks rest on a base of wood. If the experiment is a success, the railway company intends to install similar crossings throughout its system.

Continuous Paved Roads Return to Washington

A motorist can start from the zero milestone in Washington and travel a circle tour of 2,850 miles back to Washington again over a continuous dustless paved highway. This continuous section takes the traveler from Washington to St. Louis, thence through Chicago, Detroit, Cleveland, Buffalo, Montreal, Albany, Boston, New York, Philadelphia and Baltimore.

OLD BESS SURE LAUGHED LAST

By MARY R. RYAN

(Copyright 1934, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

OLD EBEN, carefully nursing his left knee, limped into the Bartlett Corners general store. With a nod to "Dad" Whitecross, proprietor of the store, and an uncivil glance at Joe Larabee, who had bested Old Eben in their last three checker matches, he carefully deposited himself on his favorite box behind the stove, and stared, with unseeing eyes, at the pile of "dress goods and ladies' wear" on the shelf behind the counter.

The open box of prunes beside him, usually seductive, went unnoticed, for Old Eben, as was evidenced by the open-mouthed amazement of the small circle surveying him, was not himself this evening.

"Dude" Jenkins, who had been the town sport 40 years before, but who had long since abandoned his frivolous ways, broke the silence.

"What's allin' you, Eben? Gone and got married? I thought I saw you whitewashin' the Widow Anderson's henhouse last week."

Old Eben ceased his contemplation of the dress goods. Flashing by way of an answer, a withering look at the audacious "Dude," he tenderly lifted his left leg over its mate, and turned a sorrowful countenance in "Dad" Whitecross' direction.

"Old Bess and me had a fallin' out today," he began. "You know, 'Dad' durin' spring plowin', she's too busy cuttin' furrows and I'm too busy followin' the plow for us to play high jinks considerable, and that's true, likewise, durin' plantin' and harvestin'. It's different, howsoever, when market's over, and all that's left to do is the milkin' and other chores."

"That's why I hitched Old Bess in the carriage today for a trot over to Cummins' Crossroads."

"Bein' as this was our first chance at sportin' since last spring, I'd spruced up a bit and had given Bess a slickin' up all over. So we started down the valley road in good spirits, Old Bess never slackin' one pedal until we pulled up in front of Houser Watson's grain store at the Crossroads."

"Hitchin' her to the post, I was givin' Bess a few apples as sort of appetizer for her out, when I noticed Sid Perkins' boy comin' along Main street with an armful of groceries that his maw had sent him to the store for. When he came to where Bess and me were passin' the time of day, he stumbled and his packages went kerplunk all over the sidewalk in front of Homer's store."

"I put the apples back in my pockets and was helping the boy pick up the groceries when I noticed what was in one of the packages."

Old Eben paused. He did not appear to notice that the checker players had abandoned their game. He has no eyes for the fact that Sid Adams had forgotten to whistle. After tenderly testing the joints of his left leg, followed by a prodigious sigh, he resumed his narrative.

"It was Cheyenne pepper, 'Dad' And right there I made a mistake, though old Nick must had a finger in it for sure. Feelin' kind of skittish, I thought it would be a right smart joke on Bess if I put some of the pepper in one of the apples and feed it to her."

"After cuttin' a deep hole near the stem I jammed in about half a spoonful, gave her the apple and stood back waitin' for somethin' to happen."

"It didn't take long for Old Bess to find that pepper. She gave me a quick look of surprise and started to cough and sneeze, while the Adams boy and me leaned on the hitchin' rail and laughed fit to bust."

"With my sides achin' from the laffin' I fetched her some water, but Bess acted mighty suspicious before, she would take any, and she sniffed careful-like before eatin' her oats."

"Toward sundown I came back to where Bess was hitched, but not likin' the way she looked at me, I didn't stop to fraternize any, but climbed into the carriage and started home."

"We'd just passed Larkin's bridge and was comin' into the valley road when Old Bess opened up with a burst of speed like she showed nine years ago when she won the county cup. 'I tried to hold her in, but she remembered the pepper and pulled away into a gallop that cut my hands and like to have shook me to pieces."

"You know that hole in the road alongside Perkins' pasture? Well, 'Dad,' Old Bess knows that hole, too, and in 10 years she has always gone around it—that is, until today."

Old Eben's audience drew closer. The ticking of "Dad's" old clock up above the elder barrel was the only sound heard as the narrator paused before revealing the climax of his strange recital.

"When I had picked myself out of the burdock bushes and had walked the last mile to home, Old Bess was standin' at the gate, and I'll take my oath that she had a twinkle in her eye when I went up to ask her pardon."

Out of Tune

A young fellow was trying hard to explain to the salesman what he wanted.

"Now, haven't you this song? It goes zim-zim, znn-znn, zang-zang. You know?"

And the salesman was trying very hard to follow him.

"Sorry," said the salesman, "but I don't seem to recognize the tune. What are the words?"

"Those are the words."

DAIRY FACTS

LIKELY CAUSES FOR LAPSE OF APPETITE

Dairy cows sometimes suddenly stop eating for no apparent reason, and feeding steers may be similarly affected. More commonly, however, appetite gradually lessens until eating stops. Chewing the cud, or rumination, is also suppressed in these cases. It seems possible that the cow becomes tired of her ration if no change has been made for some time. Lack of succulent or laxative feed may also be a contributing cause. Anyhow, the liver seems to be torpid and little if any muscular motion (peristalsis) can be heard when the ear is placed against the animal's side. Lack of exercise, insufficient drinking water, an inadequate or irregular supply of salt, chill, fright or discomfort are other possible causes, and total lack of appetite is also a symptom of many serious diseases.

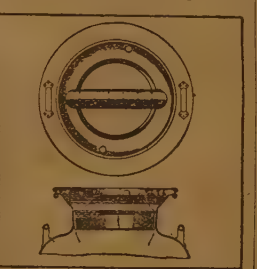

When disease is not present, try the effects of a change of feed. Apples or roots sometimes are relished. Raw potatoes may stimulate the appetite. A cow will sometimes eat whole oats when she refuses other feed. Salt placed in her mouth or salt dissolved in the drinking water may improve the appetite. Also offer alfalfa or clover hay, if timothy, prairie or awale hay has formed the roughage. Meal placed in the mouth may also coax the appetite.

In my experience fluid extracts of nux vomica and gentian root have proved, with acetic acid, the most effective medicines. Two ounces of dilute acetic acid well diluted with water and given night and morning for a few days sometimes starts the animal to eating. If it does not succeed, give twenty to thirty drops of fluid extract of nux vomica and one to two drams of fluid extract of gentian root in some flaxseed tea every six or eight hours, and if necessary gradually increase the dose of nux. Make the animal take active outdoor exercise every day. Take the chill off the drinking water. Supply rock salt or block salt. Protect the animal against cold drafts and wet weather.—A. S. Ventilating Cover for Containers Is Invented

The Scientific American, in illustrating and describing a ventilating cover for containers, the invention of G. T. Morris of Missoula, Mont., says:

The invention relates more particularly to containers employed for transporting milk, cream and the like. One of the primary objects is to provide a container in which the interior will be at all times in communication with the exterior, to afford proper ventilation of the contents. It is a further object to so construct the cover for milk containers that the gases generated within the container may be discharged therefrom.

Safe Practice to Feed Dairy Cattle Roughage

Feed the dairy cow all the roughage she will eat. Under ordinary conditions, this is safe advice, says E. S. Savage, authority on dairy rations at the New York State College of Agriculture at Ithaca. Silage and legume hay seem the best combination. The silage should be fed at the rate of about three or four pounds a day for each hundred pounds of live weight. This will usually mean the cow will then consume about a pound and a half of hay every day for each ten pounds of live weight.

Silage's chief value is its succulence. One should avoid feeding too much of it, since it is bulky and contains a low percentage of digestible nutrients.

To make the grain ration palatable, at least three different grains should be included. Jerseys will probably need about one pound of the mixture daily for each 3 to 3½ pounds of milk produced. Holsteins and other large-typed cows will need one pound of the mixture for each 3½ to 4 pounds of milk.

Feed Heifer Generously in First Milking Year

A heifer should be fed generously the first milking year to get her into the habit of milking generously and to develop her milk giving functions. Possibly her second breeding time should be extended a little so she may be milked a long time the first milking year in the hope of creating the habit of being persistent. Kindness and gentleness have much to do with the development of the dairy calf.

Why You May Need—

There are three main groups of prospective buyers of Chevrolet automobiles and commercial cars.

First, are all who know from comparisons or through the experiences of friends that Chevrolet provides the utmost dollar value in modern, economical transportation of people or merchandise.

Second, the large group of people with modest incomes who have the false impression that so good a car as Chevrolet is beyond their means.

They do not realize that due to engineering excellence and full modern equipment, Chevrolet operating and maintenance costs average so low that during the life of the car, it delivers modern, comfortable, fast transportation at the lowest cost per mile, including the purchase price.

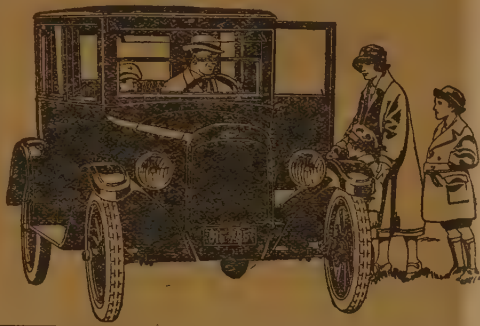

Third, the smaller but very important group of car owners of ample means, only a small percentage of whom as yet realize that Chevrolet as an extra car virtually costs them nothing, due to the reduction in their transportation expenses effected by it.

We respectfully suggest consideration, investigation and comparison of Chevrolet with any other car at any price.

States Seek Data on Amount of Game Killed

Minnesota and New York were pioneer states in inaugurating systems to ascertain the amount of game killed each year. Today a score or more of the state game departments are striving to collect this important data. The compilation of such data gives a very good idea of game conditions in the different states. By reading the tabulated results from the census of game killed you can also arrive at a pretty accurate conclusion as to the efficiency of the game departments of these states in years gone by.

From a Denver dispatch we learn that it is estimated that 800 deer were killed in Colorado last year. In the same paper comes a report from New Jersey that 800 Virginia deer were killed in that state the past season. When you compare the areas of Colorado and New Jersey, when you think of the difference in density of population, and also consider the amount of territory in each suitable for deer, you cannot help but realize that Colorado has been negligent in the past in the care of her game.

National Guard Growing at Rate of 1,800 a Month

At the present time the National Guard has an aggregate strength of 160,000 men, which is increasing at the rate of 1,800 a month. In the winter months the increase is slow, but just prior to the training season this increase is greatly augmented. By June 30, 1924, the bureau expects 181,000 men to be enrolled in the guard, and by June 30, 1925, it is expected the National Guard will number 200,000 men, and in 1925 average 190,000.

A study reveals the fact that the 1923 estimate of $30,577,940, which is allowed by the budget bureau, is not sufficient to provide for the training activities of these 190,000 men during the fiscal year of 1925. Although only an increase of $703,500 for all National Guard activities allowed by the budget bureau over the 1924 appropriation, the strength of the National Guard will be increased over this period by 20,000.—Army and Navy Journal.

FAVOR VEGETABLES IN WINTER DIET

Vegetables and Fruits Are Rich in Essential Salts.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)
Vegetables should be freely included in the winter diet as well as in the summer one. Doctors say that that tired-out feeling which many people have at the end of winter—"spring fever"—often comes from a lack of fruits and vegetables in the winter diet. Plenty of vegetables keep the children well and make their meals more appetizing. Vegetables mashed and put through a sieve are more easily digested by little children.
Salts of many kinds are needed by the body, or it will not work smoothly. Vegetables and fruit are rich in them and if you eat a variety you are sure to get all the salts that you need. When the water in which vegetables are cooked is thrown away, valuable salts are often wasted. Sometimes the flavor is not desirable, but if it is good save this water for soup or gravy. An even better process is to cook the vegetables in as little water as possible so there is none left to drain off, or bake or steam them. Canned and dried vegetables often need only skillful seasoning to make them taste as good as the fresh variety.
Canned corn is very good when turned into a baking dish with the addition of milk and seasoning added, heated through, in the oven, and allowed to brown on top. Outside stalks of celery, a green pepper, or both, chopped and added before baking, will vary the flavor of the dish.

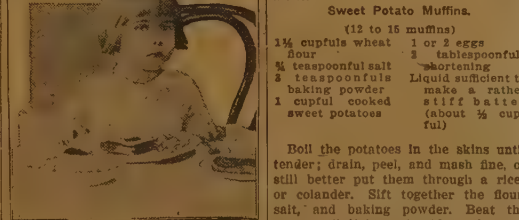

SUITABLE MEAL FOR CHILDREN OF THREE

Forethought and Planning
Are of Much Importance.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)
Many parents make the mistake of allowing their children to eat whatever has been prepared for the grown members of the family, no matter how unsuitable it may be. Sometimes this is from ignorance of the results to the child, but more often because the mother and housekeeper feels she is too busy to prepare a special diet for the small members of the family.
Often times part, or even all, of the food in the child's ration may be selected from the family meals. When unsuitable food, however, comprises the adult menu, only a little forethought and planning will be needed to enable suitable food being served the children, according to the United States Department of Agriculture. The sturdiness of the youngsters will more than compensate for the extra work.

Not only is the health of the whole family improved, but less effort is required of the mother where the menu for the grown-ups is kept so simple that many of the dishes may be given the younger children. In this way the need of preparing special dishes for the youngsters under age is eliminated.
At least one of the foods called for in each meal is milk, which is needed by all children; in others, the string beans and the beans and the prunes, for example, can safely be replaced by other foods of the same general kind.
Leaf vegetables, such as lettuce and spinach, are particularly valuable because of the vitamins, or the growth-producing substances, they supply. One good way to serve them is to chop them fine, cook them in a little water, and make a soup by adding them to hot milk. Lettuce finely chopped can be mixed with butter to make a sandwich filling.

A good dinner for a child of three might consist of: One large or two small slices (1 oz.) of bread or toast; two-thirds cubic inch or one-third ounce of butter; one poached or boiled egg; one glassful of milk; four ounces of string beans or cooked celery with one level teaspoonful of butter or a little cream; one-half cupful of rice served with stewed fruit.

Make Wholesome Dessert From Rice and Fruits
Rice molded and served with a sauce of fresh or cooked fruit, or hot boiled rice served with maple syrup or sugar, or ordinary sugar mixed with cinnamon, also makes a wholesome dessert. To mold rice it should be cooked about ten minutes longer than for ordinary cooked rice. Pour it into molds, place weights over the top, and chill it. Serve it with fresh sugared fruit or cooked fruits, or if desired, dried fruits, such as raisins, prunes, figs or dates, may be cooked with the rice and the molds served with soft custard.

USE SWEET POTATOES IN MAKING BISCUITS
Department of Agriculture
Gives Recipes for Bread.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)
Good muffins and biscuits can be made from sweet potatoes, says the United States Department of Agriculture, which furnishes the following recipes:
Sweet Potato Biscuit.
(16 biscuits)
2 cupfuls sifted flour
1 teaspoonful salt
2 teaspoonfuls baking powder
1 cupful mashed sweet potatoes
1 cupful milk
1 cupful shortening
Liquid sufficient to mix
Sift together the flour, salt, and baking powder. Cut or rub into this the cold shortening. In the same way rub into this flour mixture the mashed potatoes. Finally, add just enough cold liquid to make the mass cling together. Do not knead. Place on floured board, roll until one-third-inch thick, and cut into rounds. Place these in lightly-floured biscuit tin and bake fifteen to twenty minutes in a moderately hot oven. Bake all potato breads more slowly than those made with flour alone.
Sweet Potato Muffins.
(12 to 15 muffins)
1 1/2 cupfuls wheat flour
1/2 teaspoonful salt
2 teaspoonfuls baking powder
1 cupful cooked sweet potatoes
1 or 2 eggs
3/4 cupful milk
1/2 cupful shortening
Liquid sufficient to make a rather stiff batter (about 1/2 cupful)
Beat the potatoes in the skins until tender; drain, peel, and mash fine, or still better put them through a ricer or colander. Sift together the flour, salt, and baking powder. Beat the eggs until light and add to the cool mashed potato. Next add the melted shortening, then the flour mixture, alternating with portions of the liquid, until a batter is formed somewhat stiffer than for ordinary flour muffins. Bake in muffin pans for about thirty minutes in a moderately hot oven.

Round Steak on Biscuit Makes Appetizing Dish
Cut round steak into pieces about one-half-inch square. Cover with water and cook it at a temperature just below the boiling point until it is tender, or boil five minutes, and while still hot put it into a fireless cooker and leave it for five hours. Thicken the gravy with flour mixed with water, allowing two level tablespoonfuls to a cupful of water. Pour the meat and gravy over split baking-powder biscuits so baked that they have a large amount of crust.

All Around the House
Eggs that are to be kept should be stood on the small end and not the broad end.
Roll the clothes line when it is new and it will not then twist as new rope always does.
Select lamp wicks which are soft and loosely woven; they will burn far better than the others.
A good memory, and pencil and paper, are two ways of making sure the needed household supplies are purchased when needed.
An apple kept in the cake box will keep a moderately rich cake moist for a great length of time if the apple is renewed when withered.

Lesson for February 24 THE PERIOD OF THE JUDGES

LESSON TEXT—Judg. 2:6-19; 7:1-23.
GOLDEN TEXT—I will heal their backsliding. I will love them freely.—Hos. 14:4.
PRIMARY TOPIC—The Story of a Brave Leader.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Gideon and His Three Hundred.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Israel's Falling and Rising Again.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Long Struggle with Idolatry.

1. A Synopsis of the Book of Judges. This book covers the period from the conquest of Canaan and the death of Joshua to the judgeship of Samson. The teacher should master the content of the book in order to teach this lesson, especially chapters 2-6.
2. The Sin of the People (Judg. 2:6-13). While Joshua and the elders of his generation lived, the people in some measure remained faithful to God, in obedience to His Word, but the very next generation went into apostasy. Their degradation may be accounted for as follows:
(1) Failure to drive out the Canaanites from their midst. They had gained the victory, but they failed to exterminate them. Their mistaken tolerance became their undoing.
(2) Their amalgamation with the Canaanites. They intermarried with the heathen. Tolerance of the enemy is closely followed by union therewith and quick disaster comes in the wake of such union.
(3) Idolatry. Inter-marriage with the heathen was soon followed by the worship of the heathen's gods. God's people lose power over the world as soon as they make alliance with it.

2. God's Judgment for Their Sins (Judg. 2:14, 15). "He delivered them into the hands of 'the spoiler that spoiled them.'"
3. The Repentance of the People (Judg. 3:9). Under the yoke of their enemies they learned their folly and cried unto the Lord for deliverance.
4. God's Deliverance at the Hand of the Judges (Judg. 2:16-19). God heard their cries and by raising up military chieftains as Judges he saved them out of the hands of their enemies. A repetition of sin, oppression by the enemy, repentance on the part of the people and God's deliverance, constitute the story of the book of Judges.

11. The Victory of Gideon's Band (Judg. 7:1-23).

Gideon was the most outstanding of the Judges. He came from an obscure and unimportant family (6:15). Before going forward he wishes to be doubly sure (6:36-40). When once he was convinced of duty, he was courageous and enthusiastic. This is characteristic of all truly great men.
1. The Opposing Army (v. 1). Gideon and his army rose early on that eventful day and they came by the spring of Harod. Over against them was the host of the Midianites in battle array.
2. The Sifting of Gideon's Army (v. 2-8). At Gideon's call 32,000 men responded, ready for the struggle. This seemed a small army to go against the Midianite army, 135,000 strong, but God said this was too many, lest they be led to boasting and self-confidence. The real danger was not in their small army but in their pride. All that were afraid were allowed to go back, leaving only 10,000. Still this was too many. When God was through sifting, only 300 remained.

3. God Gives Encouragement to Gideon. He bade Gideon go down to the Midianite camp, where he would hear something that would cheer his heart and strengthen his hand. When he came near he heard a man telling a dream, which was that of a barley cake tumbling into the camp and smiting it. He also heard the interpretation given to the dream which made Gideon to be that cake.
4. God Gives Victory to Gideon (v. 10-23). His attack was unique. The whole matter was of faith (Heb. 11:32). Gideon with his 300 men formed into three companies, each man being provided with a trumpet and a lamp concealed within a pitcher. Thus armed they surrounded the camp of the Midianites. They were all instructed to keep their eyes upon their leader and imitate him. At the proper moment they blew their trumpets and broke their pitchers, giving opportunity for the lamps to shine out. This awful crash of broken pitchers, following the sound of trumpets, accompanied by the shout, "The sword of the Lord and of Gideon," threw the Midianites into a panic, causing them to fight among themselves. One hundred and twenty thousand were thus slain, leaving but 15,000 of that mighty army (Judg. 8:10).

Entered in the Post Office at Clanton, Alabama, as Second Class Mail Matter Under Act of Congress.

An immense amount of plowing was done in Chilton county last week.

The lid seems to be on pretty tight now on Sunday down in town.

Bird dogs are preparing for their annual vacation and the angle worm is beginning to migrate.

It don't look to us like the primary election to be held on March 11 will really mean anything.

Mr. Hugh Thompson, who is now saw milling over near Dadeville was back in town for the last week end visiting his relatives and many friends here Hugh is looking fine.

A good deal of drunkenness appeared on the streets last Saturday night. Littlejohn and Retherford will make themselves a little pocket change about next Saturday.

The Senate asked for the resignation of Secretary Denby. The President refused to allow him to resign. So there you are. Looks like the Senate and the president see things different.

Some of the bananas that are sold here off of the cars that set in every day or so must have started from the orchard while they were in full bloom. They are not matured when they reach us.

No one can forecast the vote in the next national election. It is going to divide on lines heretofore unknown. The people are tired of politics now and want service. Party lines are meaning less and less as the days go by.

We are glad to see Hiram Johnson's chances as the republican nominee for president getting better every day. If we have to have another republican president Hiram would suit us fine. He is a second Roosevelt in his convictions and Roosevelt was a real man.

The naval airship trip to the north pole this summer has been called off owing to the expense. Just as well spent it on that trip as any where else. The officers who were to make the trip are all on full pay anyhow and the gas bill to the pole would not have amounted to very much.

GERMANY CAN PAY

The international committee that was appointed by the allied nations to investigate the financial condition of Germany have found the situation just as we supposed they would. They find that Germany was not pauperized by the war and that she is perfectly able to stabilize their money and to meet the industrial conditions if she would only go at it.

They are determined, if possible, to beat the allied nations out of the indemnity agreed upon by the terms of peace they signed, and to do this, they have allowed their money to become worthless and have put out tales of their pauperized conditions.

This investigating body finds that none of their country was hurt by the war and none of their industrial plants damaged in the slightest. They find many of their manufacturing enterprises vastly improved by the installation of later and better machinery taken from Belgium and France during the war by force of arms.

They still aspire to rule the world in time and they do not intend to pay for any of the dastardly destruction they were guilty of during the war, nor to make any more that will aid their former enemies in getting back on their feet.

What they failed to do by force of arms they intend to finish by refusing to assist in the slightest rehabilitation of the ruin they wrought.

We hope that all of these pitiful stories and these charitable drive for money to help out the German empire will cease absolutely now. If starvation exists over there, the rulers of that country are causing it as an argument against them paying their just and honest obligations to the world.

Every allied nation should proceed at once, to impress upon them the fact that they will be compelled, by force of arms, if necessary, to pay the last farthing of the indebtedness they incurred by their wicked and disgraceful acts of destruction during the war.

Their present view point of international might and duty needs to be corrected and set right, with a firm hand, at once. Tell them what they must do and then see to it, by drastic measures, that they must do it at once. They have stolen too much valuable time already.

GOVERNMENT SCANDALS

The most crushing and disastrous blow that a "government of, by and for the people" has ever received since the patriotic founders of our wonderful system of freedom wrested their and our freedom from the imperial hands of England, is being dealt out to us right now, as the probe of different Congressional committees turn the light on and reveal the colossal frauds and stupendous robberies that have taken place right at the very fountain head of our government.

Day after day the developments show up greater depravity on the part of our very highest officials, than would be looked for in the career of the lowest down thing and hold-up man. It is the most shameful and asinine of some 30 to 40 years ago, that our trusted agents have systematically been engaged in stealing from the people, and even from the disabled soldier boys, millions upon top of millions of dollars to line their own pockets. Falsifying the records, covering up their tracks with forgery and all such methods of the common crook.

Besides, it is a matter of record that efficient service has caused to exist, and it cost the treasury now 188 per $100 to collect the revenue that goes into the treasury, as against 50 cents per $100 to collect the same revenue in 1920, not quite four years ago.

The expense of collection has advanced every year since Mr. Harding came in to office and is still going up by leaps and bounds. This too, while we remember that over a billion dollars has been stolen from the funds of the people, as disclosed by these investigations.

What are we to think. Is there no relief to be obtained from these intolerable conditions? Will the guilty parties be punished, or even dismissed from office? We fear not, since President Coolidge insists on retaining them on the job in the face of a request from the Senate that he remove them.

How long will the American people stand for these conditions? Are they blind? These disclosures are not made for political effect, for the party in power, and to which these defaulters belong, is demanding their dismissal and prosecution.

We stand disgraced as a nation by the party that bought its way in to power for $12,000,000 and they had to pay it back.

WANTED SMALL INDUSTRIES

Since the Chamber of Commerce has reorganized and started in to really do things it inspires us with even more confidence in the future.

In studying the history of several other towns we know of, we find that most of them have begun their industrial development on comparatively a small scale.

For instance perhaps a overall factory, a shirt factory, a hosiery mill, or some other small, though important industry locates in a place and begins to succeed, the records show that another, and still another, will follow into the field almost immediately.

The smaller plants are more easily located and more easily financed, but when you break the ice and begin to appear before the world as a real manufacturing center, then the big developer takes notice, and the first thing you know, a cotton mill or two will be moving in.

The only thing we need in Clanton and Chilton county is to make a start. Convince the investor that we want him and will treat him right, and offer him every possible inducement to come and before long, the daily hum of industry will gladden our ears.

Don't ever get out of heart but keep right on the job, no matter how discouraging the outlook may be, for persistent effort is what always wins.

Go after small industries as intensely as you do after large ones. Everyone you locate makes it easier to get the next one.

GIVE US ACTION

Some two months ago the State Highway Commission woke up for a few days and proposed to do some independent road building, regardless of the Federal aid fiasco.

This made some hopeful, that before our grand children were dead with old age we would have a few good roads, but it looks like now another lethargy had fallen upon these gentlemen, and silence broods over the whole matter.

What has become of that "immediate" work that was to begin before Christmas on the present B. & M. highway from the north line of Autauga county to Montgomery? We have not learned of any work of that kind being done.

What has become of that State built road from Selma to Clanton? Where is the plan of state road building that looked so good on paper? When are we going to see road building instead of so much talk?

Evidently there is a monkey wrench in the machinery. First thing you know, all of that bond issue will be exhausted and we won't have anything but an increased tax receipt to show for it.

The people want roads. They have furnished the money to buy them with but the goods are not being delivered.

If there is some real impediment in the way of building roads with this money, then cut off all of the overhead expense and let the money stay where it is until we can buy some roads with it.

A great many of us feel like we have spent enough money on "surveys" to have girdled the earth with a good road survey. Lay off the crew and stop the expense until some definite plan can be devised by which a few real roads can be located and built.

The government at Washington is in a terrible mess from inefficiency—or something. Does Alabama aspire to a similar distinction.

We want to buy less "expert" opinion now and more roads. Won't somebody try to accommodate the tax payers a little now with road service instead of lip service.

A SORRY PRIMARY

The Democratic executive committee appeal to citizens to serve, without pay, as election officers at the March primary. A sub-committee has adopted rules for the election. Only three members of the committee were present. This sub-committee will later canvas the vote. Probably not more than three members will be present at that time.

This is the plan adopted for getting out of the mess into which the recently-passed primary law has plunged the Democratic party in this state.

And it is a sorry method.

An election held under such circumstances is no more an election than it would be if the Democratic party would place ballot boxes at the doors of all the states movie shows, and ask the voters to cast their ballots as they entered.

In short, it has no more guarantee and protections than do the ordinary straw votes often taken to indicate public sentiment.

It is a sad spectacle when the dominating party in a great state lends its authority and approval to a procedure that turns a primary into a mere jest. It is a spectacle which will be felt in future years.

Regardless of how one feels toward the candidates of any of the present presidential aspirants, these facts must be admitted by everybody:

1. The new primary law was passed simply to give Underwood an unbeatable advantage over non-resident opponents.

2. It was passed to keep the voters of Alabama from expressing their opinion on national candidates.

3. Having been held illegal, the election has been taken over by a little group of men—who are supporters of one of the candidates—and who are arranging things to suit themselves.

The men controlling the coming primary are biased and unsuited to act as the impartial judges in a popular expression of opinion. It is just as though a man were put to trial before a jury consisting of two of three of the prosecuting witnesses.

Regardless of how Alabama feels toward Senator Underwood, it is a sorry spectacle to see so important a function as a primary election law held in such manner.— Birmingham Post.

James Dunlap, son of Mr. Bill Dunlap, was here Sunday spending the time with friends and relatives.

FOR WORKING PEOPLE
The best of workers get out of sorts when the liver fails to act. They feel languid, half-sick, "blue" and discouraged and think they are getting lazy. Neglect of these symptoms might result in a sick spell, therefore the sensible course is to take a dose or two of Herbine. It is just the medicine needed to purify the system and restore the vim and ambition of health. Price 60c. Sold by Upchurch Drug Co.

IT DRIVES OUT WORMS
The surest sign of worms in children is paleness, lack of interest in play, fretfulness, variable appetite, picking at the nose and sudden starting in sleep. When these symptoms appear it is time to give White's Cream Vermifuge. A few doses drives out the worms and puts the little one on the road to health again. White's Cream Vermifuge has a record of fifty years of successful use. Price 35c. Sold by Upchurch Drug Co.

The cost of a car depends in large part on volume and efficiency. It is no criterion of value.

Studebaker builds 150,000 fine cars yearly. All of them are Sixes. The main costs are divided by that enormous output. Thus at prices of $975 and up we offer the utmost in quality. We offer maximum values.

Don't judge these cars by prices. Under other conditions they might cost twice as much, yet offer less than these.

Some Major Costs

Quality cars require costly facilities. Studebaker has $50,000,000 invested in modern plants and equipment. $3,000,000 in drop forge plants alone. $10,000,000 in body plants, to carry out the Studebaker standards.

There are 12,500 up-to-date machines employed to build these cars. Some are enormously expensive.

Few outputs justify such facilities. Then parts must be bought outside, and profits paid to others.

Studebaker engineering costs $500,000 per year. That to us is $3.33 per car.

Our department of Research and Experiment employs 125 skilled men. It makes 50,000 tests per year to maintain our standards.

Our Bureau of Methods and Standards fixes the requirements for every part and detail. 12,000 inspections are necessary for each car to insure against flaws and mistakes. We employ 1,000 men to make them.

Cars like the Studebaker cannot be built without such facilities, such research, such care. Yet enormous output alone makes them possible at Studebaker prices.

The Best We Know

Studebakers represent the best we know. And with our army of engineers, with our wealth of experience, we probably know what is best.

We use 35 formulas for steels. Each is best suited to certain parts, as proved by years of tests.

On some steels we pay the makers a bonus of 15% to get them exactly right. There is no reason to excel as there.

We machine the entire surface of each crank shaft, as was done on Liberty Airplane Motors. That extra cost is heavy. But thus we get that perfect balance, that absence of vibration.

We use more Timken bearings than any other car which costs under $5,000. They cost considerably more than ball bearings.

JUST GO AND SEE

Studebaker is today the leader in the fine-car field.

Studebaker builds more quality cars than any other concern in the world.

Buyers of fine cars last year spent over $200,000,000 for Studebaker models.

The demand for Studebakers has almost trebled in three years—as people found them out.

Then go see them. Compare them with any car you will. Don't spend $1,000 or over without knowing what Studebaker offers. You owe that to yourself.

These facts apply to all Studebakers, of all styles and sizes. The materials used in all classes are alike.

JOSEPHUS DANIES

This editorial is about a certain former Secretary of the Navy, Daniels by name, who served in that office for eight years. In that time his chief property, the Raleigh News and Observer, was twice destroyed by fire. These were heavy blows to the fortunes of a man who was not wealthy. The losses could have been recouped by the simple device of appealing to Edward J. Doheny or Harry F. Sinclair, both of whom are accommodating to officials in distress. But instead Daniels preferred to stand his own losses and start over.

The latest item of news from Raleigh is that the editor of the Observer has been retained by a Philadelphia publisher to write the life of Woodrow Wilson. Apparently this is a harmless retainer for a former cabinet minister.—Advertiser.

THE MOCKING BIRD KILLERS

It seems that down in Pensacola they also have boys who shoot mocking birds. A writer in the Journal of that city states that "from all over town complaints are coming that the boys are shooting the song birds—and this in their mating season. Surely, if the boys want to shoot (Editor's note: And they do want to shoot) they need not pick out the song birds, or the lovely bright-plumaged pigeons, which they are now doing on the streets of Pensacola every day—or birds on the nest."

It is a pity that civilization doesn't make progress any faster in the world of little boys. We think that boys are somewhat more civilized than they used to be, owing to the hard work of teachers, humane societies and conservationists, but Lord—how slowly the youngsters learn. It is a disgrace to kill a mocking bird at any time.—Advertiser.

WHAT WILL PEOPLE IN EUROPE SAY?

We Americans like to patronize Europeans. We like to read European moral lessons. We like to enjoy Europeans to emulate our noble example in many ways. The American theory is that if Europeans would be like Americans there would be no more wars and hard times.

What are critical, intelligent Europeans saying now, if they read the dispatches from the States? They have always retorted to officious Americans that with all our in-growing morality we do not seem able to put down lynch mobs, highway robbers and murderers. Now they must add: "Consider your oil scandal in high life before lecturing us any more.—Advertiser.

WHAT ELSE

The present national administration is charged with more high grafting than any one we ever remember to have read of.

It has been proven that they made personal millions out of the lease of the Tea Pot Dome oil reserve that belonged absolutely to the naval reserves of the government.

Now it develops that they made other personal millions out of the leasing of the naval coal reserve in the west.

Next it is charged that the Northern Pacific Railroad has been given three million acres of timber land from which they have already sold $136,118,533 worth of timber and are still in the market to sell even a larger amount than that before the clean up. The total cost of constructing that railroad complete was only $70,000,000, by properly planned bribes in the interior department. They beat the people of the United States out of more than $500,000,000.

Several other questionable deals are also being investigated by the Senate. It is the most stupendous amount of crookedness that has ever developed before in any country that history tells us about.

This administration has indeed made a record for posterity. Nothing less than a million dollars interests that cabinet bunch at Washington. What will the end be? LOST!—Saturday morning February 16th, between Jones Hardware Store and my shop, one small black pocket book containing one $20 bill and three or four $1 bills, and about one dollar in change. Reasonable reward if returned to me.

STUDEBAKER SMASHES ALL PREVIOUS SALES RECORDS DURING 1923.

Nineteen twenty-three was a banner for the automobile industry in both production and sales of cars. Coming after the year 1922, which showed a remarkable improvement over the "off year" 1921, the increase in automobile business during 1923 is even more impressive.

Studebaker's record in making 1923 its banner year with the sale of more than 145,162 cars follows a series of phenomenal sales records. Each year for the past six years Studebaker sales have greatly exceeded those of the previous year.

Students of statistics will recall the story that 1921 told. In that year the sales of Studebaker cars were 29.4 per cent greater than in 1920, while the total number of cars sold of all other makes except Ford was 40 per cent less than in 1920.

Stated otherwise, Studebaker's ratio of sales in 1921 was 129 and the total of other makes except Ford was 60, as compared with 1920.

In 1922, therefore, Studebaker had the showing of a record year to surpass and plans were laid for a production of 100,000 cars, as compared with 66,643 in 1921. Even with this large increase in production, at no time was Studebaker able to supply the demand for its cars. 110,269 cars were produced and sold during 1922, an increase of 65 per cent over 1921 which up to that time was the greatest year in the history of Studebaker.

The increasing demand for Studebaker cars continued in 1923. By the end of August, the 1922 record was exceeded, and by December 31 Studebaker sales had passed 145,162—making 1923 the greatest year, by far, in Studebaker history.

BLISTERING RAYS that never reach your house!

BEAUTIFUL, bright days, are ruinous to ordinary house paint. The sun's ardent rays blister and crack the surface. Then rain comes pelting in. Moisture seeps in every opening—every crack. And moisture carries decay.

But those blistering rays will never harm your house if you paint it with

SUN-PROOF PAINT

Sun-Proof will stand between your house and the burning sun. It is elastic—it contracts and expands with the weather—it is non-porous—no moisture can get in.

Now is the time to be thinking of painting. Think now of the protection that Sun-Proof can best give your home. It is a Pittsburgh Proof Product.

LOCAL and PERSONAL

Mr. J. T. Jones, of Route 7, was down Saturday on business.

Dwelling DuBose, of Stanton, was in town last Sunday.

Mr. J. R. Hardy spent Sunday with his family at Rockford.

Our good friend, Mr. J. R. Taylor beat 10, was in Clanton Sunday.

G. C. Mims, of Isabella, was in town Monday.

J. D. Merchant, of Centerville, was here Sunday.

Messrs W. C. Dickerson and Charles Foshee, of beat 6, were in town Monday.

Commissioner J. M. Mims was here Monday attending Commissioners court.

Mrs. Grady Heflin is at Randolph this week. Her mother, Mrs. G. T. Hake, is ill at the present time.

Col. J. B. Atkinson made a business trip to Rome, Ga. the first of the week.

Mr. W. A. Kemp went over to Williston last Sunday owing to the illness of his father-in-law.

Mr. G. T. Guy, of Mountain Creek, was a pleasant caller at our office last Sunday.

Mr. W. B. Mills, of Birmingham was here Monday. He sells the George DeWitt shoe.

Mr. P. C. Blewster, of Jenison, was among the large number of esteemed citizens from that part of the county in town last Saturday.

Prof. Ira Pegues, of Scottsboro, is here this week looking after business matters. He is interested in helping to promote some manufacturing enterprise in Clanton.

Wallace Jones, of Birmingham, was a guest of Clanton friends Sunday. He is forging his way successfully in the world. Wallace has hosts of friends in Clanton who are always glad to shake his "raw."

Miss Leona Stanley, who teaches school at Providence near Jenison, spent Sunday with home people near Wetumpka. She is one of the real teachers who knows how to instruct her pupils and get results.

Hugh Thompson and family, of Cherokee Bluff, were here the first part of the week visiting friends and relatives. Mr. Thompson is well and favorably known in Clanton and Chilton county. He is honest, courageous, true and sincere in his dealings with his fellow man.

Mrs. Millie Edwards of beat nine, returned last Saturday at Thorsby. She is 85 years old and is decidedly the oldest person who has registered during this registration. However, she is thoroughly competent to recognize her duty as a citizen. We revere the assertion when she casts her ballot it will be for the very best interest of Chilton county. These truths are "self evident" when we are reminded of the fact that she is the mother of Mr. S. M. Edwards of Thorsby.

JACKSON CHAPEL

We—a few of us around Jackson Chapel—have decided to try to wake up our community. It seems as if Jackson Chapel community is dead, and we want to revive it. We have the material for the work. Can we do it? Yes. We want to organize a Sunday School, a singing class, B. Y. P. U. or something. We want every body who are workers, and who will work to help build up his or her community. So every body, both old and young, who are interested in Jackson Chapel community come out Sunday at 10:30 o'clock and show your spirit.

ANOTHER ONE FALLS

The Senate Tea Pot Dome oil investigation committee got the evidence too hot for even President Coolidge to take care of Secretary Denby, so that gentleman tendered his resignation Monday morning. That investigating committee is making a wonderful record so far. They really appear to be honest in their efforts to clean up this matter and they let the axe fall where it happens to fit. They don't pick 'em.

THE ANNUAL GUNLESS RABBIT HUNT

Dr. J. P. Crumpton, head cypelos of the Chilton County Rabbit Hunter's Association tells us that the annual gunless rabbit hunt will take place tomorrow.

This is a famous occasion every year and generally results in a great rabbit killing, to say nothing about the number of wonderful punts told by participants of their special skill as runners and chunk throwers.

SIMMS—HIGGINS

On last Sunday, Mr. Joe Higgins and Miss Grace Simms were united in the holy bonds of matrimony.

The groom is the esteemed son of Mr. B. F. Higgins, of Clanton, and the bride is the charming daughter of Mr. Simms, formerly of Clanton, but now is residing in Alexander City, Ala.

This was quite a surprise to the many friends of both parties.

The Chilton County News wishes for them a long and prosperous life and may happiness fall upon them.

A TIMELY SERMON

At the Baptist church last Sunday night, Dr. Ezell preached on the unfortunate political situation of Clanton and Chilton county.

It was an able and truthful statement of the conditions existing and a masterly appeal for better things and he deserves the thanks of the community for his efforts.

The Chilton County News is happy to endorse everything he said and extends to him our sincere cooperation in an effort to live up to his suggestions.

WHEN SPRING OPENS

Preliminary arrangements have been completed for quite a boom in down town building projects just as soon as the weather opens up.

Several new business houses are to be erected and all of them are already under lease before the work starts.

The outlook for business at Clanton looks good to some people when they are willing to make a long lease on property before it is built.

Clanton is bound to be a city.

A GOOD TURNOUT

Quite a large crowd of truck operators assembled at the Court House last Saturday in answer to the call issued by Mr. J. N. Scott.

The object of the meeting was to protect against the enforcement of the extra county license added on by the commissioners in addition to the regular tag license.

A good many strong speeches were made and the unanimous sentiment of the meeting seemed to be adverse to the enforcement of that extra fee.

A committee was appointed to go before the Board of Commissioners Monday with a request to repeal or suspend the collection of this fee for the present year at least.

Some weeks ago the Chilton County News made a similar plea for the abatement of that tax for this year, and we hope this committee met with success Monday.

It is a fact that the county will have considerably more road money this year than has been customary and

SECRETARY DENBY RESIGNS:

Film of Oil Spreads Further Upon Troubled Waters

Secretary Denby has resigned. The pressure of public opinion has been too great. He has been jettisoned by the officers of the great old ship "Republican Party" in effort to lighten the load. There may be more heavy cargo heaved overboard. Oil on the troubled waters has not quieted them. Some of the froth and foam may have been smothered under the film, but there is a groundswell and heave that portend the coming devastation in a hurricane of public wrath.

The many scandals of the Republican national administration which went into power on March 4, 1921, are deeply deplored by good citizens of all parties. The reactionary Republican element, representing special privilege, which controls and has controlled the Republican national administration from the beginning, has brought shame and disgrace upon the Republican Party, and in a way that all honest and patriotic Republicans must deeply resent. But more deplorable still is the stain these reactionary Republicans have put upon the national honor.

They have lessened respect for and confidence in the United States abroad and they have lessened the faith of the people in the integrity of their government at home. They have humiliated the best element in their party and have given new impetus to extreme radicalism which is antagonistic to our form of government and more or less antagonistic to all forms of government.

In all the history of the country there has never been such a scandalous administration. Most of the great departments of the government are involved in some kind of scandal. The State Department reeks with oil diplomacy just as the Interior Department reeks with the naval oil reserve transactions. The Attorney General and the Department of Justice have been under fire since Mr. Daugherty went into office. The present head of the Interior Department has been roundly criticised as the result of the reclamation bureau scandal. The Agricultural Department is involved in the packers and stockyards scandal. The Treasury Department has its income tax bureau scandal and its prohibition unit scandal. The revelations in the veterans bureau scandal have shocked and disgraced the nation. The Postoffice Department has made a joke of the civil service law and the Civil Service Commission has tamely submitted.

In addition to these there have been numerous personal scandals involving former Senator Newberry and a number of persons indicted with him and later appointed to office by this administration: also the odorous Goldstein scandal, the Tolbert scandal and the Isemp scandal, the latter two associated with appointments made by President Coolidge.

In none of these scandals has the administration taken very vigorous steps to bring to light the facts, nor has it expressed any adequate condemnation of these scandals which have disgraced the administration and disgusted decent Republicans as well as Democrats and good citizens everywhere.—Birmingham News.

we still feel like it is a mistake to add this extra tax on, at least, until we have tried out the matter under the new conditions existing.

All people are being taxed too much now. The cost of operating our governmental affairs has been allowed to go up so high that taxation is outrageous. We need to control expenses with a heavy hand all the way down from Washington to the individual counties.

The inflated figures of a war time operation seems to have opened the flood gates of extravagance and time goes on with no one attempting to curtail expenses of government and get back to normal.

The common people of the United States need to get together and have a general housecleaning. Both parties are crazy about wanting more money for less service.

Manjak Taken From Island of Trinidad

Manjak is a substance which is obtained in the Island of Trinidad, and in but few other places on the earth. It is a mineral substance and has a number of uses which are rather interesting. In the first place, a lubricant is manufactured from it. Thread, greases for pipes and for use in rotary drilling, making absolutely tight connections against grit, water and mud under high pressure, is made from it, as well as a lubricant for gear cases, sprocket wheels and roller bearings. If the manjak is too heavy, it can be cut with kerosene. A hard flux is also made from it. It protects surface and underground piping or casing against corrosion and hydrolysis. It can be used as a roofing material and for caulking seams. It saves condensation on steam lines and boilers. It prevents pitting.

To protect pipes or casing, the flux is liquefied by heating and, as it cools off, an equal measure of kerosene or crude oil is added. The flux is applied by brushing, dipping or spraying. A jet black paint is also made from the manjak gum. This paint dries quickly, giving a tough, unbreakable covering to protect hot and cold surfaces, smokestacks, undersides of motorcars, etc. It may be used as an anticorrosive paint for ship bottoms. This paint is prepared ready for use. The paint is cut with a little gasoline or white spirits. The paint can be applied easily and does not drag on the brush.—Scientific American.

Old Southern Hospitality.

In 1852 my father left Javaria for America. "Go south," was the recommendation. Acting on this suggestion, he went to Oglethorpe, Ga. Through acquaintances he made a connection with two brothers, Kaufman, who piled the peddlers' trade. They owned a peddlers' wagon, with which they dispensed through the several counties of the state an assortment of dry goods and what were known as Yankee notions.

It was not like the peddling of today. Because of slavery there were on the large plantations often more colored people than there were whites living in the nearby villages. The itinerant merchant, therefore, filled a real want, and his vocation was looked upon as quite dignified. Provided only, therefore, that the peddler proved himself an honorable, upright man who conscientiously treated his customers with fairness and made no misrepresentations regarding his wares, he was treated as an honored guest by the plantation owners—certainly a spirit of true democracy.—Oscar E. Straus to the Outlook.

A Sure Thing.

They were a sly pair, the cashier and the waitress. One day, however, they met their match. A gentleman called for his bill and, upon receiving it, he carefully added it up and found that he had been charged 50 cents too much. "How does this come about?" he asked, looking sharply at the waitress. "Well, you see, sir," she returned, "a trifling error of breath," the cashier bet me $2 that you wouldn't see it and I bet him you would."

With a smile the customer wrote something on the back of the bill, folded it and said: "Take that to the cashier." She did so, and on opening it the two were startled to read: "I'll bet $5 I shan't be here when you get back."

And he wasn't.

ALABAMA NEWS HAPPENINGS

A Resume of the More Important Events of Interest Condensed To An Epitomized Form.

Repeating plans submitted by the Southern Railway Company in compliance with an order requiring the railroad to provide a depot building at Jackson, Ala., that would be suitable and adequate in all respects for the existing needs there, the Alabama Public Service Commission, in another order, requires the company to file new and additional plans. These plans are to be accompanied by detailed specifications of facilities that will be "reasonable and adequate and reasonably safe and convenient for its freight and passenger traffic business" at Jackson.

The Southern Railway System will proceed at once to erect at its Finley Yard in Birmingham a locomotive and car repair plant which will be the last word in shop construction and equipment and will give employment to 1,200 mechanics. This official announcement has been made by Lauren Foreman, publicity agent of the system, who came to Birmingham as the representative of Vice-President H. W. Miller, in charge of the Southern's operating department, under whose direction all arrangements for the construction of the shops have been made.

Special interest has been aroused at Anniston by the announcement that the state highway commission's program of work for Calhoun county for the present year includes a section of the Talladega road from the Talladega county line to Oxford and the highway leading from the end of the Camp McClellan brick pike to Piedmont. A previous announcement has been made to the effect that the highway commission has planned to spend at least $500,000 on projects in Calhoun county during the present year.

The people of Green Brier, located in the northwestern part of Marshall county, experienced a bit of excitement recently when a controversy between Miss Bertie Blevins, principal of the Green Brier school, and the school patrons ended in the resignation of the teacher, the burning of the school building and the arrest and confinement in the county jail of Young Ballew, sweetheart to Miss Blevins, charged with the burning of the building.

The action of the State Democratic Executive Committee in fixing a preferential primary to be held March 11 for the selection of delegates to the national democratic convention to be held in New York City, June 24, as planned by the state committee at its meeting in Montgomery December 13, 1923, was sustained at a called meeting of the committee Friday at Birmingham by a vote of 20 to 7.

An estimate of the cost to straighten Dry Creek will be furnished the city council of Albany and Decatur and the council asked to co-operate financially with the county board of revenue to eliminate this possible hiding place of malaria mosquitoes, according to Dr. H. C. McRee, county health officer, and M. H. Rector, sanitary engineer for the Tennessee valley.

County schools are asked to have exhibits at the school fair to be conducted in Tuscaloosa March 1. The fair is to be held for the purpose of stimulating more interest in educational matters and to show that each teacher is making the most of the opportunities offered.

Good outlook for the steel mills in the Birmingham district and the increased building activities assure steady employment for a large number of workers, according to the January analysis of industrial conditions by the employment service of the U. S. Department of Labor.

Sale of the Birmingham Railway, Light and Power company has been set for March 15 and new owners should be in full control of the property within 90 days, according to an announcement of J. S. Pevear, co-receiver.

Maj. Page S. Bunker, of Austin, Tex., who was elected state forester for Alabama at a recent meeting of the state forestry commission, has arrived in Montgomery and taken up his official duties at the capitol.

Casings at oil well No. 1, a well being sunk near Albany by the Albany-Decatur Oil and Gas Company, is being placed. The well is 3,000 feet deep.

Tax Collector Clyde Nix of Marion county, reports the payment of 2,040 poll taxes which is an increase over the 1922 collection.

Desks for the assembly hall of Thorsby Institute will be provided through the generosity of Miss Helen Keller, noted Alabama woman, who has achieved remarkable success in the scholastic world despite the handicaps of blindness and deafness. A check for the purchase of these desks was recently received from Miss Keller who also sent a picture of herself, which has been framed and hung in the assembly hall.

H. S. Gardner, Montgomery manager of the Woco-Pep Gasoline Company, was fined $100 and costs in two cases in police court at Montgomery on charges of failing to file return on the new city ordinance imposing an excess of a cent per gallon on gasoline and a half-cent per gallon on kerosene sold within the police jurisdiction of Montgomery.

Decision to revive scouting in Etowah county, was reached at a meeting of interested organization at Gadsden following an appeal by Stanley A. Harris, field representative of the National Boy Scout council, and it is expected the movement will be sponsored by the Rotary Club of Gadsden and Attalla. The latter contributed $750 toward a $5,000 fund for the work.

The old charcoal furnace which was built at Attalla in 1887 and which is one of the industrial landmarks of the district, is being dismantled to be sold for scrap iron. The bee hive charcoal ovens are to be torn down also. The plant was recently purchased by a Birmingham junk dealer.

A jury in the United States court at Huntsville, has returned a verdict of guilty as charged, in the case of Jesse B. Burgess, law student, of Huntsville, tried for transporting a young woman from Huntsville to Nashville, where he registered her at a hotel as his wife.

The Chilean State Railways will get 4,000 tons of Bessemer-rolled steel rail, order for same having been placed through the United States Steel Products Corporation, export subsidiary of the United States Steel Corporation, according to information in industrial circles at Birmingham.

The municipal bond issue of $130,000 authorized in December and advertised for sale at Huntsville has been withdrawn for the present when it was found the best bid was 99c. The council was not inclined to take a loss of $10,000 or more and it has been decided to advertise the bonds again.

An amusement park, including one of the best athletic fields in the south, will be erected at Albany-Decatur immediately. B. L. Malone, prominent business man has announced. The work of leveling a 21-acre tract bought by Malone for the park is now under way.

By a vote of four to one, citizens of Parrish, Walker county, authorized the issue of a $15,000 bond for school purposes. In the main business section which carries the largest proportion of the tax burden, only four votes were cast against the proposition.

Three were injured, one probably fatally and two slightly, when a truck in which they were returning from a hunting trip ran over an embankment on the Springfield road, near Camp Cosby (formerly Owen's Lake), 18 miles from Birmingham, when the steering gear broke.

The sum of $5,000 bequeathed to the city of Florence for a public memorial to the Litten family by Mrs. Amelia Litten, former resident of Florence, will be used for the construction of a home for nurses near the Eliza Coffer memorial hospital.

J. W. White of Uniontown, was winner of the 1923 Alabama-Mississippi Red Bay Baby prize of $1,000. This prize is given annually by the International Harvester Company to the dealer whose volume of business shows the greatest leadership.

The public service commission has ordered the Western Railway of Alabama to apply within 30 days a rate not exceeding 17.2 cents per hundred pounds on empty iron drums returned in less than car loads shipment from Selma to Montgomery.

Preliminary hearings which were to have been held before Justice E. A. Burke at Opelika in cases against nine defendants from near Phenix City on charges of automobile thefts, have been postponed until March 5, at the request of Sheriff Moon.

Numerous claims continue to keep the Albany fire department on the jump. A fire a day has been the record for February, Chief Sauber stated. Damage in all cases has been small, however.

Numbers of representatives of churches of both Albany and Decatur recently met at the Albany Central Baptist Church to hold the announced organization meeting of the community slingers.

In the interest of the boy scout movement and in conjunction with anniversary week of that organization Scoutmaster A. B. Carlton recently paid visits to all of the schools in Phenix City and made short talks to the pupils.

The Thomas Creek Coal Company of Carbon Hill, which has been closed down for several months has been opened to put the mines in condition for an extended run.

One of the biggest community "sings" of the year was held Sunday at the court house at Tuscaloosa.

Strawberry Best for Home Garden

New Plants for Spring Setting Can Be Purchased at Very Small Expense.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Strawberries are so easily handled and require so little room that if only one of the small fruits can be grown in the home garden they should have the preference. New plants for setting out this spring can be purchased at small cost from nurserymen, or perhaps may be obtained free from a neighbor. They may be transplanted from nearby at any time in the season if surrounded by a ball of earth, moved carefully and watered well. In either case, says the United States Department of Agriculture, the bed should contain some plants known as a perfect-blossom variety, otherwise the plants of the imperfect-blossom variety in the bed will not be pollinated and consequently will not bear fruit.

Two Kinds of Blossoms.

Strawberry blossoms are of two kinds. One kind is called perfect, staminate, or male, and the other kind imperfect, pistillate, or female. Some varieties have perfect blossoms and other varieties have imperfect blossoms. Those with perfect blossoms produce pollen which will fertilize both perfect and imperfect blossoms and enable them to bear fruit. The varieties with imperfect blossoms cannot set fruit without receiving pollen from perfect blossoms.

If both kinds are planted there should be at least one row of the perfect-blossom variety to four rows with imperfect blossoms. The nurseryman's catalogue will specify the kind of blossoms. Set the plants early in the spring, if possible, so they will get the benefit of the spring rains and make a strong growth. Trim off the dead leaves and all but one or two live ones and cut the roots to four or five inches long. Spread the roots somewhat and set the plants the same depth in the soil as they were before they were dug. Be especially careful not to set them deeper and not to get earth over the growing crowns, for this will probably kill the plants.

Set Close Together.

The plants may be grown in hills or in narrow or wide matted rows. For very small areas, plants set in hills close together will no doubt produce the most and largest fruit, but will require more care than matted rows. For hill growing, set the plants one foot apart in the row and have the rows just far enough apart to cultivate easily, say from two to three feet; or set two rows a foot apart in double rows and have a space of two or three feet between the double rows. Keep all runners cut off and give good cultivation, so as to make extra strong plants.

Vaccination Against Hog Cholera Is Wisest Plan

As there seems to be a considerable outbreak of hog cholera in the eastern part of Colorado, a reiteration of some of the well-known facts of this disease may not be amiss.

Hog cholera is the most serious disease of hogs which we have and the only one that causes unusually large losses in all aged animals. It is hardly conceivable that 50 or 75 per cent of a herd of hogs of various ages would be lost from any other disease. In spite of this there seems to be much uncertainty as to the diagnosis, one regarding it as pneumonia, another as necrotic enteritis, and various other diseases.

Vaccination of herds in which the disease is already widespread is often disappointing, but vaccination as a preventive measure is almost absolute and will be found profitable. This procedure is the greatest boon to the hog raiser which has ever been discovered, but unless it is used it cannot be expected to be very helpful. Everyone owning hogs in a district where the disease is known to exist should immediately vaccinate rather than wait until the disease attacks the herd. This will be found excellent and profitable insurance.—I. E. Newsum, department of pathology, Colorado Agricultural college.

Care of Farm Machinery Should Interest Farmer

Farm folks no doubt tire of reading about the care of farm machinery. It seems to be the open season on this subject at this time of the year, but there is just one thing that should bring the subject closer home right now than ever before and that is that it is now that farm folks are complaining most about the cost of producing farm crops and the wide difference in price levels of farm products and manufactured products. Now is the time to cut down the overhead and the item of depreciation on farm equipment.

Soy Beans Are Excellent With Corn for Silage

To be grown with corn for hogging down or to be pastured down with sheep or to be cut with corn for silage, there is no question but soy beans should be more extensively raised in every state of the Union. We should also grow more soy beans for grain to be used for cattle and hogs in balancing feeding rations. The man who grows his own protein need not buy so much expensive tankage and other products rich in the muscle-forming elements.

Care of Leather in Wet Weather Urged Especially True in Late Winter and Spring Months.

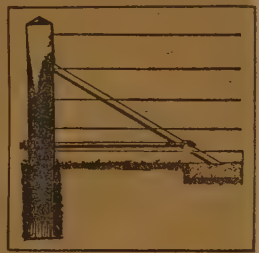

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

"The care of your leather equipment at all times, but especially during the wet winter and spring months," is the recommendation of the leather experts of the bureau of chemistry, United States Department of Agriculture. Farmers are the largest users of leather and they are vitally concerned in lengthening its life. Harness, for instance, of the proper weight and grade for the work required, should last fifteen to twenty-five years if it is not allowed to become hard or harsh, but is kept smooth and flexible by frequent washing and oiling, and has been known to last forty years.

The specialists recommend that harness be washed with tepid water and castle soap, rinsed in tepid water, and hung up to dry. While still moist it should be oiled well with neat's-foot oil or castor oil with a mixture of either with wool grease. Driving belts, machine belts and other leather articles used by the farmer will also respond to this preservative treatment with increased serviceability and money will be saved that would otherwise have to be spent in replacing them if neglected.

Grease the children's shoes and waterproof the soles so that dampness cannot enter. Then it will no longer be necessary to deny children the pleasures of outdoor life during winter and spring because of the possible danger of colds from wet feet. Formulas for making boots and shoes water resistant have been prepared by the department.

Substantial Fence Post Brace Always Desirable

The diagonal rod shown in the illustration has one end bearing against a metal seat near the top of the post and the other against a block of concrete. It acts as a brace and is held in place by the horizontal tie rod.

Pure Bred Sires of One Breed Give Best Results

No hard and fast rules can be laid down as to how and where to buy good herd sires. It is a good plan for the beginner to get the advice and assistance of an experienced judge before making a purchase. Not every pure bred or registered sire is a good one; culs appear in the best herds. Most county agents and high school agricultural teachers are good stock judges, or at least have sufficient knowledge of breeds and herds to enable them to render valuable assistance in selecting stock. The better class of breeders will assist a new man to get a start by giving him good value for his money.

Pure bred sires give best results when always of one breed. Judicious cross-breeding may give good results for market feeding, but when cross-bred females are saved for breeding purposes their offspring do not have that uniformity of type and form that is so desirable in market stock. This is only obtained by continuing one line of breeding.

Tomato-Fertilizer Tests Give Convincing Results

Results of three years' work with fertilizers on tomatoes have just been published by the New Jersey experiment station. Yields produced with 21 different complete fertilizers, each containing a total of over 16 per cent plant food (ammonia, phosphoric acid and potash) were compared with each other and with yields of unfertilized tomatoes. The fertilizer was applied at the rate of 1,000 pounds per acre, at four or six weeks before planting and the balance three weeks after planting.

During the three-year period, the combined average yield of the seven highest yielding plots was 72 tons of tomatoes per acre, 4.8 tons more than the average yield of the unfertilized tomatoes. All things considered, a 2-8-6 fertilizer proved the most economical under the conditions governing the test.

Soy Beans Not Superior to Alfalfa as Hay Crop

While soy beans should not be considered superior to alfalfa for hay, they may be regarded as a most excellent catch crop to be seeded in the spring in places where clover or alfalfa have winterkilled, or to be grown where other legumes have not been seeded the year before. Then, too, soy beans will grow on land that is slightly sour and not well adapted for the legumes that are especially susceptible to soil acidity.

"BLACK-DRAUGHT DID THE WORK"

Says Mississippi Lady, Who Says She Had Been So Nervous She Felt Like Tearing Her Clothes.

Biloxi, Miss.—"I had, for a year or more, nervous indigestion, or some form of stomach trouble," says Mrs. Mazon Ford, 1117 Clark street, this city. "The water I drank at that time seemed to constipate me. I would suffer until I got so nervous I wanted to get down on the floor and roll. I felt like I could tear my clothes."

"Every night, and night after night, I had to take something for a laxative, and it had to be kept up nightly. My skin was mallow and seemed spotted. I would look at my hands and arms and the flesh looked lifeless."

"I told my husband I would try Black-Draught, which I did. I took a few big doses. I felt much better. My liver acted well, and with constipation, I drank it that way."

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Oil Lease Scandals Growing Worse—McAdoo Puts Candidacy to Test.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

WORSE and more of it summarizes the developments in the oil lease scandal last week. The sticky smear is spreading daily and where it will stop no one can foretell. On Monday the Democratic senators, aided by ten Republicans and the two Farmer-Labor members, put through the senate the Robinson resolution asking President Coolidge to demand the resignation of Secretary of the Navy Denby. The vote was 47 to 34, Bruce being the only Democrat to vote in the negative. Mr. Coolidge promptly issued a formal statement announcing that the resolution was an invasion of executive functions and that he would ignore it. Fully maintaining his dignity and his self respect and respect of his high office, he said:

"I do not propose to sacrifice any innocent man for my own welfare, nor do I propose to retain in office any man for my own welfare. I shall try to maintain the functions of the government unimpaired, to act upon the evidence and the law as I find it and to deal thoroughly and summarily with every kind of wrongdoing. In the meantime such steps have been and are being taken as fully to protect the public interests."

Tuesday night, in a Lincoln day address before the National Republican club in New York, the President again declared his determination not to be stampeded by the senate, and promised "immediate, adequate and unshinching prosecution to punish all persons guilty of fraud or corruption in the leasing of government oil lands." He added: "In this effort there will be no politics, no partisanship. I am a Republican, but I cannot on that account shield anyone because he is a Republican. I am a Republican, but I cannot on that account prosecute anyone because he is a Democrat."

ON HIS own motion, William G. McAdoo went before the senate committee and explained at length his employment as a lawyer by Edward Doheny for which he received $150,000. He maintained that his connection with the oil magnate had been entirely proper and innocent, but said he himself had recently terminated it. He declared he considered Doheny "guilty of a serious thing," but not so guilty as he considered Fall. It was the general opinion that Mr. McAdoo had failed by his testimony to re-establish himself as the leading candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination. Seemingly he realized this, for later in the week he asked that his state managers and other leading supporters should meet in Chicago on February 18 to determine whether he should continue as a candidate. A really clever move, that, which might accomplish that which his appearance before the senators failed to do.

Witnesses before the senate committee included M. A. Traylor and E. O. Brown, Chicago bankers, who explained the purchase of the Albuquerque (N. M.) Journal by New Mexico banking interests, after which it discontinued its attacks on Fall; George Chesel and U. Leo Stack, who told more about Doheny's attempts to obtain a lease of the Teapot Dome reserve from Secretary of the Navy Daniels. John C. Shaffer, newspaper publisher, who said Fall told him in March, 1921, the month he entered the cabinet, that he was going to lease Teapot Dome to Harry Sinclair; and near the week-end, Frank A. Vanderbilt, who was summoned to explain charges and innuendoes made by him in an extraordinary speech Wednesday at Ossining, N. Y. The New York financier astonished the country by intimating, in that address, that there were irregularities in the sale of the Marion Star by President Harding just before he started on the Alaska trip; and he bitterly attacked the senate investigating committee, asserting that it quit questioning Fall because the latter was ready to peach and to involve men higher up than any yet named. He also commented on the "sinister inactivity" of Attorney General Daugherty, and on alleged reckless expenditures by the veterans' bureau and the shipping board. To interviewers Mr. Vanderbilt admitted that of his own knowledge he knew nothing of the truth or falsehood of these stories. The one concerning Mr. Harding and the Marion paper was indignantly refuted by the men who bought the Star and by many friends of the late President.

Senator Wheeler of Montana introduced a resolution providing for a sweeping investigation of the conduct of Attorney General Daugherty and of all branches of the Department of Justice. Senator Dill of Washington introduced resolutions, which were unanimously adopted, calling upon the State department to supply all diplomatic correspondence relating to the Colombian treaty, in the ratification of which oil interests and Albert B. Fall played a large part, and all diplomatic correspondence relating to the securing of oil concessions for American corporations in any foreign countries.

There were many rumors about a mysterious slush fund of $1,000,000 which, according to the stories that reached the committee, was raised in Wall street and sent to Washington to reimburse certain statesmen and members of the Harding administration who had lost money gambling in oil stocks. A subpoena was issued for E. B. McLean, the publisher, whom the committee desired to question on this and other matters.

President Coolidge withdrew the name of Silas Strawn as special oil prosecutor, objection to whose appointment was based on the fact that he is a director in Chicago banks said to be connected with the Standard Oil Company of Indiana. Atlee Pomeroy also was objected to, but the President declined to withdraw his nomination.

America is not the only country smeared with oil. Harry Sinclair has obtained a big contract from the Persian government, and there are charges of a bribe of $100,000. He also has valuable concessions in Italy, and some of the Rome papers demand full publicity for this deal.

THAT there is nation-wide profiteering in bread and that a bread trust is to be created to less Congress takes action is asserted by Basil M. Manly, director of the People's Legislative service of which Senator La Follette is chairman. An investigation had been asked by certain "progressive" senators and representatives, and the resulting report says the American people are paying $1,000,000 a day too much for their bread; that the average retail price is 9 cents a pound, whereas at the prevailing price of wheat it should be 5 cents a pound. Alleged "retailers' rings," supported by the wholesale bakers, either voluntarily or under threat of boycott, are declared to have suspended the law of supply and demand, resulting in artificial bread prices in many cities. As an example of the effect of this condition, the investigation is said to have shown that "bread costs 2 cents a pound less in New Orleans and Houston, Tex., far away from the wheat and flour milling states, than in Chicago, Omaha, Butte and St. Paul, all in the heart of the wheat belt."

CONFRONTED by the rifles and machine guns of several regiments of the state troops, Williamson county, Illinois, has quieted down, and its riotous citizens have been disarmed by order of the officer in command. S. Glenn Young, who with the backing of the Ku Klux Klan, conducted the liquor raids that brought on the latest "war" was deposed as acting chief of police of Herrin and sent out of town.

PRESIDENT OREGON administered to the Mexican rebels a smashing defeat at Ocutlan on the west front, though with considerable loss to his own forces. This at once opened the way to Guadalajara, which important city was abandoned by the revolutionists and occupied by federal troops. Rebel forces concentrated at Tuxpan still are threatening Tampico and the oil fields.

NATIONALISTS of the Bavarian Palatinate cornered a lot of Separatists Wednesday night, in Pirmaeus and Kaiserlautern and massacred them in most brutal fashion. While the French remained neutral during the fighting, the German police were placed under orders of the occupational authorities and it was announced that those who participated in the attacks would be court-martialed. The Separatists are aroused to fury and it is feared they will stage an uprising. In several German cities there were serious Communist outbreaks.

HOWARD CARTER and his brother, archeologists last week raised the lid of Tut-Ankh-Amen's huge pink sarcophagus at Luxor and revealed the most magnificent mummy case ever found in Egypt. The effigy of the Pharaoh, more than twice life size, was covered with thick sheets of solid gold; the curled beard was of gold, and the sacred uraeus on the head-dress was of lapis lazuli. It was announced that the opening of this mummy case would be postponed for a time, and then came the sensational news that the foreign government of Egypt had refused to proceed with the exploration. This was due to the interference of the Egyptian ministry of public works which culminated in an order forbidding an inspection of the tomb by the wives of the scholars and scientists who have been doing the work. The director general of antiquities appears to be in sympathy with the ministry's policy. Back of the whole trouble is said to be a contract signed by the late Lord Carnarvon giving to the London Times the sole rights to descriptive articles and pictures of the discoveries in the tomb.

ITALY and Norway have followed the example of Great Britain and recognized the foreign government of Russia, and the first mentioned got the jump on the English by immediately naming her ambassador to Moscow. M. Litvinoff, deputy minister of foreign affairs, announced that Russia would not enter into trade pacts with any nation that had not first given recognition to the soviet regime. "Some countries go on muttering about old debts," Litvinoff said. "We refuse to consider any preliminary condition to commercial treaties. Countries first must recognize us de jure, then we will discuss matters with them."

PRIME MINISTER MACDONALD outlined to parliament his foreign policies, which seemed to his opponents exceedingly idealistic and hazy, and his plans to solve domestic problems, which were not alarming even to the conservatives. The first division in the house of commons was won by the government with the support of the liberals, the vote being 290 to 103.

IN HIS Lincoln day speech President Coolidge talked of a lot of things besides the oil scandal. In discussing the agricultural situation he said that because of improved methods of tillage and inventions in farm machinery, the production of farms had outrun the power of distribution and consumption; that the prices of the great food staples was not on a parity with manufactured products, and that the farmer was not receiving his fair share. The President did not discuss specific methods to relieve the situation, but expressed satisfaction at the way the banks were moving to supply money for agriculture. He reiterated his opposition to the soldiers' bonus and said the passage of a bonus bill would postpone tax reduction indefinitely and jeopardize the welfare of the entire country. "A few months of good times would be worth more to the service men themselves than anything they could receive in the way of a bonus," he said.

SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR WORK and Secretary of Agriculture Wallace have asked congress to investigate the right of the Northern Pacific Railway company to acquire approximately 8,000,000 acres of government land in Idaho, Montana and Washington, under the terms of old land grants.

MARY SUCCEEDS ON MAIN STREET

By LAURA MILLER

THE WIDOW'S MIGHT

Three widows in three different towns faced the problem of income. One sought a manager for her husband's business in the hope a living for both her and the manager would result. One found herself the sort of low-paid job a woman past forty can acquire, and is saving painstaking sums to care for her old age. One, past fifty, took over her husband's factory, and in ten years increased the profits three-fold.

No article can give an unflattering recipe for the secret of such success as Mrs. Charles Knox has made of her universally known gelatin business. It can only tell how the Knoxes did it, for he had helped her greatly during his lifetime. Her husband started the little factory at Johnstown, N. Y. Both had struggled to accumulate. What she saved from her household allowance was always hers. If Mr. Knox needed money, he often borrowed from her—at bank rates. When he consulted her about his business affairs he expected a judgment based on reason. He never "fooled her with praise," she says. But he acted on her opinion.

So much for his part. At his death the boys' future depended on her wise action. And she loved her children. Financially she is canny. She found that Mr. Knox's newspaper, a side line, did not pay. Forthwith all checks for the paper were issued from her office until the paper did pay and could be set at a profit. When she built a concrete factory to replace the original wooden one, she planned, not for ostentation and size, but for cleanliness and convenience. It carried on a far larger volume of business with almost the same floor space. When her first contract involved spending $85,000, she learned how to secure the rock-bottom price from the salesman of the other side.

She sets a high standard. Her product, her employees, her son and assistant in the business, even the orchid conservatory at her home—must pay their way by showing clean-cut efficiency.

She likes the sort of simplicity that often accompanies greatness. Her advertising campaigns have illustrated this. Mr. Knox used to go in for stunts. Mrs. Knox has mainly confined herself to "swapping recipes" as from one woman to other women who love the kitchen.

To women entering business she says: "You must have training or ability or both. Use common sense. Utilize your sex, but don't demand favors on account of it. Keep busy thinking of what you can accomplish and you will grow old only half as fast as the woman who worries over what she can't do."

GOTHAM, SHORT-CHANGE ARTIST

Are you more interested in people or things? Would you rather accumulate friends or dollar bills? That is practically the way a successful young woman lawyer puts the question of city vs. town. The town, she is sure, offers more friendships. The city may give you a higher pile of cash—if you succeed above the average. Otherwise the city short-changes you both ways, she believes.

If actions speak louder than words, it is significant that Bessie Newsom, A. B. A. M., LL. B., Phi Beta Kappa (that's the scholarship one, you know), national president of Kappa Alpha Theta (that's a social one that's a little take in only brains plus good looks), moved from Washington to Oklahoma City and Oklahoma City to Hot Springs, Ark.

The moves were dictated by anything but fear of failure. In Washington, Miss Newsom, with all her degrees accumulated before she was twenty-four, became a member of a successful firm and was made an associate member of the legal and advisory war board of the city.

In Oklahoma City, a place on the state Democratic speakers' bureau, an income above the average salary, a practice that brought her "warmth of reception and genuine interest," are a few of the early successes attained.

The story in Hot Springs is, she says, "just beginning to be made." A digest of Arkansas laws is on the program for the near future. Her fellow townswomen describe her as "a woman who has won a place for not only herself, but for other women in public affairs. Though yet in her twenties, she is one of the best-informed citizens of the entire country on topics of the day and national and international affairs. What she is a winsome, womanly girl, and enjoys the good times of her home club as well as the more serious affairs of her public career."

ALABAMA IS ASSURED OF A DRY DELEGATION

COMER-TUNSTALL PACT IS CONCLUSIVE GUARANTEE THAT ALABAMA'S DELEGATION TO THE NATIONAL DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION WILL NOT AFFECT PROHIBITION STATUTES.

Comments from Leading Prohibitionists in All Sections of Alabama Show Overwhelming Endorsement of Agreement Which Definitely Settles Dry Issue in the Present Campaign.

Alabama will send a dry delegation to the National Democratic convention.

That is the opinion of leading prohibitionists in all sections of the state. B. B. Comer and Mr. A. M. Tunstall, Senator Underwood's Alabama campaign manager.

The agreement as set forth in these statements, by which Governor Comer is to name one-half of the Alabama delegation, together with the clear-cut views expressed by Mr. Tunstall, removes the last vestige of doubt as to the make-up of the delegation.

These statements which have finally and completely eliminated prohibition as an issue in the present campaign, follow.

Gov. Comer's Statement.

"To the Citizens of Alabama, both ladies and men, voters alike and all alike responsible that their best efforts should be for the good of the state.

"I am a member of the Underwood campaign committee in his candidacy for President of the United States; was named a member because of my known fondness and admiration for him. I knew Senator Underwood best when serving with him in Washington as junior senator under Governor Kilby's appointment. "He was easily recognized as the best representative the South had, attentive to every duty, watchful of every interest, ready in every debate—the ideal minority leader—and I am sure would make an ideal President. Frequently we have not agreed on policies, but, like me, his convictions are always sincere and regarded as he thought in the interest of the people.

"Dr. Crumpton believes in the integrity of his statements regarding the eighteenth amendment, the Volstead act, and his anti-saloon position. Witnessing, as I frequently did, the sincerity of his conduct, much more than Dr. Crumpton, I am sure of his position on these matters and unhesitatingly endorse his candidacy and would advise the citizens that, so far as Alabama can help, to do it.

"He is antagonized by sundry parties and interests, and if you recall, so was I and yet in every equity of conscience I am the best for every interest of every description that the economy of a next advance, and I am sure so has Senator Underwood. It is unrighteous to expect unlawful partnership for any one class, or to expect that a man's general views should coincide with the general views of everybody else. It is well to consider that after a principle has been thrashed out and becomes a law that it is then incumbent upon every good citizen to accept it as a finished fact, and this is the embodiment of the Underwood principle.

"The Underwood principle, as applied to the prohibition issue, is that the prohibition law is a permanent law and that it is the duty of every citizen to support it. In assuming this position, I am sure that I am in the majority of the people, and I am sure that the preservation of our Constitution and the prohibition law is a duty that every citizen should accept.

"As every variety of propaganda is being spread, a great many distracting things being said and being done, I would suggest to all citizens that in the fulfillment of my electoral duties it is a great honor to even be suggested, much more so to be elected, as President of the United States, and now that Alabama has a citizen whom a great many people out of the state believe worthy how much more so, as his fellow-citizens in our own state should put aside all cavilling as to minor differences and give him universal support."

Mr. Tunstall's Statement.

"Senator Underwood stated that if he were elected President of the United States, he would not support the prohibition amendment. This statement was made in part of the Governors Comer, J. H. Henderson, Kilby, and Governor Brandon, Dr. Crumpton, Judge Denison, and of which I am chairman, would name the delegates to the convention. I have been many times asked to make a statement on this issue, and I think it my duty to publish same.

"Senator Underwood in his address to the Alabama Legislature, July 31, 1923, declared that the eighteenth amendment—called the prohibition amendment—was the supreme law and that he would enforce it in its entire integrity. In his letter to Dr. Crumpton he said: 'The cry that is being made in favor of light wines and beer does not meet with my approval; that he stood for an honest, just and true enforcement of the law of the land, as the prohibition amendment is today.'

"I have discussed this matter with most of the members of Senator Underwood's campaign committee, and an overwhelming majority of the committee are in full accord with the views of Senator Underwood herein expressed, and it is their purpose to support the delegation to the convention in complete accord as to the enforcement of the prohibition law.

"Personally I favor the enforcement of the eighteenth amendment so that it will accomplish the purposes for which it was adopted. I am opposed to light wines and beer, as any modification whatsoever, the taming of the delegation I will endeavor to bring about, and the opinion of gentlemen who entertain the same view, and have asked Governor Comer to name at least half of the delegation, and also to name the member of the platform committee."

(Signed) A. M. TUNSTALL.

The following comments were made by leading prohibitionists over the state following publication of the Comer-Tunstall statements:

T. D. Samford, Opelika: "These statements about the Underwood campaign are good. It is a dry delegation. There is no further doubt on that question. The statement would be very satisfying to all concerned."

Senator H. M. Caffery, Hayneville: "I think the statements here are good. It is a dry delegation. There is no further doubt on that question. The statement would be very satisfying to all concerned."

Judge F. J. Ingram, Ashland: "The latest developments will clear up the situation if anyone has been in doubt. Governor Comer will name a dry bunch of delegates. There is no organized opposition to Senator Underwood here."

Judge E. J. Harrison, Ashland: "The Comer-Tunstall agreement absolutely assures a dry delegation. If any prohibitionist has been in doubt he ought to be satisfied now."

John A. Lusk, Guntersville: "The latest developments here are good. The agreement was dissolved whatever opposition there was to Underwood around here, regard it as a very favorable development, which completely clarifies the situation in my mind, which was in doubt."

Judge E. P. Goodwin, Fayette: "The Comer-Tunstall agreement will have a mighty effect. There is no organized opposition to Underwood here, but the latest development will practically kill the opposition, if there is any."

J. M. May, Elmore: "I have noticed a marked effect among the women over the agreement that Governor Comer will name half the delegation. The two statements of Governor Comer and Colonel Tunstall absolutely clinch a dry delegation to the next Democratic convention."

Forney Powell, Greenville: "The statements of Governor Comer and Colonel Tunstall are having a decided effect. There is no doubt about the situation in my mind, which was in doubt."

High Maltby, Selma: "This should and will mean a dry delegation. I have noticed no interest in this feature, because I know Senator Underwood meant what he said. If there are any who have attached interest to the question of the dryness of the Alabama delegation, the statements here are a relief."

W. R. Dorich, Gadsden: "I think the reaction to the Tunstall-Comer statements and the agreement to Governor Comer name half of the delegation has been a distinctly favorable nature in my section."

A. H. Carmichael, Tusculum: "I thoroughly approve of the statements, if there was ever a doubt about the situation it has been removed. All prohibitionists should now loyally get behind Senator Underwood for the presidential nomination."

T. J. J. Isale, Grove Hill: "The agreement is a great consummation. It clears away doubt about the Alabama delegation so far as prohibition is concerned. The probable stand of the Alabama delegation on the question of prohibition is no longer doubtful."

Rev. J. T. Beale, Northport: "I like the agreement. I am pleased because Governor Comer will protect the interests of prohibitionists. I am satisfied with the announcement will remove the last objection that any prohibitionist could have to Senator Underwood."

Rev. J. C. McLeod, Opp: "The statements ought to and will clarify the situation relative to prohibition in the Alabama presidential campaign. There should now be no opposition by any prohibitionist to Senator Underwood."

S. A. Lynne, Decatur: "It is a good move. The fact that former Governor Comer is an original prohibitionist and had the first laws put on the statute books during his term as governor makes it an in-hound fact that the Alabama delegation will be dry."

Dr. Henry J. Williamson, Florence: "The agreement is a most excellent one which leaves no further excuse to any fair-minded prohibitionist not to support Senator Underwood. The Alabama senator will enforce the prohibition law if elected President."

M. Bonner, Camden: "The agreement will satisfy everybody who is reasonable. I endorse it most heartily."

Senator R. H. Powell, Tuskegee: "The whole thing is fine. With fighting prohibitionists like B. B. Comer, Dr. W. B. Crumpton and Rev. H. McNeill in accord, no prohibitionist can offer any objection. It ought to and probably will end all opposition, if any exists in prohibition ranks to Senator Underwood for the presidency."

Dr. J. M. Dannelly, Prattville: "I agree with the statements here. There is nothing left to cavil over. Every Alabamian knows Governor Comer will name men who stand for prohibition and its enforcement."

IMPROVEMENT ORDINANCE No. 2.

An Ordinance to provide for certain improvements on Second Avenue North from the East property line of Sixth Street to the East property line of First Street and on First Street from the South property line of Second Avenue North to the North property line of Second Avenue South.

Be it ordained by the Town Council of the Town of Clanton, Alabama, as follows:

Section 1. That Second Avenue North from the East property line of Sixth Street to the East property line of First Street, and First Street from the South property line of Second Avenue North to the North property line of Second Avenue South, shall be graded.

That the North and South sides of a fifty foot roadway on Second Avenue North from the East property line of Sixth Street to the West property line of Fifth Street, the North and South sides of a forty five foot roadway on Second Avenue North from the East property line of Fifth Street to the West property line of First Street, and the East and West sides of a thirty six foot roadway on First Street from the South property line of Second Avenue North to the North property line of Second Avenue South be curbed with Portland cement concrete combined curb and gutter, the curb and gutter to be six inches thick and the gutter thirty inches wide.

That the side walks on each side of Second Avenue North from the East property line of Sixth Street to the West property line of First Street, and First Street from the South property line of Second Avenue North to the North property line of Second Avenue South, shall be paved with Portland cement sidewalk paving for a width of five feet.

That vitrified clay drainage pipes, inlets of brick, laid in cement mortar with cast iron covers shall be constructed where necessary along said street and avenue.

That alley crossings shall be paved with Portland cement concrete paving eight inches thick.

Section 2. That said improvements shall be made in accordance with the established grades on file in the offices of said Street and Avenue, and according to full details, drawings, plans, specifications and surveys of said work, and estimates of said work which shall be prepared by the City Engineer, as early as practical, and placed by him on file in the office of the Town Clerk at Clanton, at least two weeks prior to the date hereinafter fixed for hearing, objections, remonstrances or protests before the Town Council where property owners who may be affected by said improvements, may see and examine the same.

Section 3. That the cost of constructing said improvements shall be assessed against the property abutting on the portions of the Highway

(a) That the cost of improvements at or upon street, avenue, intersection shall be assessed against the lots or parcels of land abutting on said highway so intersecting for one half block in each direction.

(b) That the cost of said sidewalk or alley paving at the intersection of any alley with said street or avenue, where said improvements are made shall be assessed in fair proportion against the respective lots or parcels of land abutting or cornering on the alley at such intersection.

(c) That the cost of laying drainage pipe and constructing inlets shall be assessed against all lots or parcels of land abutting on the portion of the highway so improved and drained by said drainage pipe and inlets.

(d) That no assessment shall exceed the cost of such improvements, or the increased value of such property by reason of the special benefits derived from such improvements.

Section 4. That the property owners along said Street or Avenue shall be required to see their water pipes are placed at least eighteen inches below the grade of the Street or avenue and should any property owner fail or refuse, upon demand to comply with this section then the contractor in charge of said work shall lower or relay said lines, and the cost of such work be charged to the property owner and included in the assessment against such property owners, and collected as such as provided for in Section 5.

Section 5. That the cost of said improvement is $12,500.00, and that the Council of the Town of Clanton, will meet on the 3rd day of March, 1924, in the Council Chamber of the Town Office of Clanton, at 10 o'clock a. m. to hear any objections, remonstrances or protests that may be made against said improvements, the manner of making the same or the character of material to be used.

Read, approved, and adopted, this the 13th day of February, 1924.

NO BUMPER COTTON CROP THIS YEAR: FARMERS MUST DESTROY THAT SUSPICION

It would not be surprising if the rather unexpected and precipitate decline in cotton prices were not followed by other declines, occurring periodically between now and planting time in the eastern cotton belt. Doubtless there will be recoveries from time to time. But it would be altogether natural if the bears made the most of the present inactivity in the cotton goods trade by selling the future months consistently on rather a big scale. They will "scalp her down" in stead of "up" as they say around the exchanges.

There is reason enough. Between the first of January and the time the government begins to issue condition reports and estimates of the probable yield, based on the acreage planted, is usually a period of stagnation. The professionals assume that since the Southern farmers got a pretty good price for their staple during the last year, they will likely put a few acres here and there to cotton, taking ing chance on its "making" as against the possibility of its being eaten in the boll by the worm or weevil.

Now again it is up to the farmer. To the degree that he increases his acreage to cotton, he will encourage the professional trader to sell the market, and he will encourage the spinner to believe that the South will make a bigger crop than last year. It is up to the man who plants the cotton. He is the haker of his economical destiny during 1924.

This of course is old stuff. It is a dream. And all that. Repeated year after year. But it is sound gospel. Nobody can plant additional acreage this year without having the fact reflected in the government bulletins.

Plant conservatively. Plant only that which can be cultivated intelligently and intensively.

The world needs cotton. The world might be willing to absorb even as much as eleven million bales an year at 15 or 20 cents the pound. But ten millions at 30 cents or 35 cents will bring more money to the men who plant and hoe and market the stuff. They are the people! The News is thinking about this between-season time when the powers that can influence the trend of the market seem to be getting ready to boot the king downstairs.

The Southern producers mustn't let them do it. The suspicion that the farmers are about to raise a bumper crop must be destroyed. The farmer to plant with reason and judgment.—Birmingham News.

2,500,000 Dollars

FOR YOUR SAFETY

In order to increase the safety to the millions of passengers who move about the country each year, the Louisville & Nashville Railroad is expending millions of dollars in equipping its passenger trains with automatic block signal system.

These signals protect head-on and rear-end collisions, open switches, broken rails, or cars on the siding standing too close to the main track. In addition to the safety features, these signals expedite traffic and enable trains to be run more nearly on time.

Beginning in 1912, the L. & N. now has completed and under construction and contracted for 1,089 miles of such signals; at a cost of $2,500,000.00, or $2,350,000.00 per mile. The Company spends $220,000.00 every year to keep these signals in good working order.

Constant watchfulness and care on the part of the L. & N. organization coupled with the Management's policy of providing proved safety devices, has resulted in the L. & N. having an enviable record for safety to passengers.

New Year Greeting

The good old year of 1923 has become now a memory of the past. With all of its joys and sorrows it is buried and, as the days go by, it will become merely a misty dream.

We have all had to face some trials and sorrows, but in the main, it was a kind and gracious year to us all. In bidding it good bye, I wish to express my sincere thanks to the many friends and customers who have loyally stood by me with their friendship and patronage and have enabled me to wind up the old year with a feeling of satisfaction with my success and with a steadfast hope for the future.

I wish for you one and all, the successful culmination of your brightest hopes for the New Year. May good health, happiness and prosperity attend you through the days to come. May 1924 have for all of us happy surprises and untold blessings.

I am deeply grateful to every one who has favored me with their patronage during the year just gone and most respectfully ask that you will continue to give me the opportunity to deserve your confidence and trade.

Your friend,

G. C. Armstrong

HON. LAMAR JEFFERS SPEAKS

Mastery Effort on the Floor of Congress to Reduce and Equalize Taxation

Our distinguished young Representative, Hon. Lamar Jeffers, delivered one of the ablest speeches of the entire session on the subject of taxation in the lower house on February 16.

We wish that space would permit us to print it in full but as a defense of, and plea for, the smaller business man and the farmer it has not been equalled in this congress.

He scored the nuisance tax system of the smaller, though all important, articles of trade used by the every day consumer.

He literally dissected the Mellon bill and showed up its fallacies and weakness from start to finish. He clearly demonstrated wherein it was calculated to take special care of the capitalist and bear down with cruelty upon the consumer.

He displayed a wonderful knowledge of our intricate system of taxation and the innumerable items that bear only upon the consumer and allow the multimillionaire to go free while he amasses more dollars from the international financing of this one sided system of taxation.

His speech is replete with facts and figures that are unanswerable and which no opposition can cover up nor evade. He endorsed the minority report of the Ways and Means committee and showed, by direct comparison, the wonderful improvement it was over the Mellon proposal.

Owing to such clear and forcible arguments as his the House has been going forward, almost daily in voting amendments to the Mellon proposition and accepting the ideas as set forth by Mr. Jeffers.

We wait him our hearty congratulations and assure him that his constituents down home are keeping tab on his progress and rejoicing at the great he is doing for us all.

GONE TO CHICAGO.

Dr. Arthur Johnson, left for Chicago Monday where he goes to take a post graduate course in the treatment of eye nose and throat.

He makes it a rule every year to go off for a course so he will always be right up with the very latest discoveries in surgery and medicine for all of these maladies.

He has an extensive patronage here and is always determined to give them the very best their is in the way of treatment.

BASKET BALL GAME

The Chilton III five locked up in a battle with the Thorsby Institute five on last Thursday.

This was a hard fought game all the way through, the Thorsby Institute winning the game by a score of 18 to 9. Chilton III has a well coached team, under the supervision of Prof. Peterson and he is indeed a good man for the job. These boys play good ball, but just couldn't get together last Thursday, and consequently they lost the game.

Tom Jones, of Montgomery, was here Sunday.

WHAT ABOUT CLANTON

In another column this week we are printing an editorial from the Birmingham News commenting on the results of a recent raid, made by citizens, on the road houses along the line of the B. & M. highway in Jefferson county.

Those conditions are awful and almost unbelievable to us older people who grew up under a different social system from which we operate now. They would have been impossible a few years ago.

Parents would not have permitted their daughters to be out alone with young men at night, neither would the young girls and ladies of those days have made these indecent trips, even if no one opposed them, because in society they would have lost utterly their standing and would not have been permitted to associate further with the decent and respectable class, but would have been immediately ostracized by their friends and left to suffer the costs.

We differ with the News in fastening much of the blame on the parents these days. Parental authority has become "unfashionable" in these modern days. The parents who undertake to exercise their rightful authority soon become objects of censure by all of their neighbors. They are openly accused of being cruel to their children, trying to raise them up in ignorance and so on. The cold sober fact of the matter is that many parental heads are turning gray and many parental footsteps hurrying to an untimely grave because they are tossing on their pillows at night and grieving over that boy or girl who is out till the small hours "somewhere" and they know they are traveling the road to ruin, here and hereafter and are powerless to stop them because "society" demands their freedom and "young people" must have a "good time." Say father, mother, can you control the conduct of your boy or girl short of an appeal to the law?

But here is what we started in to say. Away last fall the good people who live out along the B. & M. highway in Jefferson county began to appeal to the officers of the law to stop that awful campaign of lascivious crime and vulgarity that was being pulled off nightly at these hell holes. They failed utterly to get anything done by the law. Then, the other night a party of them took the matter in their own hands and raided these dens of blackest vice and, we suppose, the twenty young Birmingham girls they captured, some of them only 12 years of age, all of them more or less drunk and some of them routed out of bed rooms with their escort and most of them partly undressed, is sufficient evidence to justify the raid and also demonstrates the fact that the law will not protect female innocence and that "mob law" can be a glorious and a gracious blessing at times.

Lets come home now and see how we are living. At almost any hour of the night cars, with curtains up dash along our streets. We have been told by the night police force often that these late moving cars are generally boy and girl "joy riders." We have been told by people who live out in the country, some very disgraceful things that they have seen and heard, in secluded spots and woodland groves.

TO THE SPORTSMEN OF CHILTON COUNTY

Those who have considered the annual rabbit hunt of Chilton county a joke, would have changed their minds if they had had an occasion to have driven out the lock 12 road about 8 miles from Clanton last Friday about 12 o'clock and found in the neighborhood of Uncle Jack Vine's parked there 21 cars and 1 truck that had been driven there to carry the members of The Chilton County Hunters Association to and from the hunting grounds.

There were about 30 dogs and 94 men and boys, which together caught and killed 40 rabbits. About 3:30 or 4:00 o'clock in the afternoon the men, boys and dogs began gathering around the cars for the purpose of returning home, practically every man and boy expressed himself of having enjoyed a day of good clean sport and hoped to live to see another day of just such sport on February 22 1925.

During the day, there was a very funny thing happened, there was an old brindled cow that jumped 10 rabbits, should any one doubt the truthfulness of this statement, I refer you to Mr. G. O. Foshee and Uncle Jimmy Broadhead.

The following is a list of those who participated in the hunt

Floyd Gore, Robert Davis, Sam Pate, Joe Maddox, John M. Robinson, Percy M. Pitts, J. D. Cox, J. D. Collins, Phillip Headley, Geo. Davis, Cyrus Moody, Clarence Popwell, Earl Martin, Henry Gore, G. O. Foshee, J. D. Deloach, Jesse Connell, Tom Wyatt, Zed Robinson, Joe Moore, Tom Rockett, Tom Johnston, Jody Lansford, J. M. Wyatt, J. N. WRITE AGAIN

By some unfortunate chance a communication written us by Mr. I. W. Bice got lost off the copy book and a most diligent search failed to find it.

We regret this very much as Mr. Bice is a valued friend of ours and we hope he will forgive our bad luck and write us again right away.

MRS JEFF JONES VERY LOW

The wife of Mr. Jeff Jones who was for long years a well known saw mill man of our town, but who is now located at Grady, Alabama is reported to be very low at this time.

Mrs. Jones has many good friends here and a number of relatives. Her daughter, Mrs. Homer Bruce, left last Friday to go to her bedside.

We sincerely hope that Mrs. Jones is, ere this, much improved and on the way to a rapid permanent recovery.

that they connected directly with these "joy riders."

Does your girl go out riding with her "Sweet Papa" after nightfall? Do you ever know where she is and what she is doing when she is out until midnight or after? If she don't leave your home ostensibly to go out for "joy ride," do you have any idea what she does after she leaves home? Do you know all of the boys she associates with? Are you not absolutely ignorant of all her actions after she steps out at night "just to call on her girl friend?" And can you force her to stay at home where she belongs at night, without soon being pointed out as an "old fool" or an antiquated and old fashioned fossil?

If you want to save your girl for a real high class christian womanhood, you will have to keep her absolutely away from lonely night rides and "joy riders." That is the only way.

GEORGE WASHINGTON MUSICAL

A Large Audience Greeted the Production at the High School Last Friday Night.

The ladies of the Baptist church who arranged the Washington Musical at the High School auditorium last Friday night, merit the thanks and congratulations of the large audience that turned out to the performance.

The conception of the entertainment was excellent and the especially delightful manner in which it was offered deserves unstinted praise.

We have nothing but words of commendation from those who were so fortunate as to be on hand.

Every feature was carried off beautifully and each participant seemed happily payable and just suited to the point. All of the active entertainers did so especially well that it would be an invidious effort to attempt to personally express our appreciation.

We learn that from a finance standpoint, the entertainment was also a good success. The ladies were devoting their time and labor to raising funds for the Baptist church.

The News offers its warmest congratulations to these splendid ladies who are working so faithfully in a good cause.

STOP THEM NOW

Word has come to us in the last day or so that there are a few houses located in reach of Clanton that are conducting a similar traffic to those notorious road houses on the highway in Jefferson county.

Clanton has young people, like those in Birmingham, who are accused of visiting these resorts occasionally, ostensibly to dance, but in reality drink liquor and have a "good time."

These places must cease business. Our officers will not permit them to operate in this section. This is fair warning to those who conduct them as well as those who attend them, so cut it out NOW or you will regret it.

GIVE US A WINNER

A movement is said to be on foot now to organize a Clanton base ball team early in the season.

Base-ball is the best and most interesting game that we have and, besides, is our national game, and we are indeed glad to learn that steps are being taken to give us a team this season.

Boys, begin early and practice consistently. Learn a system of team work and support. Give us a team that is a winner, and, above all things beat Tallassee three straights.

FARMERS MEETING

Special attention is called to the notice in this paper of the meeting to be held in Clanton Saturday March 1st. We want all farmers at this meeting for the benefit of the county.

NOTICE

The "Just Right" Barber shop desires to say to its patrons that, on and after next Saturday, March 1, we will be compelled to advance our rates for work as follows.

Hair Cut 35 cents
Shave 20 cents

We have operated at the cheaper figures for a year now and we find, that owing to the high cost of rent lights, water and coal it is impossible for us to continue those prices and make a living.

As you know, we have the experience and the equipment necessary to give you first class work and we solicit your continued patronage, for which we desire to sincerely thank you.

Just Right Barber Shop.

A PECULIAR GRATITUDE

A young negro man named Jess Spigener has been driving a delivery truck for Mr. C. Fenn Jones, the proprietor of the extensive Jones Hardware Company, for quite a good while.

Mr. Jones has been especially kind to this negro in various ways. For instance, last fall the negro was stricken down with typhoid fever and became very low. Mr. Jones had him transferred from his home to the hospital and arranged for him to be given the very best possible attention and service that could be dispensed at that splendid institution.

After a long and tedious fight, the doctors won out and the negro recovered. During all of these long weeks Mr. Jones looked after him and not only that, he held his job open for him until he was able to go back to work.

Now comes the sequel to this pleasant story of humane kindness.

For some time articles of merchandise have been missed, now and then, from that mammoth establishment. Mr. Jones did not feel like he could suspect this negro who owed him such a large debt of gratitude, but last Saturday a trap was set to try him out and he fell on the first go round.

In the second story of the building, at the rear, is a window that can be reached by a ladder from the ground. This window is always locked at night and this negro usually attended to locking it.

Last Saturday some of the white clerks locked it and then quietly watched the negro. They saw him go up stairs just before they closed up. After they closed and all of them apparently went home, they slipped back upstairs and found the window had been unlocked.

Two of the clerks then remained concealed upstairs while Mr. Jones and Mr. Hart went to supper. Before they could get supper and return the negro climbed up the ladder and entered. The two young men up there, Mr. Jones and Mr. Danforth, held him up and had him caught in the act.

Officers were called and the negro promptly jailed to wait the action of the court. He confessed his guilt.

Gratitude like that reminds one of a mule. How that negro could bring himself to rob a benefactor like Mr. Jones is past human comprehension.

CUTTING AFFRAY

A few days ago two young men who live up in the north eastern part of the county fell out, while under the influence of liquor and one of them very seriously cut the other with a knife.

The wounded man is named Grady Samson and is still in the hospital. He was cut to the hollow by a gash in his side, though the doctors say they do not think any of his intestines were injured.

The young man who did the cutting is named Fate Ellison.

Dr. McNeal was called in and had the wounded man sent to the hospital here where Dr. Hays was called in to attend him.

The last report from the hospital was that the patient was doing as well as could be expected.

FARMERS MEETING SATURDAY

Every farmer in the County Urged to be Present. Spright Dowell Boyd and Binford To Speak.

On next Saturday, March 1, there will be a county wide meeting of the farmers at the Court House that promises to be one of the most important occasions we have had here in a long time.

Hon Spright Dowell, President of the Auburn College, will be on hand and will deliver one of his masterly addresses along educational lines and go especially in to the agricultural aims of that splendid state institution of learning.

You will all miss an opportunity of listening to an instructive and high class address who fail to be present and avail yourself of the opportunity of hearing this able man and educator.

Mr. Boyd, the State Fertilizer and Farm Crop man, will also be present and give you the benefit of his vast experience and classical knowledge of fertilizer and farm work.

He is a man of national reputation and is devoting the very best energies of his life to an effort to aid the farmer and to instruct him along the lines of fertilization and how to get the most out of the use of the fertilizer bought for various uses and crops.

Every farmer of the county should be present and take advantage of this chance to learn something more about this most essential and necessary branch of agricultural life.

Mr. E. E. Binford, District Agent, has been instrumental in arranging this splendid meeting and he will also be on hand prepared to discuss any question or questions that are confront the farmers at this time.

Let us urge you all to arrange to be on hand. It is to your interest and for your benefit. Such splendid opportunities do not present themselves often and we can not afford to miss take advantage of them.

WADESONIAN

The popular movie theatre, the Wadeonian, will move this week into the handsome new quarters fitted up for it by Mr. Wade over on west second avenue.

It is also stated that in the near future that wonderful and worthwhile screen masterpiece, "The Birth of a Nation," will be put on at this show house for a probable two day run.

We hope this promise will come true, for we are anxious to witness this show again ourself and especially advise every one who possibly can arrange to do so to see it. It teaches a true Southern lesson.

BIDS ADVERTISED FOR

The State Highway Commission has advertised for bids to construct 17 miles of Federal aid B. & M. Highway in Chilton county.

This will be let March 31, and runs from the Shelby county line to 2 miles above Lomax.

Messers W. J. Benton, J. W. Howard, and J. S. Hubbard of Verbena, were Clanton visitors recently.

Plain Dumplings by an Imperial Decree

Unhappy Austria has too recently emerged from the dread shadow of famine for any Austrian not utterly callous or frivolous to regard wholesome food of any kind with contempt. But it was not always so. Nearly a hundred years ago when tourists from America were rare—so we learn from the "Reminiscences of an Idler"—an American visiting Vienna found everyone laughing at the latest whim of the Emperor Ferdinand, who was an amiable and talkative monarch, deeply interested in petty and personal matters and not in the least interested in large and national affairs.

Heading not long before in the Styrian mountains, Ferdinand and his attendants were overtaken by a violent thunderstorm and found refuge in the nearest farm house, the occupants of which were about to dine. The good-natured emperor ordered them to proceed with their meal, and presently, sniffing the savory odor of a smoking dish of dumplings that the housewife had just set upon the table, he announced that he should like to taste one. They were made of coarse flour dropped in a vegetable broth, but they were well-flavored, hot and feathery light; and when the proud farmer's wife served him he not only ate his first dumpling with gusto but passed his plate for another and yet another. In fact, his equerries and courtiers had never seen him display such an appetite. That was all very well as part of a passing adventure, but when, on returning to the palace, he ordered the cooks to produce the same sort of dumplings daily as a regular part of the imperial dinner, there was widespread dismay. The empress was mortified; the courtiers were shocked; the cooks were indignant; the grand chamberlain remonstrated, and the court physician was induced to declare that dumplings were ruinous to any except peasant digestions and must be given up. But to the general astonishment the emperor, who usually was docile and easy-going, absolutely refused to surrender his new fancy. He grew angry—furious—apoplectic—imperial! He brought down his fist with a bang and cried:

"Emperor I am, and dumplings I will have!"

Naturally he had his dumplings. But the phrase became a common by-word. Any one who insisted upon a silly whim of any kind was sure to hear some one quote mockingly for his benefit, "Emperor I am, and dumplings I will have!"

Ferdinand was not the only emperor who was partial to piebald foods; Napoleon I delighted in onion soup, and Napoleon II many times drove his chef to the verge of resigning his position by demanding that boiled cabbage be served with partridge. The French emperors, however, concerned themselves with many other matters quite outside the range of palace and kitchen. It might have been as well for the world if they had stuck to dumplings.—Youth's Companion.

Ferdinand was not the only emperor who was partial to piebald foods; Napoleon I delighted in onion soup, and Napoleon II many times drove his chef to the verge of resigning his position by demanding that boiled cabbage be served with partridge. The French emperors, however, concerned themselves with many other matters quite outside the range of palace and kitchen. It might have been as well for the world if they had stuck to dumplings.—Youth's Companion.

The Old Savannah. The Savannah was the first steamer to cross the Atlantic. On May 24, 1819, she left Savannah for Liverpool, which port was reached in 27 days; 80 hours of which time she was operated by steam power. The vessel was first constructed as a sailing packet, but an auxiliary engine and boiler with paddle-wheels were fitted before she was placed in service.

Language of Plaids. In Scotland plaids are worn for purposes of identification, signifying also the wearer's occupation, revealing whether he or she is engaged at the time in business, war or pleasure. Some of the "plaids" now being worn here make a real Scotchman wonder if his boyhood study of clan insignia wasn't wasted.

Elemental Spirits. Elemental spirits were beings who, according to popular belief in the Middle Ages, presided over the four elements, living in and ruling them. The elemental spirits of fire were called salamanders, those of water, undines; those of air, sylphs, and those of earth, gnomes.

Need Sleep for Memory. Insufficient sleep causes impairment of memory, according to recent researches on the subject of sleep by Professors Engelen, Ferichs and Weygand of Berlin, Germany. The memory becomes unreliable even if the shortage of sleep has occurred for only a short time. Eight hours is the average needed for sleep, but brain workers sometimes require more. A reduced period of slumber may be partly made up for by increased intensity, a short period of deep, undisturbed sleep having the same effect as a longer and lighter one.

The investigators also conclude that brain workers need a month of rest every year and that even longer vacations do not cause a lessening of acquired abilities, but rather an intensification of them.—Kansas City Star.

World's First Clock. In 1309 the first clock known to the world was placed in the tower of San Eustorgio, in Milan. In 1344 a clock was installed in the palaces of the nobles at Padua. This was a wonder of mechanism indeed, for, besides indicating the hours, it showed the course of the sun, the revolutions of the planets, the various phases of the moon, the months and the fates of the year.

In 1420 an alarm clock made its appearance. The chronicle has placed on record that this clock sounded a bell at a stated hour, and at the same time a little wax candle was lighted automatically. How this was done we are not told, but it must not be overlooked that until about a hundred years ago we had no means of obtaining light other than the tinder box.—Detroit News.

THICK SOUP MAY BE MAIN WINTER DISH

Department of Agriculture Tells How to Make It.

Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture. The French would call it a "potage," and make a soup of it; the Scotch would use barley rather than the other starchy vegetables mentioned, and all it "cockleleekle," the Armenians would double select rice for the chief flouting element; while the Italians would choose spaghetti and several other vegetables and have "mine-trone" soup. The United States Department of Agriculture tells how to make it in an American way.

Thick soup, which may be served as the main dish at luncheon or supper, may be prepared from the neck, shanks and other bony parts of the carcass.

Place meat and bones together in a kettle, using water sufficient to cover. Season with salt and two or three cloves and peppercorns. Let simmer until the meat can be easily separated from the bones, then pour through a colander. Set the strained broth aside to cool in order that the fat may be removed easily. Carefully fry the meat from the bones and chop it fine. After removing the excess fat from the broth return the latter to the kettle and add any desired combination of chopped carrots, onion, celery turnips, and potatoes which have been previously cooked together either in a little water or in a steam-jacket.

Preparing Soup for Winter Day.

er above the soup kettle; also previously cooked rice, barley, macaroni, or spaghetti may be added if desired. Reheat the soup, add the chopped meat, and serve hot. If dumplings are liked, these may be cooked in the soup just before the meat is added. After the dumplings are done, add the meat. It has already been cooked and will not be improved by further cooking.

Dough prepared as for baking-powder biscuit may be rolled out about half an inch thick, cut with a small cutter, and cooked for ten minutes on the top of the boiling soup. The kettle should be kept covered during the entire time of cooking the dumplings.

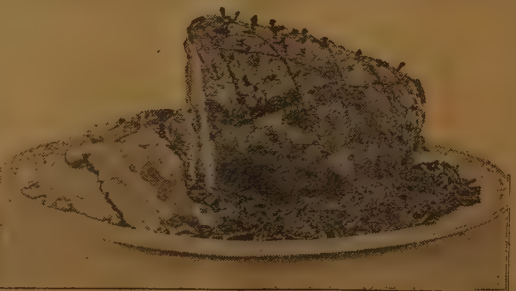

Salad Dressing Recipe

Where Oil Is Disliked. A good salad dressing for those who do not like oil can be made from sour cream, according to the following recipe furnished by the United States Department of Agriculture.

1/2 teaspoonful mustard	1/2 tablespoonful sugar
1/2 teaspoonful salt	1 egg
1/2 teaspoonful paprika	1 cupful vinegar
	1 cupful sour cream

Beat the egg until very light, add the other ingredients, and cook in a double boiler, stirring constantly until thickened. Remove from the fire and beat well. If this dressing is cooked properly, it will have, when cool, a thick, smooth consistency. If it is overcooked, so that there is a tendency to separate, it should be strained before cooling.

NOTHING MORE DELICIOUS THAN HAM

Ham is Always Appetizing.

Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture. To bring out the best flavor in an old ham the United States Department of Agriculture says to soak it several hours, thoroughly remove all mold and loose pieces, and rinse well. Cover with cold water, add two tablespoonfuls of vinegar, one-half cupful of brown sugar, four cloves and one bay leaf, and heat to boiling. (The amount of cloves and bay leaf may be increased if desired, especially for larger hams.)

Reduce the heat to a constant simmer and allow to cook at this temperature at the rate of 20 minutes for each pound weight, or until tender. Remove from the fire, but keep the ham in the liquor in which it was cooked, until cold; then remove from the container and allow to drain. Take off the skin, score the fat in inch blocks, and cover with a coating of brown sugar and crumbs. Stick with cloves 1 inch apart.

Bake in a slow oven until nicely browned, basting at intervals with one-half cupful of water and one tablespoonful of vinegar. A ham should always be well cooked before it is eaten.

KEEP EGGS PROPERLY IN GOOD CONTAINERS

Keeping Quality Affected in Various Ways.

Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture. As soon as eggs are brought from the poultry yard or the market, they should be sorted, and any cracked or soiled ones removed for immediate use, advises the United States Department of Agriculture in a new Farmers' Bulletin, 1374, entitled "Care of Food in the Home."

The keeping quality of eggs is seriously affected by rough handling, changes in temperature, dampness, dirt on the shells, unclean surroundings, and fertility. Fertile eggs tend to spoil more quickly than those that are infertile, for even room temperature (70 degrees F.) aids the development of the embryo in a fertile egg. Eggs, therefore, are best kept in a covered container in a dry, clean place where the temperature is not above 60 degrees F. All eggs should be washed, but not until just before using, because water removes the protective film on the shell that hinders evaporation, the entrance of bacteria, and the absorption of odors. Preserving eggs for home use in water glass (potassium or sodium silicate) or in lime solution is a good way to care for any surplus when eggs are plentiful. The department will supply information as to how to do this by either method. Fresh, clean, unwashed, infertile eggs should be used for this purpose, and they should not be left in the preservative for more than a year. Eggs preserved in water glass or other solution should be rinsed with water and wiped dry before being opened, but eggs should not be washed before being put into the preservative. If such eggs are cooked in the shell, a small hole should be pricked in the large end before putting them into the hot water; otherwise the shell is likely to crack, for the pores have been sealed by the preserving solution.

Comfort of Bed Depends on Making It Properly

Do you know how to make a bed so that it looks neat and is comfortable to sleep in? It is an art worth learning, says the United States Department of Agriculture. First, straighten the mattress pad so that it lies smooth and without wrinkles. Over this, spread the under sheet, right side up, with the wide hem at the head and the center of the sheet to the center of the bed. The comfort of a bed depends in a large measure on tucking in the under sheet so securely that it remains smooth and straight. Making mitered corners is one of the best ways of doing this, and any person who has had nurses training can quickly show you how to make them. Next, put on the upper sheet, right side down and allowing for a generous turnover at the head tuck it in at the foot, using mitered corners. Then, put on the blankets so that their top edge comes about nine inches below the head of the bed, turn the upper sheet back and tuck in all edges. Last of all, put on the spread draw it smooth and straight, and arrange the pillows.

Good Prune Relish for Roast Mutton or Lamb

Fruit relishes, especially those which are spiced or slightly tart, are excellent with roast mutton or lamb, and also very palatable when cold sliced meat is served. Equal parts of raisins and prunes may be used in the recipe below if preferred. The recipe is recommended by the United States Department of Agriculture.

Boil together one cupful of prunes cut in small pieces, one and one-half cupfuls of water, three tablespoonfuls of sugar, one-eighth teaspoonful of salt and one-half teaspoonful of ground cinnamon until the prunes are soft, then add two tablespoonfuls of currant jelly and the juice of one-fourth lemon while still hot. Let stand until cold.

Cause of Losses to Pea Cannery

Seed of Right Variety Is One of Most Important Considerations.

Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.

One of the most important considerations in the commercial growing of peas for canning is seed of the right variety, as a few plants of the wrong kind may ruin the entire pack, says the United States Department of Agriculture. The Alaska variety, which is the basis of a very large percentage of the acreage used for canning purposes, must be kept reasonably pure if the crop is to be grown at a profit, and no matter how good the seed is otherwise, if there is a small percentage of peas known as Bangallias, the crop will be undesirable for canning because of the discoloration produced by this variety.

Test Samples of Seed.

During the past two years the department has collected samples of seed of canning peas on the open market and grown them side by side in trial grounds; some surprising facts regarding the quality of the seed have been brought out. In 1923 the growing tests of Alaska peas comprised 219 samples, and of these 11 proved to be true to name with no off-type plants. Sixteen samples were off-type only in the slightly greater length of vine, while the production and character of the pods would admit them for canning purposes; 87 samples showed less than 10 plants per rod of row of off-type peas and vines. Of the remainder there were 51 samples which showed from 10 to 25 plants per rod having long vines not characteristic of the Alaska variety. The samples which had more than 25 plants per rod of long vines numbered 39, while 95 samples were either not Alaska or were so-called "wild Alaskas" or field peas. Of all the 219 samples, 4.8 per cent were high-grade Alaskas, 7.4 per cent showed only off-type vines, and 31.1 per cent had less than 10 plants per rod of off-type in character. Of these samples, 94 could be used for canning purposes, but 125 were such decided departures that they could not be successfully handled in commercial plantings.

Results of 1923 Tests.

The results of the tests in 1923 paralleled those of 1922 and it is believed these tests give a good index of the character of the seed being offered to the trade by many seedsmen. The requirements of the commercial growers are very much more exacting than those of the market gardener or home gardener. The planting of extensive acreages of spurious or off-type Alaska peas has resulted in great losses in the eastern part of the canning area. In some cases the pack has been absolutely ruined by the presence of a small percentage of Bangallias, which discolor the liquid in the cans.

The only insurance against such losses is high-grade seed true to varietal type.

Eradication of Cattle Tuberculosis Costs Less

In the eradication of cattle tuberculosis it is now possible to get better use out of the money expended than ever before, according to the experience of the veterinarians carrying on the campaign for the United States Department of Agriculture. During the past year the average cost per head of testing cattle under government supervision was 35 cents, a reduction of 11 cents from the figure of the preceding year. This reduction, which was brought about largely through the spread of the area testing plan, makes it possible to advance much more rapidly with the eradication work. Most of the areas in which all of the cattle have been tested at one time are counties, and counties free of cattle tuberculosis may now be found in nearly all parts of the country from the Atlantic to the Pacific to the Gulf. Every one of the four corners of the country has at least one free county or one in which a campaign is now being carried on. Up near the extremity of Maine is Piscataquis county; in southwestern Arizona is Maricopa county; Island county, Wash., is free; and work is just starting to make the final clean-up in Idaho county, Fla.

Planted in Spring Hairy Vetch Acts as Biennial

Winter vetch is a name sometimes applied by American seedsmen to hairy vetch. The term winter vetch, however, should not be applied to hairy vetch, as it is properly applied to the winter strains of common vetch.

If planted in the spring hairy vetch acts as a biennial and does not mature seed the first season. If the crop is to be kept on the land two seasons spring seeding is advised in the northern states. From 20 to 25 pounds to the acre is a heavy seeding. As a rule only 3 to 5 bushels of seed to the acre are secured, though occasionally yields as high as 10 to 11 bushels have been reported.

Hogging Down Soy Beans

In recent years there has been quite an increase in the acreage of soy beans for hay, for seed, and for hogging down purposes. It is grown much more extensively for hogging down purposes than for hay or grain, but its popularity as a hay plant is increasing as farmers become better acquainted with it.

Growers Like Oiled Wrapper for Apples

Use Is Suggested as Result of Thorough Trials.

Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.

The use of oiled paper wrappers for preventing apple scald is finding increased favor among growers, particularly in the Northwest, says the United States Department of Agriculture. Approximately 15,000,000 boxes of apples were wrapped for storage last fall, whereas in 1922 there were about 800,000 boxes so treated. The practice of using oiled paper for wrapping is suggested by the department as a result of a number of years of trials with various methods for preventing the appearance of the discoloration in storage apples and apples in transit, which annually causes great loss to dealers, buyers and shippers, and ultimate disappointment to consumers.

Where in the past it has been customary to wrap the apples in ordinary paper, as is done with the western crop, the use of oiled paper does not entail any additional effort or trouble, and adds but two cents to the cost of each box. Apples wrapped in oiled paper of the proper kind come through the winter in excellent condition and have been received with special favor on the market, especially during the latter part of the season. In May, 1923, oiled wrapper apples were selling on the New York auction for $1 more per box than similar apples in unoled wrappers. Eastern producers who barrel their apples have not made any great use of the new practice because of the impracticability of wrapping apples for barreling. This discovery and practice make it possible to ship apples long distances after storage as well as before storage with little or no loss from scald, and enables growers and dealers to obtain a wider distribution of their product and to safely withhold part of it from the market till the peak of the apple season is past. It reduces the variability of the crop and makes for a more orderly distribution of supply and a better market.

Unique Slogan of Bank of Petersburg, N. Dak.

"We bank on the cow, the sow, the ewe, and the hen." The First National Bank of Petersburg, N. Dak., has this slogan on its unique bank statement recently issued. Pictures of cows, sheep, and swine rather than moneybags are the decorations used. On the same page with a statement of the bank's financial condition is one of the agricultural statistics of the community.

The report points with pride to the improved live stock and diversified nature of the farming; the district, the 6,000 breeding ewes with pure bred rams at the head of every flock, the 80 pure bred hogs, the 100 or more registered cows besides a great number of high-grade females, the large acreage of Grimm alfalfa, the $5,000 worth of produce shipped out during the past year, and the activities of the Petersburg Live Stock Shipping association, which handled 30 cars of live stock last year.

The officials of the bank have been active in co-operating with the United States Department of Agriculture in encouraging the use of pure bred stock and in general live stock improvement.

Sweet Clover Requires Well-Settled Seed Bed

Sweet clover requires a well-settled and firm seed bed, with just enough loose soil on the surface to permit the seed to be well covered. When sown in the spring on winter grain, the seed bed is as a rule in good condition, and the seed will be covered by alternate freezing and thawing. When sown with spring grain, the seed bed is often not so firm as it should be for rapid germination. In such cases it is a good plan to roll the ground after seeding. When seeded without a nurse crop it should never be sown on land which has had no chance to settle. For this reason the land should be plowed some time before seeding and worked down by thorough cultivation. In the West, where spring seeding is always necessary, the best results are secured from fall-plowed land followed by early spring seeding.

Serviceable Floor for New House for Poultry

Here's a way to make a dry and serviceable floor for that new poultry house. Use four inches of good grade cinders covered with two layers of paper and three inches of cement on top. The cinders should not give any trouble from disintegration or allow the floor to sag or break, for they are often used in a similar way. A thoroughly dry floor for the poultry is essential to success, according to the department of agricultural engineering at Iowa State college, which offers this suggestion.

Applying Raw Phosphate

Raw phosphate should be applied in time to be plowed under; and it is a good plan to disc the ground before plowing, so as to get the phosphate mixed well with the earth. Phosphorus does not become dissolved and move about in the soil water like nitrogen, and hence it is important that the phosphate be distributed throughout the soil as much as possible, to give the roots of plants the greatest opportunity to come into contact with it.

ing neighbors, more than 100,000 well-known men and women have offered their personal experiences as proof of the wonderful health-giving powers of TANLAC, the World's Greatest Tonic.
About each and every one of the long list of testimonials rings the note of earnest sincerity which characterizes the following excerpts:

Mr. D. J. Brichard, Cleveland,
Ohio: "People wanting to know what TANLAC will do may communicate with me. It increased my weight 32 lbs.
and brought me the very help I longed for."

Mr. H. Taylor, Memphis, Tenn.: "To me TANLAC was just like a good friend—it gave me help when I needed it most."

Mr. Mary Schumaker, Racine, Wis.:
"Every year at the change of seasons a course of TANLAC makes me eat with a relish, restores my strength and keeps me in splendid health."

George P. Wagners, Police Magistrate, Belleville, Ill.: "That I am enjoying such fine health now I can attribute only to the help I received from TANLAC."

Mrs. C. K. Sellers, Springfield, Mo.:
"While taking TANLAC I enjoy the pleasure of perfect health and have no complexion of a schoolgirl."

Mr. E. Perry, age 73, Seattle, Wash.:
"TANLAC built my weight up 21 lbs., and in five years' stomach trouble and left me feeling many years younger."

Physician's Daughter Took Cardui for Womanly Weakness, and Says It Did Her
"Lots of Good."

Albany, Tenn.—That Cardui has no equal as a tonic for weak women, suffering as she suffered, is the conclusion reached by Miss Ola Morgan, of this city, after her experience in the use of this well-known, purely vegetable tonic medicine.

"I hadn't been so strong and my health hadn't been so good for some time," says Miss Morgan, "and when I began to feel better, I had troubles connected with my stomach. I would have all in my sides, stomach and back. There was a great deal of nausea across my stomach."

"I was weak, nervous, easily tired, and would have to lie down. It was difficult for me to stand on my feet."

My father, who practiced medicine for years, knew of Cardui, he having used it in practice for womanly troubles, such as I seemed to have, and I decided to take it.

"I took four or five bottles and I can tell you it did me a lot of good.
There is no other medicine that can take its place as a female tonic."

There is only one CARDUI, the famous Tonic. It is a pure, wholesome remedy, made exclusively from the ingredients and contains no poisonous or habit-forming drugs. Try it! At all drug stores.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Denby Resigns From Cabinet and President Is Urged to Drop Daugherty.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

SECRETARY OF THE NAVY DEN-
BY said repeatedly that he would not resign from the cabinet. Monday of last week, to save the President and the Republican party further embarassment, he tendered his resignation, effective March 10, and it was promptly accepted.

Attorney General Daugherty, more persistently attacked even than Mr.
Denby, declared he would not resign from the cabinet. The Republican party leaders in Washington sent Senators Lodge and Pepper to the White House with the message that it was the unanimous opinion of the Republican members of the senate that the President should get rid of Mr. Daugherty.
The attorney general again said he would not resign, but at this writing it is believed he will do so, and within a few days.

Mr. Denby stepped out with a smile, and to the correspondents he repeated his defense of the wisdom of the oil reserve leases. In conclusion he said:
"My own vindication and that of the Navy department will come with the proper ventilation of all questions connected with these leases in the impartial courts. As a private citizen, if I have committed any offense against the law, I am still subject to action. I am able to fight my own battles, but I cannot fight slander protected by senatorial immunity. No one more than I can more deeply deplore fraud or corruption in public or private life, and where such guilt is shown it should be rigorously punished."

"The President has stood up man-fully for right and justice. The sportsmanlike thing for me to do is to relieve him of the further embarrassment of continued political maneuvers and partisan political trickery."

Assistant Secretary of the Navy
Theodore Roosevelt retains his office.
He was attacked in the senate by Senator Harrison of Mississippi and defended by Senator Moses. Mr. Denby's successor has not yet been named.

Senator Burton K. Wheeler of Montana, author of the resolution for an inquiry into the conduct of the attorney general and the Department of Justice, led the assault on Mr. Daugherty, whom he charged with protecting instead of prosecuting crime and criminals.
He asserted that offenders had purchased immunity by payment of large sums to Thomas B. Felder, the attorney general's associate in the Morse pardon case, and to Jesse Smith, Mr. Daugherty's confidential aide, who committed suicide last year under mysterious circumstances, leaving the attorney general a legacy of $25,000. Senator Wheeler raised the question of whether the attorney general received a share of such payments, and declared that if he had not
"he is a bigger fool than the people of the United States give him credit for being."

Mr. Daugherty denied Mr. Wheeler's charges specifically and generally, and said that, though he had been exonerated in one inquiry, he was quite ready to undergo another. He then sent a letter to Special Prosecutors Pomeroy and Roberts, placing at their disposal the machinery of the Department of Justice. The senate had confirmed the nomination of Mr. Roberts by a vote of 68 to 8.

THOUGH the senate investigating committee held no public hearings during the week, it was busy inquiring into the alleged "million-dollar slush fund" and with preparations to bring to light stock transactions connected with the oil leases. There was a lot of "sensational talk" circulating and various prominent men were mentioned.
Mr. Daugherty frankly admitted that he had bought and sold stocks, as he had been doing for years, and Senator David E. Ellis of West Virginia issued a statement saying he had bought Sinclair oil stocks, but "without any knowledge with respect to the oil leases." Harry Sinclair returned from Europe and is expected to be called before the committee this week, as are Harry Payne Whitney and E. B. Mc-Lean.

WHAT has been neatly termed the process of "candling" William G.
McAdoo was carried out according to program by the conference of his leading supporters in Chicago, and he was declared to be a good egg. In other words, he was told that his availability as a candidate for the Democratic nomination for the presidency was not lessened by the fact that he had been in the employ of Edward Doheny and that he must continue his campaign.
There was no doubt at any time as to the decision the conference would reach. If there had been it would have been dissipated by a telegram from Senator Walsh of Montana, chairman of the senate investigating committee, informing McAdoo and his candidacy in unrestrained terms. Republicans noted with amusement that this message was sent to the Montana representative in the conference, who happened to be Thomas Arthur, a stockholder and employee of the Continental Oil company and formerly in charge of a legislative oil lobby in Montana.

Mr. McAdoo of course accepted the mandate of his followers and then made a long speech in which he not only explained his Doheny fees but told what he proposes to do when he becomes President—if ever.

James M. Cox of Ohio, Democratic candidate for the presidency in 1920, is willing to try again. Having been informed that his Ohio friends wish to present his name to the convention in New York, he has given his consent.

IT BEGINS to look as if the taxpayer would get no relief from congress this session, despite the fact that all its members agree with him that there should be a reduction. Of course, if he doesn't get it, partisan politics will be to blame. Last week the lower house, sitting as committee of the whole, approved by a vote of 222 to 196 the Garner amendment to the tax bill, embodying the Democratic surtax and normal tax rates and increased personal exemption. Voting with the 203 Democrats were 17 insurgent Republicans, one independent and one Farmer-Labor member. The Mellon plan was rejected by a vote of 152 to 244. All efforts of Representative Longworth and other Republican leaders to arrange a compromise that would suit their recalcitrant fellow Republicans failed.

The Garner plan provides:
Normal rates of 2 per cent on incomes below $5,000; 4 per cent on incomes between $5,000 and $8,000; 6 per cent on incomes exceeding $8,000.
A graduate surtax scale, beginning at 1 per cent on incomes between $12-$20,000 and $14,000 up to a maximum of 44 per cent on incomes exceeding $92-
$100,000.

Exemptions of $2,000 for single persons and $3,000 for heads of families.
Many economists and financial experts have held that this plan is incomparable to that proposed by Secretary of the Treasury Mellon. Since President Coolidge already has publicly declared that it is "impossible in practice," it is fair to assume that, if the bill gets through congress as now framed by the coalition, it will be vetoed by the Chief Executive. The Republicans assert that the entire Garner plan would mean an annual deficit of $300,000,000 after the law is in full operation.

SECRETARY HUGHES is trying to guide the house toward the adoption of an immigration bill that will not be likely to involve the State department and its agents abroad in troubles. He already had told why the proposed Johnson measure is objectionable to Japan and last week he called the attention of the immigration committee to the protests of Italy and the Rumanian against the plan to make the 1930 census figures the basis for quota restrictions. Chairman Johnson read the Rumanian protest on the floor of the house. It said appropriately of the 1930 census as a restrictive basis would "deeply wound the pride of the Rumanian people" and "strongly affect their material interests."
"These impudent protests received from foreign governments desiring to recuperate at the expense of the American people will have the result soon," he said, "I hope, of insuring enactment of really restrictive immigration legislation."

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE nominated
George B. Christian, secretary to President Harding, as a member of the federal trade commission. Opposition to his confirmation sprung up at once in the senate, so the name was withdrawn at the request of Mr. Christian.

On Thursday President Coolidge sent to the senate his nomination of Charles B. Warren of Detroit to be ambassador to Mexico. Mr. Warren has agreed to serve, but at that post, but reluctantly for he preferred to remain in private life. He and John Barton Payne were the special commissioners who brought about the agreement by which recognition of the Obregon government was accorded, and his selection as ambassador is especially pleasing to President Obregon.

Henry P. Fletcher, now ambassador to Belgium, has been selected to succeed Richard Washburn Child as ambassador to Italy.

GENERAL DAVES and his committee of experts last week practically completed their report on the German problem and presented it in outline form to Premier Poincare, who is said to have accepted in principle these features of it.
To surrender control of the railways in the Ruhr and Rhineland in exchange for a general lien on the German railways.
The establishment of a bank of emission with a capital of 300,000,000 gold marks ($75,000,000), the seat to be in a neutral country and the governor to be selected from the financiers of some neutral country.

Economic consolidation of Germany with the surrender of various Franco-Belgian economic control services established to extract reparations directly from the Ruhr.

A moratorium for Germany—although the experts' recommendation of three years will be reduced by France to two years.

Premier Poincare has been trying hard to bring the French experts into accord with the Americans and English so that the report may be unanimous. To this end he is willing to make great concessions. Probably his attitude is induced largely by the fall of the franc and his other domestic troubles, including the hot fight that is being made in the chamber of deputies against his plan for increasing taxation.

LEADERS of the dock workers of Great Britain thought they had reached an agreement with the employers that would end the strike that has been cutting down the English food supply and increasing the prices.
The employers offered to raise the wage one shilling now and another on June 1, and to leave to a commission the question of providing a full week's work for the men. The more radical elements among the workers were dissatisfied with this compromise, believing all the demands could be won if the strikers would hold out. Prime Minister MacDonald was prepared to put in motion a plan for feeding the nation, and his government was trying hard to stop the profiteers from raising the prices of foodstuffs.

CHINA and Russia are reported to be about to sign an agreement by which the former recognizes the soviet government and Russia gives up though reserving Russian ownership of the Chinese Eastern railway. Japan does not like the agreement and may intervene to prevent its consummation.

MEXICO'S rebels are now devoting much of their attention to attacks on the railways which form the lines of communication of the federal armies. Their publicity bureau says they are contemplating a combined assault on Mexico City.

BITUMINOUS miners and operators of the central competitive field, in conference at Jacksonville, Fla., have agreed a renewal of the present wage scale for a term of three years, giving the country assurance of an adequate supply of soft coal for at least that period.

THE REVIVAL UNDER SAMUEL

LESSON TEXT—1 Sam. 1:7.
GOLDEN TEXT—Prepare your hearts unto the Lord and serve Him only.—
1 Sam. 7:3.
PRIMARY TOPIC—God Calls the Boy
Samuel.
JUNIOR TOPIC—The Victory at Ebenezer.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOP-IC—How Samuel Served His Nation.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOP-IC—The Revival Under Samuel.

Gross immorality and even anarchy prevailed during the close of the period of the judges, as we see recorded in the last chapters of Judges. Through the ministry of the last judge, Samuel, a brighter day dawned upon Israel.

I. Features of Israel's History in This Period.

1. A Demoralized Priesthood.
(1) The priests were actuated by greed (1 Sam. 2:12-17). It was God's will that those who ministered at the altar should live of the things of the altar, but they broke through the divine revelations touching this matter and were securing their selfish ends by force.

(2) The priests polluted the courts of God's house with the grossest immorality (1 Sam. 2:22). We thus see that the condition of the nation was most appalling. When God's ministers are actuated by greed and practice uncleanness, degradation and ruin rapidly follow.

2. An Alienated People. The only thing which separates people from God is sin. The people who choose sin shall be thus separated from God.

3. A Cessation of Divine Revelation
(1 Sam. 3:1). God was silent ("The word of God was precious in those days, there was no open vision"). The message from the Lord was a matter of memory.

II. God Calls Samuel (1 Sam. 3:2-10).
Samuel's name means, "Asked of God." He was given to Hannah for answer to prayer. In asking God for this son she vowed to dedicate him to the Lord. Accordingly at an early age she took him to the sanctuary and gave him over to the charge of Eli. Thus in his tender years he ministered to the Lord. The beautiful life of Samuel was in striking contrast to the degradation of the nation.

III. Samuel's First Prophetic Mes- sage (1 Sam. 3:11-15).

Up to this time Samuel obeyed the one who was over him, but the time had now come when he must directly hear and obey the Lord. The first message entrusted to him is a most terrible one. He hesitated to tell it to Eli, but, when pressed by him, he manifested the true courage which was lying back of his fear. He announced a fearful visitation upon Eli's house because of the sins of his sons.

IV. Samuel Established in the Pro- phetic Office (1 Sam. 3:19-21).

"And Samuel grew, and the Lord was with him, and did let none of his words fail to the ground, and all Israel from Dan even unto Beer-sheva knew that Samuel was established to be a prophet of the Lord."

V. Victory of Samuel (1 Sam. 7:1- 14).

1. Samuel Calls Israel to Repentance
(vv. 1-4). Some twenty years have now elapsed since Israel was humiliated by the Philistines. He asks the people to turn to the Lord with all their hearts, the proof of which would be:

(1) To put away their own licentious worship. This was really gross licen-tiousness under the guise of religion.

(2) To direct their hearts unto the Lord and serve Him only.

2. Israel Assembled at Mizpeh (vv.
5, 6). The purpose of this assembly was the confession of their sins. They poured water before the Lord, thus symbolizing their need of cleansing and the pouring out of their hearts in penitence before the Lord. They fasted and publicly confessed their sins.

3. The Philistines Attack Israel (v.
7). The assembly of Israel at Mizpeh alarmed the Philistines. They interpreted the gathering as a preparation to attack them, so they decided to attack first.

4. The Intercession of Samuel (vv.
8, 9). Samuel accompanied his intercession with a burnt offering, showing that he looked for acceptance in the sacrifice of another, even Christ.

5. The Victory Over the Philistines
(vv. 10, 11). This was the result of God's interposition. "The Lord thundered with a great thunder that day and discomfited them."

6. A Memorial Set Up (vv. 12-14).
Samuel set up a stone between Mizpeh and Shen and called it Ebenezer, which means, "Hitherto hath the Lord helped us."

ALL WOMEN WHO WORK

Should Know how this Worker was Made Strong and Well by Lydia E.
Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Zahl, N. Dakota.—"I was nervous and weak and was not regular. I also had pains frequently. I was sickly for seven years and finally had a nervous breakdown following an operation. I am a dressmaker and milliner, and a lady I work for told me of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I tried it and it has made me well and able to do my work again. I have even helped take care of a sick neighbor recently, so you can see how fit I am. I highly praise your medicine and you may use my letter as you see fit. I hope it will help some other woman."—Mrs. OLE NORD-LEIN, Box 23, Zahl, North Dakota.

Over 124,000 women have so far replied to our question, "Have you received benefit from taking Lydia E.
Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?"
88 per cent. of these replies answer
"Yes." This means that 98 out of every 100 women taking this medicine for all-ments for which it is recommended are benefited by it. For sale by all druggists.

Birmingham ought to give Dinsmore a meal ticket and maybe he would behave.

So far the voice of the early garden truck salesman is very conspicuous by its absence

Lumber trucks seem to be operating right along this week although it rained Monday.

From what we hear around Clanton these road house hell holes do not have to be situated on a highway Fertilizer is moving quite freely now. The price is about what it was last year when you consider the higher analysis.

We are expecting a summons to go before the Senate oil investigating committee every day. We buy an occasional gallon of kerosene.

The Birmingham News is a great paper. It is always on the popular side because its editorial policies change about as often as the moon.

President Coolidge is going to stay by Daugherty and Denby if the heavens fall. He is trying to lose the support of a large part of his own party. They found too much gold in old King Tut's grave and the result has been the same old thing. Mr. Carter and the Egyptian government has fallen out about dividing it.

As the bird season is over now our local sportsmen will have to change the ribbon on their imaginative machine and get ready to put out a series of equally popular and credible fish stories.

The Union-Banner was making a plea for fellowship and good feeling between the two races. The Union-Banner was right away. A week or so ago it attempted to lead all democrats into outer darkness and the bottomless pit.

Almost every day you read of some fellow who has fallen from a high place in life with a bundle of rascality and disgrace tied around his neck. It seems like the Bible tells us "to be sure our sins will find us out."

There was what purported to be a real live wild roose exhibited on the streets last Saturday. There may have been a good many tame ones exhibiting themselves on the streets the same day.

President Coolidge wielded his "big stick" to the utmost to get that $500,000 appropriation through congress for the negro who scoffed at the white race and their religion, but it failed to work. Even a republican senate has some white folks in it.

After a 20 minute rain fall it is unlawful, in Chilton county, to haul lumber, crossties etc. on any public road in the county for 36 hours. That practically prohibits any hauling of such articles like the weather is these days.

The daily papers tell us that the northern section of the B. & M. highway in Chilton county will be advertised for bids soon. It is to be fervently hoped that the contract will be let and actual work started before the summer is over.

What the Age-Herald said about the Montgomery Advertiser last Sunday was a plenty and then some. Like most of the other friends Mr. Underwood has been cursed with this time, the Advertiser has managed to do him a great deal of injury first and last.

The best thing Gov. Brandon can do for the people is to repeal the constitution of the legislature and have them to spend the entire time in repealing foolish and unnecessary laws. We are burdened to death almost with useless and vicious laws.

William Jennings has been telling the Birmingham News a few very plain things this week. He is also rigging Senator Underwood a few things to think about also. He does not seem to lose much of his pep and pull as the years go by.

THE NEW COUNTY ROAD LAWS.

As is well known, the Chilton County News has felt like, from the first, that this particular time was an unfortunate period for the adding on of any additional taxes to the public truck hauler and especially to add an additional handicap to the men who operate saw mills.

We all know full well that the lumber business is practically the only industry that keeps money in circulation here on the pay day plan and it should unmistakably be the duty of us all to cooperate with and encourage them as much as possible.

As we have pointed out before, this has been an extremely hard season on all our door business and has been an especially expensive one to mill men and lumber haulers. The weather has made it impossible for them to even operate on half time, consequently in our opinion, it is immensely unwise to load them down more heavily right at this hardest period of their existence with a law that is to all intents and purposes, prohibitive so far as these special interests are concerned. It really looks like, on the face of it, like an attempt to strike a direct and intentional blow at the lumber interest.

Here is Section 37 of the Chilton county Road Laws. Please read it carefully and see if you do not think it is rankly unjust and unfair in part of its provisions:

No person shall run or operate any vehicle, either motor driven or horse drawn, carrying a load of more than 800 pounds on or along any public road, in Chilton County upon which a rain of twenty minutes or more shall have fallen until the expiration of twenty-four hours after such rain shall have ceased to fall during the period of the year from the first day of May to the first day of December; nor until the expiration of thirty-six hours after such rains shall have ceased to fall during the period of the year from the first day of December to the first day of May. Provided that the hauling of lumber, logs, timber, cord wood, crossties, or minerals along the public roads after such rains during such periods is absolutely prohibited. Provided this section does not apply to automobile trucks or other vehicles used exclusively for transferring children to and from school.

Notice particularly that all other people are allowed to haul 800 pounds over the roads immediately following a rain except the fellow who hauls "lumber, logs, timber, cord wood, crossties or minerals." He must keep off for 36 hours if it chances to sprinkle rain for 20 minutes.

We do not pretend to charge that as an intentional desire to cripple and handicap the saw mill and lumber dealer, but it does hit him and only him a direct blow that, in the kind of weather we are having, and have been having, puts him entirely out of business.

There can be no possible justice in the provision of that section. It comes directly under the head of class legislation whether it was so intended or not and certainly should be changed into an act of equal bearing or repealed entirely without the slightest delay.

We have been credibly informed that two of the County Commissioners claim that they did not know that last "Provided" was attached to that section and if they had they would not have supported it. They understood that the load of 800 pounds applied to every one alike.

There are any number of valid objections to the County Board Laws as promulgated, but this particular case is an open discrimination and demands immediate correction.

Old Man Asa Candler the Coco-Cola King of Atlanta, has bought quite a lot of high life experience in the last two years. His last wife, who went down in town with two men and all three of them got in to police court for being drunk, is suing him now for an annuity of one hundred thousand dollars per year. Female friendship and "petting" comes mighty high to an old man.

Mr. E. C. Moore and wife, of Birmingham, spent Sunday in Clanton.

THE DOCTRINE OF "GET-TOGETHER" AND THE OBSTACLES IN ITS PATH-WAYS

We have noticed the Editorials appearing in the Union-Banner for the last two weeks on the subjects of "Get-together," in both Clanton and Chilton county, and especially the one appearing last week which fully approved and commented upon the sermon of Dr. Ezell. The eagerness with which our contemporary jumped on this subject is typical. We approved this sermon editorially in last week's issue and we still approve it but we think it timely to call attention to the motives which actuated the Union-Banner for dwelling upon this subject at such length and we also wish to comment briefly upon its application to local conditions.

For the past twenty years, the persons for whom the Union-Banner now speaks have always been ready and willing, when they thought it would advance their personal interests, to get-together, during the lull between political campaigns, for the purpose, we suppose, of trying to restore their standing and their self respect in the community. These same persons in every political campaign are willing to utterly sacrifice the friendship of their fellow-men, their own honor, the honor of the town and county in which they live, and to blast the name and reputation of any good man that may stand in their way, to appeal to the basest sentiments of the ignorant, and in some cases to openly advocate lawlessness—all for one purpose—acquiring the emoluments of political office.

It is a widely known fact that for the past twenty years, during political campaigns, the spokesmen for that element now represented by the Union-Banner have stood on the steps of the Courthouse and upon the stump in all parts of the county and have applied to their opponents the most vile, indecent, obscene, and profane epithets,—they have universally advanced the argument that their opponents were sorer than the average negro and their other tactics have been in keeping with this. Many times prior to this good day have we heard the cry of get-together. We remember one memorable day in 1917 when many good citizens of Chilton county did their part in an effort of this kind. Today the folly of that effort is very apparent and the machinations of the man for whose benefit it was pulled are widely known—the result—broken faith towards those who were sincere in responding to the call.

Yes, Mr. Editor we realize you would like to get-together again for a short while—until the beginning of the next campaign—however, let us suggest that there is no opening for such a proposal—when you get ready to make a proposition for a "get-together" all the year round, year in and year out—let us hear from you, but not before that time. You fully appreciate the reason—if not—take an elementary course in physics where you will find that they teach the doctrine that oil and water won't mix.

THE HOSPITAL

Had you ever paused to count up what an advantage and what a saving to the public the location of the Hospital here has been to this section?

Many, many patients have been cured there, by treatment equal to the best to be found anywhere, whose financial condition would not have been sufficient to enable them to go to the more expensive institutions located in the cities. Besides, these patients have been near to home, where the loved ones could see them often and render their forced stay at the hospital less lonely.

Another feature that we feel like is a wonderful advantage and that is, this hospital is owned by the public. It is not the private sanatorium of any particular doctor or doctors, but is equally open to all licensed physicians. You can have your own doctor there just the same as at home, and he is equally entitled to the use of all of the instruments and other necessary equipment that goes to make up a first class hospital service.

There are always competent nurses there who do for you just the same, no matter what doctor you employ, or, if you want to, you can engage your own nurse.

This is strictly an institution for all the people. A place where you can have the very best medical or surgical treatment and that too by any doctor you choose to employ. The equipment is there for all alike and the service is just what you want for your own self.

Mr. R. L. Duffy, of Mountain Creek, Alabama, was in town last Friday. He went out some 7 miles and joined the "Annual Gunless Rabbit Hunters Convention" for a little walk over the hills.

GO TO SUNDAY SCHOOL

On Sunday mornings we have several Sunday Schools who are always glad to welcome every man and woman, boy and girl, and all visiting people to their exercises.

No matter who you are you are an invited guest.

Don't you realize that your father, your mother, your employer, your best girl, your friends and your God would rather see you at Sunday School than loitering around on the streets, or speeding a noisy cut down about town? Don't you feel like you would have more respect for your own self? At any rate, other people would have more respect for you and much more confidence in you.

The wickedest man we ever knew and an infidel besides, operated a large mercantile business and we have heard him say often that he never employed a clerk who was not an attendant at church and Sunday School. He never went himself but he knew what it meant to the morals of a boy.

Had you boys ever looked at it from a business stand point? You can get a job ten times as easily if you are known to be a regular Sunday School boy, as you can if you belong to the class who loiter on the streets, tell snuffy stories, smoke cigarettes and drink liquor as people go to and from church and Sunday School. Don't get it into your head that the very business man who may drink with you on Sunday and laugh at your snuffy stories will give you a responsible job if he needs a man. He won't do it.

Turn over a new leaf, boys and girls and try the Sunday School for a while and see how much happier you will be and how much higher you will stand in the estimation of all of the people who are worth while.

Rev. E. B. Prickett, until recently a citizen of Chilton but now lives at Tallassee, Alabama, was here Monday. He likes that country, but he says if Clanton had some large factory enterprises we would have but few towns our size that would be our superior.

Miss Carrie Love Jones, daughter of Dr. Julius Jones of Rockford, and who is also a student of the Alabama College at Montevallo, spent Saturday and Sunday with her uncle and aunt here, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. McDonald.

MR. BIRD G. JONES OUT AGAIN

Tuesday, bad as the day was, we had the pleasure of meeting Mr. B. G. Jones out in town.

You will all remember what a tedious and serious time he had with an attack from carbuncles on his neck. For days his friends feared almost despair of his recovery.

He was carried to the local hospital and for eight long weeks he had to remain there under treatment and finally, after the malady had been conquered,—it was necessary to have a system of skin grafting to enable the large orifice left in the back of his neck by the carbuncles, to heal over.

This work has been most successfully accomplished and the place is healing nicely.

Mr. Jones is enthusiastic in his praise of the service put out at the hospital. He says it can't possibly be beaten anywhere. He remained there eight weeks and says he had every opportunity and also plenty of time to learn all about it, and that the medical attention, the service of the nurses, the arrangement for the comfort of the patients, the sanitary precautions and the equipment, in every particular is perfect.

He is indeed a sincere convert to the hospital system as being a necessity in every community and he told us that the only reason he did not say more good things about the Central Alabama Hospital was because time and language failed him.

It affords us pleasure to give place to these expressions of Mr. Jones. The hospital is a strictly home institution, and to know that its excellence and real merits are appreciated by such a fair and impartial citizen as Mr. Jones is gratifying indeed.

Miss Annie Johnson visited home people at Hartselle, Ala., the latter part of last week. Miss Johnson is the elocution teacher in the high school here. She is quite an accomplished teacher and has succeeded in her work.

A BRILLIANT SUCCESS

The Birmingham News last Sunday carried a historical write up and a splendid picture of Miss Roberta Curry, of our town.

Miss Curry is now, and has been for several months, in New York taking voice culture from the most noted teacher in the United States, Prof. Henry Stickle.

She has made such wonderful progress and has such an exceptionally exquisite voice, that she has already become a popular favorite among the musically artistic class of that great city. She is employed by the New York Times now as a member of their staff of radio artists, and will sing at their broadcasting station in New York on March 13. She has declined an almost fabulous offer made her by one of the great operatic companies of that city, because her duties there would have interrupted her plans for pushing her training up to the highest pitch.

The Chilton County News is happy at the wonderful success that has smiled upon Miss Curry so soon and we hark back with pleasure to a sentence we wrote when she left us for New York. We predicted then that Miss Curry would put Clanton on the map as the home of one of the nation's sweetest singers. Already our prediction is proving true.

To her and her relatives and many friends here we extend our hearty congratulations and may happiness and success ever attend her.

For your spring HAT, and DRESS, you will not only save money, but you will be delighted with your SELECTION, if you buy from McDonald Merc. Co.

CHILTON COUNTY MEDICAL SOCIETY TO MEET

The Chilton County Medical Society will convene at the Court House next Tuesday at 10 a. m.

All members are urged to be present as business of importance will be taken up.

Dr. C. C. Wilkerson and wife returned from Columbia, Alabama the latter part of last week where they had been for several days owing to the illness of Dr. Wilkerson's aged father. We are glad to know that his father was improving when he and his wife left for home.

Messrs J. R. Hardy, Kenneth Danforth and Varney Wyatt visited Rockford friends last Sunday.

Mr. W. J. Cox, of Tarrant City, was here Sunday. He is a son of Rev. W. S. Cox a pioneer minister and leading citizen of Chilton.

It will be to your interest to call and see W. J. Bice, Clanton, Route 4 before placing your order for any Cemetery work in Granite or Marble. New Designs will please you.

FOR WORKING PEOPLE

The best of workers get out of sorts when the liver fails to act. They feel languid, half-sick, "blue" and discouraged and think they are getting lazy. Neglect of these symptoms might result in a sick spell, therefore the sensible course is to take a dose or two of Herbine. It is just the medicine needed to purify the system and restore the vim and ambition of health. Price 60c. Sold by Upchurch Drug Co.

IT DRIVES OUT WORMS

The surest sign of worms in children is paleness, lack of interest in play, fretfulness, variable appetite, picking at the nose and sudden starting in sleep. When these symptoms appear it is time to give White's Cream Vermifuge. A few doses drive out the worms and puts the little one on the road to health again. White's Cream Vermifuge has a record of fifty years of successful use. Price 35c. Sold by Upchurch Drug Co.

The Cost of a Car

is no measure of its value
These are the things to consider

The cost of a car depends in large part on volume and efficiency. It is no criterion of value.

Studebaker builds 150,000 fine cars yearly. All of them are Sixes. The main costs are divided by that enormous output. Thus at prices of $975 and up we offer the utmost in quality. We offer maximum values.

Don't judge these cars by prices. Under other conditions they might cost twice as much, yet offer less than these.

Some Major Costs

Quality cars require costly facilities. Studebaker has $50,000,000 invested in modern plants and equipment. $8,000,000 in drop forge plants alone. $10,000,000 in body plants, to carry out the Studebaker standards.

There are 12,500 up-to-date machines employed to build these cars. Some are enormously expensive.

Few outputs justify such facilities. Then parts must be bought outside, and profits paid to others.

Studebaker engineering costs $500,000 per year. That to us is $3.33 per car.

Our department of Research and Experiment employs 125 skilled men. It makes 50,000 tests per year to maintain our standards.

Our Bureau of Methods and Standards fixes the requirements for every part and detail. 12,000 inspections are necessary for each car to insure against flaws and mistakes. We employ 1,000 men to make them.

Cars like the Studebaker cannot be built without such facilities, such research, such care. Yet enormous output alone makes them possible at Studebaker prices.

The Best We Know

Studebakers represent the best we know. And with our army of engineers, with our wealth of experience, we probably know what is best.

We use 35 formulas for steels. Each is best suited to certain parts, as proved by years of tests.

On some steels we pay the makers a bonus of 15% to get them exactly right. There is no room to excel us there.

We machine the entire surface of each crank shaft, as was done on Liberty Airplane Motors. That extra cost is heavy. But thus we get that perfect balance, that absence of vibration.

We use more Timpken bearings than any other car which costs under $5,600. They cost considerably more than ball bearings.

JUST GO AND SEE
Studebaker is today the leader in the fine-car field.

Studebaker builds more quality cars than any other concern in the world.

Buyers of fine cars last year spent over $200,000,000 for Studebaker models.

The demand for Studebakers has almost trebled in three years—as people found them out.

Then go see them. Compare them with any car you will... Don't spend $1,000 or over without knowing what Studebaker offers. You owe that to yourself.

These facts apply to all Studebakers, of all styles and sizes. The materials used in all classes are alike.
Beauty—Luxury—Finish

The Studebaker coach work has been famous for decades. No one can excel it.

The finish is produced by 26 operations, including 15 coats of paint and varnish.

Open cars have real leather cushions. They cost, over imitation leather, about $25 per car.

No closed cars could be more luxurious. That lining of Chase Mohair is made from the soft fleece of Angora goats. Velour lining would save about two-thirds that cost—up to $100 per car.

Note the completeness of our larger size cars. That, as you know, is expensive.

Note the completeness of our larger models. The nickel-plated bumpers, extra disc wheels with cord tire, a steel trunk, a courtesy light, even on the costliest cars.

Nothing is Stinted

Compare part by part with any rival cars. Studebaker will show you some scores of advantages.

Then consider Studebaker history. For 72 years this name has stood for quality. When people rode in carriages, Studebaker built the best. Now those same traditions are applied to motor cars alone.

Consider Studebaker records. Mark how these cars in service have multiplied demand, until people last year paid $200,000,000 for Studebaker cars.

Consider their service records. One Studebaker car, built in 1918, has run 475,000 miles. It is still in active service. It lately made a mid-winter trip from Los Angeles to New York. That means 80 years of average service, of 6,000 miles per year.

What more can you dream of in a motor car than the Studebakers offer?

UNDERWOOD'S MASONRY

STAUNCH, STRONG AND TRUE

Attempt to Inject Ancient Order in Present Political Campaign Now Having Boomerang Effect On Schemers.

Masons all over Alabama are shocked and amazed that anyone should so far forget the teachings of Masonry as to deliberately set out to make the fraternity an issue in a political campaign. It is of striking significance to the craft, that much of this imposition upon the order is the work of non-Masons. This fact alone should excite the curiosity and arouse the doubt of every member of the order as to the sincerity of those striving to spread this unkind and un-Masonic preachment.

A deliberate distortion of the real meaning and intent of a letter Senator Oscar W. Underwood recently wrote to the editor of the Fellowship Forum was blazoned forth on the front page of that publication under the glaringly misleading headlines: "Senator Underwood Denies His Masonic Friends." Senator Underwood has not deserted his Masonic friends and no one reading the correspondence published can see how the editors could justify such headlines as they used.

Senator Underwood, appreciating the proprieties of the occasion, was reluctant to dignify such an absurd charge with notice, but answering the urge of many friends, themselves members of the order, he has issued a statement which stamps this un-Masonic misrepresentation as an untruth out of the whole cloth. This statement which follows forever dispels any question as to the Senator's Masonic views, in the minds of all true members of the craft:

UNITED STATES SENATE

Washington, D. C.

February 8, 1924.

Hon. A. M. Tunstall, Exchange Hotel, Montgomery, Alabama.
My dear Mr. Tunstall,
I am in receipt of your letter relative to the dissemination in some parts of the country of political propaganda charging that I am a member of the Catholic Church and have renounced my affiliation with the Masonic fraternity.

These statements are untrue. I am a thirty-third degree Mason, in good standing; have been a member of the Episcopal Church since I was a boy sixteen years of age, and have no other religious affiliation. My wife and sons also are affiliated with the Episcopal Church.

Thanking you for affording me this opportunity to express my views, I am,
Sincerely yours,

O. W. UNDERWOOD.

Masons all over the State, aroused at the deception and misrepresentation through which scheming politicians have sought to play upon their credulity, are loyally standing for justice for an abused brother. This is reflected in a rush to the Underwood standard by those members of the craft who see the scheme in its true light—reeking with selfish politics.

Masonry is far above the plane of politics and the members of the order, outraged at its attempted abuse by political self-seekers, are rushing to the defense and support of Oscar W. Underwood, 33rd degree Mason, American Patriot and Alabamian, whose Masonry rings true and needs no defense.

March 11th. will see a deserved rebuke administered to those who would tear down the pillars of this institution and trample it in the muck of politics, for selfish gain.

Henry Ford's Personal Representative, J. W. Worthington, and Officials of the Tennessee River Improvement Association Urge Citizens to Support Senator Underwood

Florence, Ala., February 14, 1924.

TO THE PEOPLE OF ALABAMA:

Senator Underwood is Alabama's Candidate for President. Henry Ford is Alabama's choice for Muscle Shoals. The undersigned, all officially connected with Tennessee River Improvement Association, started on our determined effort to get Ford's offer after most complete discussions of the question with Senator Underwood. We followed his suggestions and advice in presenting the question to Mr. Ford to secure his offer in the first place and have, in the long fight for its acceptance by Congress, taken no important step until after thorough discussion with Senator Underwood. His powerful influence at Washington has at every step been our chief bulwark.

Should the people of Alabama, at the approaching primary election, take for granted that he would certainly be elected, and not come out to give him an overwhelming vote, there is little doubt that our enemies at Washington would immediately seize and advertise this as conclusive evidence that Alabama had turned against the Ford offer and had repudiated Senator Underwood on that account.

We appeal to the people to turn out at the polls and give him a great complimentary vote and thus assure the Ford friends at Washington of Alabama's fidelity to her faithful distinguished Senator, and to the acceptance of Henry Ford's offer for Muscle Shoals.

POPULAR MILT TOLBERT SHOW COMMENCING MONDAY MARCH 1ST.

Bigger and Better Than Ever Before in Every Way.

The theatre goers of Clanton will be pleased to learn that the popular Milt Tolbert Tent Theatre Co., will be in this city for the week beginning March 3rd with the largest and best show that has ever entered the country under the "Tent" banner.

Everything new and the same might well be the slogan of this popular company for this season for the show carries more high class artists, a bigger and better band, more scenery and more features than any other show in the history of this popular company.

The people of Clanton and this section have learned to look forward to the coming of this company as an event in the entertainment life of this section and will be glad to hear that it is coming this way soon.

The repertoire of plays is all new and contains some of the very latest dramatic masterpieces and latest Broadway successes in addition to some of the snappiest musical comedy concerts ever brought here.

Thirty five people comprise the Tolbert Company this season who will offer the highest type comedies, dramas and musical comedies in their program for the week. A feature of the show this year is their concert band which is said to be one of the best on the road added to which is an eight piece orchestra which will furnish the music for Tolbert patrons.

Clanton people always welcome the Milt Tolbert show and will read this news with pleasure and will expect the coming of this popular company with interest.

A NEW BUSINESS

The Chandler store building located next to the main street garage on west side, is being thoroughly overhauled and put in shape for the occupancy of Mr. L. D. Petty with a general jewelry repair shop and a general line of jewelry merchandise.

We hope that Mr. Petty will find a patronage equal to his expectations and will become a permanent business man of our town.

We will now have distinctive Tailor Shops, Musical stores and jewelry establishments.

DR. ABERCROMBIE GONE WRONG

We notice in the papers that Dr. Abercrombie, our present State School Superintendent, has been "out" for Federal aid in our public schools. We are sorry that he has lost sight of some of the most vital principles governing life in the South. He is certainly old enough to know better and would realize the situation, we think, if it were not that constant dreams of "more money for schools" has blinded his good judgement.

It is a fact that we all know to be true, that the Federal government never puts any money in to anything unless they have the control.

It is also a fact, that all intelligent people are aware of, that wherever the Federal government has any kind of a project there is, neither can there be any color line. If the Federal money goes in to a school the law says that the negro child has a perfect right to go there too.

Is Dr. Abercrombie willing to advocate such an arrangement as that in the hope of handling a little Federal money on the job?

The South will make a most grievous error if they do not fight the Federal share aid question, no matter in what guise it shows its head.

We admit that our school system needs many improvements, but it does not need more money half as badly as it does a more progressive system. The lack of cash is not doing half the harm to the course of education in our state as the lack of a more concrete and elastic plan of study.

We are sorry that Dr. Abercrombie has made this serious break. It is to be hoped that he will realize his error and back up.

With Federal money in our schools and a man like Coolidge in the white house we would have colored pupils in our public schools in short order.

UNCLE DOCK SAYS

He has returned from his vacation trip and is back on the job and ready for business.

How you all will remember that tomorrow is his eighteenth birthday, February 20. However he only has a birthday every four years and says this may be his last one as four years is quite a long time.

So, as birthday presents are in order, and duly appreciated if they only amount to a nickel.

Mr. J. H. Hays, returned to his home in San Diego Calif. last week. Mr. Hays has been in Clanton for several weeks owing to the illness of his mother.

Mr. C. A. Retherford has moved from his home near Jemison back to his old home on route eight near Clanton. "Things may be ever so humble, yet there is no place like home."

Rev. W. S. Cox, route three, was here Sunday. Brother Cox recently suffered the loss of his barn, contents and several head of stock as a result of a fire which no doubt of incendiary origin.

Mrs. Gertrude Callaway has taken an agency for the Orient Insurance Company, of Hartford Conn. and will be pleased to make you some interesting figures on insurance. Give her a trial.

Clarence Evans, a young man who was reared here but who is now climbing up the ladder of success in Birmingham, was here the first of the week visiting friends and relatives.

WHERE IS MY WANDERING GIRL TONIGHT? IS LATEST VERSION AROUND BIRMINGHAM

Profoundly shocking is the revelation that on recent a raid of a volunteer clean-up squad on the "road houses" on the Montgomery Highway twenty girls under 18 years of age were arrested and taken home to their parents. The raiders found these girls smoking cigarettes, sitting in men's laps, drinking liquor or under the influence of liquor at these intolerable dives.

Could anything be more damnable and dreadful? And how is it that these establishments have been permitted until it took the services of a self-constituted posse to give them warning?

But, what of those girls? What of the parents who allow their young daughters unbridled liberty no supervision, and apparently have no knowledge whatever of their daughters' associations whereabouts, comings and goings?

It is a wretched enough situation for the poor little painted, brainless flappers—one of the girls was only 12 years of age—but the bulk of the blame on parents who seem to realize no responsibility and allow their daughters to go on the rocks without a word of protest.

It is an appalling situation. Undoubtedly, there has been a great slackening in parental supervision, until in many instances there seems to be no such thing. The result is seen in the dragnet which caught twenty girls in these dives out on the highway.

That was only one night. How long has this sort of thing been going on? Months and months—every night. Say twenty a night visited these stepping-stones to hell. Six hundred in a month there and for months and months. Why have these places been permitted to go on and this condition to go on and parents stick their heads in the sand of a fatuous optimism and feel sure it was somebody else's daughter frequenting these places?

Parents turn their daughters loose to be the prey of inexperience, ignorance, of the designing wolves lurking for them every step along the pathway. They allow them to run around unchaperoned at all hours of the night with Tom, Dick and Harry—often young men the parents have never laid eyes upon, do not know and probably would kick down the front steps if these gafflers should ever have the temerity to ascend them. These parents allow their daughters to go automobile riding unchaperoned—the road houses give the answer to many of these rides.

And again the question recurs. Why have these "joints" been allowed to become such a stench in the nostrils, and so flagrant and brazen that it takes a visit by a "hooded and robed band" to put them out of business?

And are there not equally as reprehensible places existent upon other roads than the Montgomery Highway? And is there not equally as scandalous behavior after nightfall along the roads with parked automobiles so flagrant that repeatedly country people have run the occupants away with threats of using shotguns on them?

Assuredly, there is some work to be done around home here in the way of saving of waking to a realization of conditions. The old-fashioned ideas of raising children may be obsolete in these jazz and jazel days—but they produced in the vast majority women whom none dared doubt and all revered; and men who felt a chivalrous impulse always to defend and protect women. And now, what is the product—male and female? Does the majority remain so vast? One wonders.—Birmingham News.

Mr. and Mrs. Eric Hart, little daughter Messrs Joe Hester Sr. and Sam Upchurch, Joe Hester Jr. M. A. Gore, Sam Cowart, Mr. and Mrs. Morris Lande went to the Capital City Sunday to hear Sousa's Band. They reported an enjoyable afternoon listening to that famous band.

"CHARLES LEWIS" CANARD IS NAILED AT ITS SOURCE

Telegrams From Parties Involved Show Conclusively That Report Issued by Senator Underwood's Opponent is a Political Frame-Up.

DR. CRUMPTON ISSUES CARD CLEARING ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE

To the Democratic Men and Women of Alabama:

My attention has been called to a circular issued by the Muesgrove Campaign Committee, quoting a special from Birmingham to the Chattanooga News, stating that Senator Underwood had requested the Secretary of the National Democratic Executive Committee to reserve rooms at the Waldorf-Astoria, New York, during the time of the National Convention, for Charles Lewis. The circular also says that this same Charles Lewis is a representative of the liquor interests.

As soon as I saw one of the circulars I telegraphed Senator Underwood, asking him whether or not the charges in this circular were true. He replied as follows:

"Washington, D. C., Feb. 16, 1924.
Hon. A. M. Tunstall,
Exchange Hotel,
Montgomery, Alabama.

Telegram received. Neither I nor anyone connected with my office of the Underwood Committee have made or authorized any request for reservation at the Waldorf or any other hotel in New York for Mister Charles Lewis, directly or indirectly.

O. W. UNDERWOOD.
Mr. George F. Mara, Secretary of the National Democratic Executive Committee telegraphed National Committeeman Walter Moore on February 15th as follows:

"New York, Feb. 12, 1924.
Hon. Walter Moore,
Am. Trust Bldg.,
Birmingham, Ala.

Reservation at the Waldorf Astoria for Charles W. Lewis was not made by Senator Oscar Underwood nor the Underwood Committee or in fact anyone acting for Oscar Underwood. Disregard my letter at this point as I was misinformed. My Lewis reservation being purely a personal matter of Mr. Lewis.

GEO. F. MARA,
Assistant to Chairman,
Democratic National Committee.
I also telegraphed the Underwood

Campaign Committee at Washington and received the following reply:

"Washington, D. C., Feb. 16, 1924.
Hon. A. M. Tunstall,
Exchange Hotel,
Montgomery, Alabama.

Telegram received. Senator Underwood states that he has no knowledge of reservation referred to. Over long distance phone Secretary Democratic Committee in New York stated to me that he would wire National Committeeman Walter Moore and National Committeewoman Mrs. McVee informing them mistake had been made and Senator Underwood had not requested any such reservation. Neither Senator nor anyone connected with his office or this committee made any request for reservation for Mr. Lewis or any other individual at Waldorf or any other hotel in New York.

WM. H. MAY,
Washington Secty., Underwood Committee."

These telegrams show conclusively that the report is false and that the entire matter was framed up by some political enemy of Senator Underwood for the sole purpose of deceiving and misleading the voters of Alabama.

We submit without further comment the foregoing statement for your consideration and action.

(Signed) A. M. TUNSTALL,
Chairman.

To the Citizens of Alabama:

Since the publication of the Waldorf Charles Lewis-Underwood report the question has been asked me by a prominent citizen, if the Alabama Anti-Saloon League was in any way responsible for such publication, and I have been assured by Mr. Bibb Mills, Superintendent, and by another member of the headquarters committee that the Alabama Anti-Saloon League had nothing to do with the publication and circulation of the report. I was authorized to make this answer to any one raising the question.

W. B. CRUMPTON.

COHEN TO STAY

Washington, Feb. 25.—Walter L. Cohen, negro Republican leader of Louisiana, will be continued in office by President Coolidge as comptroller of customs at New Orleans, despite the recent senate rejection of his nomination.

The president, it seems, is so determined to force his pet scheme of social equality on the South that he is even willing to ignore and disregard the action of the Senate in forcing his contemptible prejudice and impossible ideas upon people of his own race.

He is indeed making a brilliant record in the white house. According to law and precedent he has no authority to hold that negro Cohen in a position which the Senate has refused, by actual vote, to allow him to hold.

A TIMELY SERMON

We wish every boy and girl, young man and young lady of Clanton had been at the Baptist church last Sunday night and heard the especially timely and able sermon delivered by the pastor, Dr. Ezell.

The inevitable end of certain kinds of living was portrayed so clearly that any one could see it, and the plans for a happy and successful life were made so plain you could not fail to learn the way.

His scripture was unanswerable and his deep and intense earnestness must have impressed every hearer.

First U. S. Army Uniforms

At the beginning of the American Revolution each regiment provided its own uniforms. As these were discarded the soldiers wore any clothes that were available. Such uniforms as were worn were English in design, substituting blue for scarlet coats. At the close of the war uniforms were procured for the few troops retained in service. They resembled the French uniforms of the day, the infantry wearing blue faced with white, and the artillery blue faced with red. Later cavalry was added, the uniforms being green faced first with white, later with black.

A Live Topic

The professor was really very profound, and he wasn't such an elderly professor, either. His style was concise, and when he had finished with a subject but little remained to be said. The girls on the campus were discussing this with admiration. The scholarly ones had declined at length, when a little bobbed-haired beauty spoke.

"The professor tells me he now has a subject he can't say enough about," she said.

"And what is this subject, girly?" they inquired.

"Me."

ALABAMA NEWS HAPPENINGS

A Resume of the More Important Events of Interest Condensed To An Epitomized Form.

Sale of 126,672 acres of state swamp and overflow lands for 10 cents an acre, during the days of "carpet bag" rule in Alabama immediately following the Civil War, has just been brought to light through investigations by R. W. Manning, special agent for the resident committee for the Alabama Insane Hospitals.

Most of these lands, it is stated, are located in the counties of Mobile, Baldwin and Washington. The tract book shows that the sales took place in the years 1871 and 1872, it is stated.

Although not generally known, a dry rot fungus is doing considerable damage to buildings in Alabama. Dr. L. E. Miles, plant pathologist for the Alabama extension service, and Dr. G. J. Humphrey, of the United States department of agriculture, made a ten-day scouting trip through the state to determine the extent of the occurrence of this fungus, and found 21 infestations in churches, dwellings, lumber yards, warehouses, stores and other buildings in Montgomery, Opelika, Troy, Selma, Orange and Elberton.

Detectives are reported to have recovered 24 automobiles in Cherokee county which had been stolen from the streets at Atlanta in the past four months, and news from Centre indicated that sensational developments might follow. Some of the best known farmers of the county bought the cars, paying from $150 to $300 for them, it is stated. The thieves welded new number plates over the original engine numbers and these were turned off by the detectives, enabling them to recover the cars, reports say.

It is now but a question of a few years until the Alabama National Forest in Northwest Alabama will be accessible as a national park to all lovers of the outdoor life in north Alabama and nearby territory. Plans are being made by government officials to enter at once into the construction of the road, between Moulton and the reservation by way of Wren. This road is to be graded by the government and rocked by the farmers with crushed material furnished by the forestry officials.

The first carload of seed Irish potatoes, ordered cooperatively, has been distributed to the farmers of Scottsboro community. The car is made up of certified potatoes absolutely free of any disease. Last year three carloads of potatoes were shipped from Scottsboro and the farmers were well pleased with the returns and this year it is expected that several car loads will be produced.

Owen R. Lovejoy, of New York, general secretary of the National Child Labor Committee, and known as "The Children's Statesman of America," has notified Mrs. L. B. Bush, president of the Alabama Conference of Social Work, of his acceptance of the invitation to deliver an address at the annual meeting of the conference, in Tuscaloosa, March 9, 10 and 11.

Alabama City is preparing to spend $25,000 for additional paving, the council having ordered asphalt paving on Fourth Street, between Kyle Avenue and Forrest Avenue. The improvement will be started during March. It will "tie-in" a lot of paving now being completed on Forrest Avenue and Kyle Avenue.

Tom McCallan, living near Lincoln, was the victim of a peculiar accident resulting in the loss of his right eye. He was yoking up a team of oxen according to reports, when one of the oxen gored him in the eye with its horn.

The Alabama Water Company began work this week on laying one mile and one-half of water pipe in West Jasper. It is a section of Jasper has long been in need of water and it will all a long felt need. Previous to the time West Jasper has only had one fire plug, but Mr. Salmon, manager of the Jasper Water Company, announced that fifteen plugs will be put in at an early date.

The city commission of Florence has granted a request made by the women who compose the Woman's World War Memorial Association and the legion auxiliary to honor the name of Woodrow Wilson by changing the name of Seminary street to Wilson avenue and the name of the city park to Woodrow Wilson park.

Miss Edna Donaldson, 21, and her sister, Miss Maude Donaldson, 25, of Andalusia, were suffocated in a fire that swept the Standard Telephone Exchange, in the Knox Building. Miss Edna Donaldson sacrificed her life in turning in a fire alarm. Her sister, who was her guest, died by her side.

Alabama farmers will be represented by Commissioner of Agriculture and Industries J. M. Moore at the hearing to be held by the federal tariff commission in Washington, D. C., March 5, dealing with the proposed reduction of 50 per cent in the tariff on imported vegetable oils.

Terracing is being taught by the county agent and others to the farmers of Randolph county and recently several schools have been held. The farmers of several districts have become so enthusiastic that the proper terracing machines have been purchased and are expected daily.

Hunters of Alabama may now legally gun for turkey gobblers and bear. The limit on the shooting quail expired February 20th. The open season for the gobblers expires April 1, while one may shoot trout only for a few days more, his period of immunity beginning March 1.

Announcement that Dr. Payson Smith, state superintendent of education for Massachusetts, will address the Alabama Education Association, when it convenes in annual session at Montgomery in April, is made by Frank L. Grove, chairman of the program committee.

John G. (Jack) Cleveland, member of the board of revenue and road commissioner of Mobile county, was found guilty of second degree murder by a circuit court jury and given 15 years in the penitentiary. He was charged with complicity in the death of Stephen Lassing.

G. R. Gregory, a deputy sheriff of Franklin county, and G. B. McWright, chief of police at Vina, were bound over to the grand jury at a preliminary hearing on a charge of murder, and their bonds fixed at $2,000 each. The trial grew out of the killing of Hughes Vinson, which the officers are alleged to have committed on the night of February 10th.

ROAD BUILDING

GEOLOGISTS REDUCE ROAD-BUILDING COSTS

How the cost of building Wisconsin state trunk highways is being materially reduced by the field investigations made by geologists, especially through the hunting out and using of local materials, is pointed out by E. F. Bean, assistant state geologist and former professor in the University of Wisconsin, in an article on "Economic Geology and Highway Construction," which has been published as a reprint from Economic Geology.

The increased use of local materials which has been developed by the geologists' road-material investigations has not only reduced the cost of construction materially but has greatly decreased the use of railway cars for hauling road materials, he points out.

Many university geology students have devoted their summers to the geological end of highway work and this, he points out, greatly extended the scope of this work. From the students' point of view, summer field work in connection with highway building has furnished a wide range of field experience.

The first step in the geologist's investigation is to determine what type of road material are available locally for that particular project. He then recommends such local material as may be used to save freight charges or truck haul. Detailed reports are made on the results of the investigations, and estimates are also furnished on the quantity of material available, conditions of quarrying rock or getting out gravel and transportation problems. The aim of such studies is to furnish good road construction at the lowest cost possible without sacrificing service and efficiency.

"In addition to the financial saving, the use of local material has a direct bearing on the problem of rail transportation," Mr. Bean writes. "The use of local road materials relieves the railroad of this additional load and liberates cars for the use of coal and other commodities, and in addition prevents expensive delays in highway construction."

Construction of Modern Automobile Roads Gains

That the construction of modern automobile roads and paved streets in this country is gaining in volume year by year is shown by statistics just announced by Highways Information Service, New York. The figures show also that highway contracts awarded during the second half of the year average in volume only about 25 per cent less than those let during the first half and that there is not a month of the year in which a large amount of construction is not under contract.

In 1920 a total of $390,845,000 in new road construction was awarded in this country. In 1921 the amount was $507,712,000, an increase of $116,867,000 over 1920. Last year contracts were awarded to the amount of $609,428,000, an increase of $38,716,000 over 1921 and $138,583,000 over 1920. From January 1 to June 1, this year, a total of $384,774,000 was placed under contract. At this rate new highways for which contracts will be let during 1923 will cost approximately $794,000,000, a gain of about $125,000,000 over 1922.

Highway System to Meet Big Demands of Traffic

The federal highway system is indicative of the determination of the American people to have a highway system consistent with the demands of the traffic. The system will include nearly 180,000 miles of the most important roads of the United States, so located as to form a complete network of main interstate and intercounty roads. When completed it will tie together practically every city and town of 5,000 population or greater, and a ten-mile zone on each side of the roads will include the homes of 90 per cent of the population of the United States. To encourage the early completion of this system, all federal appropriations will hereafter be spent only on roads which form a part of the system.

Pan-American Study of Good Road Construction

Each of the Latin-American republics is to be invited to send a representative to study the road building and transportation system of the United States. This was decided on at a meeting in Washington of officials of the Departments of Commerce and Agriculture, the Pan-American Union and Inter-American High Commission and representatives of the motor industry. The investigation is preliminary to a Pan-American motor road conference.

Good Highways Develop Peru Mines and Farms

"The touring car and auto truck are rapidly replacing the burro and pack mule which have for centuries carried supplies from the sea coast up, and products of the Sierra down, reducing the cost of transportation by more than half," says the West Coast Leader, Lima, Peru. "The recently improved Trujillo-Quiruvilca highway is developing the region between these two cities in mining and agriculture."

RIGHT OF POWER COMPANY TO SERVE SMALL TOWNS IS PRO- TESTED BY TRI-CITY ATTORNEYS

Ford Will Not Oppose North Alabama Line Says Secretary—Will Not Stand in Way of Small Communities Getting Electric Power.

TESTIMONY SHOWS LINE HAS BEEN PROJECTED SINCE 1919

Decatur, Ala., (Special).—That Henry Ford is not opposed to the granting of permission by the Alabama Public Service Commission to the Alabama Power Company to construct transmission lines through North Alabama to serve Huntsville, Albany-Decatur and a large number of rural agricultural communities was indicated in a letter read at a hearing before the Public Service Commission here from E. G. Liebold, General Secretary to Mr. Ford, by John F. Harris, Mayor of Cherokee, Alabama.

Mr. Harris, who represented the citizens of Cherokee in urging the Commission to allow the Power Company to construct transmission lines in order that his community might receive hydro-electric power, read the letter which he had received from Mr. Liebold, who is known to be the authorized spokesman for Mr. Ford. Mr. Liebold wrote Mr. Harris that it would not be Mr. Ford's intention to stand in the way of the proposed development nor to interfere with the Alabama Public Service Commission in serving his community. He expressed the opinion that there would be no opposition on the part of Mr. Ford to permission being granted for the proposed extension.

The letter from Mr. Liebold was the only evidence of the position of Mr. Ford presented at the hearing. Attorneys from the Tri-Cities who were opposed to the granting of permission to build the power lines to Huntsville and many rural communities were challenged by J. Fritz Thompson, attorney for the Power Company, to show some proof that they were acting in behalf of Mr. Ford in opposing the extensions. No evidence of any kind was submitted by the opposition to the transmission lines and no witnesses were placed on the stand.

Some surprise was expressed at the lines of questioning resorted to by attorneys from the Tri-Cities, who indicated by their questions that they opposed the extension of electric service to Cherokee, Courtland, Leighton, Trinity, Madison and a number of other small agricultural communities on the ground that it would not be economically profitable to the Power Company. Opposition was also voiced by the same interests to the transmission line to Huntsville where it was shown that a cotton mill costing $1,500,000.00 now practically completed would be idle until the additional transmission line was completed. Evidence regarding the serious situation at Huntsville was introduced by Leonard Aiken, Agent of the Lincoln Mills, and was corroborated by a large number of manufacturers and business men of that city as showing the necessity for the extension of the electric lines throughout North Alabama. An accurate survey giving in detail the number of customers and the amount of power desired by each was introduced.

Attorneys from the Tri-Cities vigorously contested the right of the Power Company to extend their lines to small rural communities where the chief consumers would be residences, stores and cotton gins, contending that the demand for power from these communities was not sufficient to justify them in having electric power. Witnesses were present in large numbers from Cherokee, Courtland, Huntsville and Albany, all of whom testified that their communities were anxious for the transmission lines to be constructed. Petitions and endorsements were also received from Cherokee, Russellville, Leighton, Moulton, Hillsboro, Trinity, Madison and Gurley, all urging the transmission line and all the small communities showing that they had no power available for lights and other purposes, either domestic or commercial and that they had no prospect for any power from any source unless transmission lines were constructed by the Power Company.

Dr. Miller Reese Hutchinson, native Alabamian, prominent Auburn Alumnus, noted inventor and for many years the right hand man of Thomas A. Edison, who has recently invested $200,000 of his personal fortune in the Cherokee Rock Asphalt Company, declared that he was in serious need of 1,000 horse power in the operation of his plant at Cherokee and that he would suffer heavy financial losses if he was not able to receive power within the next few months. He declared that it was uneconomical to construct steam plants and to build a water supply which would cost nearly $100,000.00 unless hydro-electric power was made available through the construction of transmission lines. Dr. Hutchinson, who was for many years an intimate friend of both Edison and Henry Ford declared that he knew that Mr. Ford would not oppose the construction of this transmission line and stated that Mr. Liebold, who was the spokesman of Mr. Ford, had declared clearly the position of the auto manufacturer in his letter to the Mayor of Cherokee.

In answer to the oft repeated charge of the attorneys from the Tri-Cities that the Alabama Power Company was trying to build this transmission line in an effort to interfere in some way with the development of Muscle Shoals by Henry Ford, evidence was introduced to show that as far back as 1919 officials of the Power Company had agreed with manufacturers in Huntsville and with the City Council of Albany to eventually construct this loop line which would guarantee constant service, and would provide sufficient power, not only for industries, but would tap a large number of rural communities, thereby bringing service to many who would not otherwise receive it.

Carl Patterson and Dr. F. L. Chelant of Albany introduced a resolution passed by the City Council of that City in 1919 granting the Power Company the franchise to do business in Albany, at which time they were members of the city council. Both of these men testified that at that time officials of the Power Company agreed to build the loop line, giving double assurance of constant power through North Alabama and giving service to a number of agricultural communities, along the route.

Douglas Taylor, representing a large number of business men and manufacturers of Huntsville, presented an imposing array of witnesses who stated the serious situation confronting Huntsville due to the fact that the single transmission line was now loaded to capacity, that one cotton mill was practically completed which required 3,000 horse power, and another large mill projected could not operate until hydro-electric power was available. It was testified that the new Lincoln mill, now practically completed had no steam plant and could not turn a wheel until the power lines proposed were constructed.

Despite the fact that this case has been pending since May, 1923, the hearing of evidence was vigorously contested by attorneys from the Tri-Cities, who declared that they were not ready to proceed with the case. Members of the Public Service Commission, however, declared that ample time had been provided for them to prepare their evidence and that sufficient notice of the meeting had been given them. It was also stated by members of the Public Service Commission that it was at the request of the people from the Tri-Cities that the hearing had been set at Decatur instead of Birmingham or Montgomery.

When all the citizens had testified in favor of granting the right to construct the transmission lines, attorneys from the Tri-Cities again asked that the case be continued for sixty days. Attorneys for the Power Company and citizens who desired power at the earliest possible date vigorously opposed this extension on the ground that for nine months they had been delayed and that in the mean time industries were idle and communities were deprived of the conveniences to be derived from electric power.

The Commission, after considerable argument, allowed the attorneys from the Tri-Cities until February 29th in which to secure witnesses and make out a case against the construction of these lines.

One of the significant features of the testimony of Dr. Hutchinson was his declaration that even if he had installed a steam plant, he could still operate by electric power at half the cost of steam.

At a speed that would make a grayhound ashamed of himself.

After the hasty evacuation of the place by the guests this officer told us that pints and quarts of liquor partly full could be picked up in every direction as the gay party discovered them for fear the officers would arrest them and find liquor on their persons.

The officers made the arrest of one man for whom they have held a warrant for some time.

IMPROVEMENT ORDINANCE

No. 2.

An Ordinance to provide for certain improvements on Second Avenue North from the East property line of Sixth Street to the East property line of First Street and on First Street from the South property line of Second Avenue North to the North property line of Second Avenue South.

Be it ordained by the Town Council of the Town of Clanton, Alabama, as follows:

Section 1. That Second Avenue North from the East property line of Sixth Street to the East property line of First Street and First Street from the South property line of Second Avenue North to the North property line of Second Avenue South, shall be graded.

That the North and South sides of a fifty foot roadway on Second Avenue North from the East property line of Sixth Street to the West property line of Fifth Street, the North and South sides of a forty five foot roadway on Second Avenue North from the East property line of Fifth Street to the West property line of First Street, and the East and West sides of a thirty six foot roadway on First Street from the South property line of Second Avenue North to the North property line of Second Avenue South be curbed with Portland cement concrete combined curb and gutter, the curb and gutter to be six inches thick and the gutter thirty inches wide.

That the side walks on each side of Second Avenue North from the East property line of Sixth Street to the West property line of First Street, and First Street from the South property line of Second Avenue North to the North property line of Second Avenue South, shall be paved with portland cement sidewalk paving for a width of five feet.

That vitrified clay drainage pipes, inlets of brick, laid in cement mortar with cast iron covers shall be constructed where necessary along said street and avenue.

That alley crossings shall be paved with portland cement concrete paving eight inches thick.

Section 2. That said improvements shall be made in accordance with the established grades on file in the offices of said Street and Avenue, and according to full details, drawings, plans, specifications and surveys of said work, and estimates of said work, which shall be prepared by the City Engineer, as early as practical, and placed by him on file in the office of the Town Clerk at Clanton, at least two weeks prior to the date hereinafter fixed for hearing objections, remonstrances or protests before the Town Council where property owners who may be affected by said improvements, may see and examine the same.

Section 3. That the cost of constructing said improvements shall be assessed against the property abutting on the portions of the highway, so improved.

(a) That the cost of improvements at or upon street, avenue, intersection shall be assessed against the lots or parcels of land abutting on said highway so intersecting for one half block in each direction.

(b) That the cost of said sidewalk or alley paving at the intersection of any alley with said street or avenue, where said improvements are made shall be assessed in fair proportion against the respective lots or parcels of land abutting or cornering off the alley at such intersection.

(c) That the cost of laying drainage pipe and constructing inlets shall be assessed against all lots or parcels of land abutting on the portion of the highway so improved and drained by said drainage pipe and inlets.

(d) That no assessment shall exceed the cost of such improvements, or the increased value of such property by reason of the special benefits derived from such improvements.

Section 4. That the property owners along said Street or Avenue shall be required to see their water pipes are placed at least eighteen inches below the grade of the Street or avenue and should any property owner fail or refuse, upon demand to comply with this section then the contractor in charge of said work shall lower or relay said lines, and the cost of such work be charged to the property owner and included in the assessment against such property owners, and collected as such assessment for street and avenue improvements are collected.

Section 5. That the estimated cost of said improvement is $12,500.00, and that the Council of the Town of Clanton, will meet on the 3rd day of March, 1924, in the Council Chamber of the Town office of Clanton, at 10 o'clock a. m. to hear any objections, remonstrances or protests that may be made against said improvements, the manner of making the same or the character of material to be used.

Read, approved, and adopted, this the 13th day of February, 1924.

BLACK'S FLING AT WILSON COSTLY

(Washington Bureau)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 21.—Criticism of the "white man's" religion as typified by Woodrow Wilson, when indulged in by educated negroes with a Boston accent, proved a costly pastime this afternoon when the Senate sustained points of order against a proposed appropriation of $500,000 in favor of Howard university.

The points of order were made by Senator Overman of North Carolina on the ground that as the items had been eliminated by the House, they represented new legislation. The vote was 40 to 35, and every democrat was arrayed behind Overman.

When the bill was in the house, Representative J. F. Byrnes of South Carolina, a member of the appropriations committee, read a sermon delivered some weeks previously by F. J. Grimke, a negro preacher and trustee of Howard university. In the sermon, Grimke ridiculed what he termed the religion of the white man, and especially that form alleged to have been represented by the late Woodrow Wilson. Mr. Byrnes contended that it would be unwise for the Congress to appropriate for a sectarian institution, teaching through its trustees racial animosity. The house acted on his suggestion.

In the Senate the President excited his influence to restore the items, it is understood, and the administration leaders fought valiantly for them. But their defeat was conclusive.

ORCHESTRA CONCERT

On last Monday night, the Orchestra of Thorby entertained a large number of citizens of Clanton, with a splendid musical concert which everybody enjoyed very much. These gentlemen, assisted by Mrs. Jodie Middleton piano, discoursed some real good music.

Everybody who is interested in the establishing of an Orchestra in Clanton, is requested to be present next Thursday night, as Mr. Bice, the manager of the Orchestra, will be here for the purpose of organizing a first class band orchestra for Clanton.

Miss Wyness Tate, one of the efficient high school teachers, spent the week end with home people at Anniston.

Mr. J. R. Owen, route three, was here Saturday attending to personal matters.

GRADE ORDINANCE

No. 2.

An ordinance fixing and establishing the grade of Second Avenue North from the East property line of Sixth Street to the East property line of First Street, and of First Street from the South property line of Second Avenue North to the South property line of Second Avenue South, also the curbs and walks on both sides thereof.

Be it ordained, by the Council of the Town of Clanton, Alabama as follows:

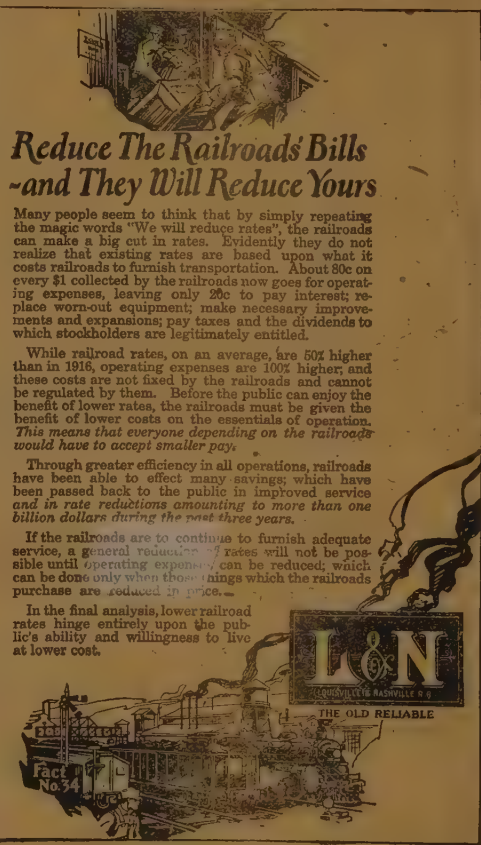

Sec. 1 That the grade of Second Avenue North from the East property line of Sixth Street to the East property line of First Street, and of First Street from the South property line of Second Avenue North to the South property line of Second Avenue South, also the curbs and walks on both sides thereof, be, and the same are hereby fixed and established as shown on profile sheets number 6, 6 A 6 B and 6 C, heretofore exhibited to this Council and now on file in the office of the Town Clerk.

Reduce The Railroad's Bills
-and They Will Reduce Yours

Many people seem to think that by simply repeating the magic words "We will reduce rates," the railroads can make a big cut in rates. Evidently they do not realize that existing rates are based upon what it costs railroads to furnish transportation. About 80c on every $1 collected by the railroads now goes for operating expenses, leaving only 20c to pay interest, replace worn-out equipment, make necessary improvements and expansions; pay taxes and the dividends to which stockholders are legitimately entitled.

While railroad rates, on an average, are 50% higher than in 1918, operating expenses are 100% higher; and these costs are not fixed by the railroads and cannot be regulated by them. Before the public can enjoy the benefit of lower rates, the railroads must be given the benefit of lower costs on the essentials of operation. This means that everyone depending on the railroads would have to accept smaller pay.

Through greater efficiency in all operations, railroads have been able to effect many savings, which have been passed back to the public in improved service and in rate reductions amounting to more than one billion dollars during the past three years.

If the railroads are to continue to furnish adequate service, a general reduction of rates will not be possible until operating expenses can be reduced; which can be done only when those things which the railroads purchase are reduced in price.

In the final analysis, lower railroad rates hinge entirely upon the public's ability and willingness to live at lower cost.

New Year Greeting

The good old year of 1923 has become now a memory of the past. With all of its joys and sorrows it is buried and, as the days go by, it will become merely a misty dream.

We have all had to face some trials and sorrows, but in the main, it was a kind and gracious year to us all. In bidding it good bye, I wish to express my sincere thanks to the many friends and customers who have loyally stood by me with their friendship and patronage and have enabled me to wind up the old year with a feeling of satisfaction with my success and with a steadfast hope for the future.

I wish for you one and all, the successful culmination of your brightest hopes for the New Year. May good health, happiness and prosperity attend you through the days to come. May 1924 have for all of us happy surprises and untold blessings.

I am deeply grateful to every one who has favored me with their patronage during the year just gone and most respectfully ask that you will continue to give me the opportunity to deserve your confidence and trade.

Your friend,

FARMERS MEETING LAST SATURDAY

A Very Large Number of Interested Farmers Present. Some Very Instructive Speeches Made

According to previous announcement, last Saturday was a big day in the history of the farming folks of Chilton county.

As early as 10 o'clock the court room was filled by interested "sons of the soil," who had assembled to gather all of the new data that science and experiment has discovered and demonstrated during the recent years of close study and research.

State manager of U. F. of A. was requested to call the meeting to order which he did.

He then introduced Dr. Caldwell, who is engaged in the valuable work of Agricultural instructor, out at the famous Isabella Vocational Agricultural Training school, and for a brief time, the Doctor held the close attention of the crowd as he explained and pointed out the wonderful possibilities of an educated class devoted to farm work. His talk was certainly well received and appreciated.

Mr. Binford was next introduced. He is engaged in their Farm Demonstration work for the state.

He stressed particularly the great advantages that accrue to a county where a competent demonstration agent is employed. His remarks were well received and he seemed to have the large audience with him.

Dr. Spright Dowell, president of the Auburn State School, was next introduced. He delivered a strong and timely address along educational lines. He scored the last legislature for their absolute failure to do anything at all for the rural schools. He says the country schools are not getting just what they need and that some kind of legislation is needed to give them a better show. He favors the consolidated school system, but it is practicable and is a long and earnest advocate of better educational facilities.

Following him, Mr. Boyd, the expert in fertilization, was presented.

In short order he captured the close attention of every one present, by the arrangement of facts and figures which he introduced to show how and how much and what kind of fertilizer should be used.

He does not favor the use of a ready mixed fertilizer at all, and from his figures acquired by twelve years of constant and unremitting experiment, his arguments are all to the good.

He carried a soil survey map of Alabama and turned to our county and told the farmers what kind of fertilizer was suitable for us and exactly how much to use to get the best results. He also told them what kind of material to buy and how to mix it to get the best results and largest profits upon their investment.

His formula for a moderately priced, but a successful cotton fertilizer for our county is, 200 pounds of acid phosphate, 100 pounds of Nitrate of Soda and 100 pounds of kainit, or 25 pounds of Muriate of potash. In the use of this mixture only 25 pounds soda is used under the seed at planting time. The other 75 pounds is to be applied after the cotton is chopped out.

This was a notable day with the farmers of Chilton and we feel like a great deal of good will result.

BUILD MORE ROADS

The people of Alabama have provided for $25,000,000 to lift the state out of the mud, by building improved roads as far and fast as that amount and other available amounts would do the work. The clear intent and purpose of the people was to use all available money to do the work. Of the $25,000,000 there should be the major part available to us. So far as federal aid and other sums is concerned, all such can be used when the cash is in hand.

Col. John Rogers, chairman of Alabama Highway, and the two associate members of the commission are growing uncomfortable from the heat of the many fires that are being built under them by people in all parts of the state, demanding to know why more road building is not being done.

In approaching desperation to avoid the charge of duty repeatedly neglected, Colonel Rogers gave out the following statement:

"The commission knows that if it does not build more roads in the next three years than were built in Alabama in the last three it will be severely criticised.

"The Alabama Highway Commission does not hold the purse strings of the Highway Department of Alabama.

"The Alabama Highway Commission has no authority to sell Alabama road bonds.

"These bonds are in the custody of and their sale under the control of the State Bond Commission.

"Unless the State Bond Commission authorizes the sale of road bonds, highways can not be built.

"It takes money, and lots of it, to build first class, hard surfaced roads.

"It would be criminally wasteful to build any other kind than a first class road connecting the great cities of Alabama with Muscle Shoals.

"The State Bond Commission is composed of Gov. W. W. Brandon, the chairman of the Highway Department and Hon. Harwell C. Davis, attorney general.

"If these gentlemen will sell the road bonds the highway commission will build the roads."

Bonds provided by the state should be sold as fast as the money is needed by the highway commission to build roads. There is no other business way. Roads are needed now. There is no good cause to delay building until other funds are in hand. When such funds are present they can be used. Until they are present use the funds available.

When the $25,000,000 shall have been used, provide for as much more as is needed and continue such provision until the state has splendid roads. The interest paid on road bonds will not be one-tenth as much as the cost of bad roads.—Alabama Traveler.

SAME OLD SCENT

It is claimed that the fertilizer put on sale this year is of a higher grade than that formerly sold.

It may be so, and we certainly hope it is, but it clings to the same old scent it has always had.

Miss Evie Jones, one of the teachers at Collins Chapel, was here Saturday. Miss Jones is a graduate of the Chilton High and has also been a student of the Jacksonville Alabama Normal which equips her for her work in addition to her natural ability.

"LEST WE FORGET"

A Splendid Letter From One Who Wore The Gray. Read it And Learn Something

In April 1865, the Confederate Armies under Lee, Johnson and other commanders surrendered.

For four years the men who wore the GRAY had endured privation and had fought voluntarily animated by the purest patriotism and by the love of the Southland. Forced by overwhelming numbers to lay down their arms, with sad hearts filled with grief because of the "Lost Cause" they turned their faces toward their homes and found them in many instances, destroyed and their prosperity all gone.

The question of a living for them and their loved ones confronted them, and yet, with the same indomitable spirit which had actuated them in time of war, they went to work to retrieve their losses. How well they succeeded is evidenced by the fact that to-day their children and their children's children are enjoying prosperity, peace, and plenty. But, alas! Scarcely had the war worn veterans of the 60's begun to build up the waste places, than they had to meet conditions more trying than had been their dangers on the field of battle.

Radical hate and venom, led the leaders of the party then in power, at the instigation of old Zack Chandler and others to lay plans which promised destruction to the rights and liberties of the Southern people.

The negroes had been freed and to them was given the right to vote and to hold office. While a law was passed disfranchising the whites.

The voting population in the better class was in the main made up of the Ex-Confederate Soldier. The days of Reconstruction witnessed the most diabolical and outrageous attempt to place "black heels upon white necks," the equal to which the annals of men do not disclose. Aided by white men who were to the manner born (we called them scalawags) and by Carpet Baggers from the North. With the U. S. Army to back them up in their iniquitous schemes, the state governments were so debauched that years and years elapsed before under Democratic rule the dreadful conditions were eliminated. When the change did come, it was found under the rule of Carpet Baggers, the Scalawags and negroes (these three classes made the laws for the intelligence and manhood of the states) numerous sums of money had been spent and stolen.

The "Freedmen's Bureau" was a prime factor in the provocation of such a state of affairs. The negroes were fed and would not work. Idleness and a feeling of security on their part led to the commission of crimes that were unheard of while slavery existed.

So undesirable did matters become that the true men of the South determined that at all costs, the end of misrule should come and with the same heroic spirit which had made them faithful in time of war, they moved forward with the one idea, "to turn the rascals out."—One by one the states were redeemed and the Anglo Saxon race came to its own.

After this the Confederate Veteran was no longer disfranchised, and by bitter experience during the dark hours of Reconstruction they had learned to know that the Democratic party was the ark of safety. One of the chief aids to bring about redemption of the white people was the "Ku Klux Klan." It came into existence because it was needed, and served our civilization. All honors to the men who made up its membership.

I said "Confederate Veterans" were no longer disfranchised. Some of them living in the county of Chilton, under a Probate Judge, who is not a Democrat, after having registered as the law requires and after having voted in one election after another find that their names do not appear on the poll list, and are challenged by the Probate Judge as being disqualified. They are inmates of the "Soldiers Home" and under the law have not been subject to poll tax for more than thirty years. Then, again, they have their registration certificates. I can think of but one thing that would lead the Judge to question their right to vote—"They vote the DEMOCRATIC ticket." Challenge or no challenge, when the time comes, they will be found at the polls, voting the DEMOCRATIC ticket.

Mr. Jesse C. Meadows, an inmate of the "Home" from Chambers county, died on Wednesday and was FERTILIZER NEEDS OF COTTON, ETC.

Fertilizer needs of cotton for soils in the upper Coastal Plains, which includes practically all lands in the western two thirds of Chilton county, was explained to farmers at the Court house last Saturday by Professor F. E. Boyd of Auburn.

The following recommendations by the Alabama Experiment Station, known as the "Auburn Method" of fertilizing cotton, are the results obtained by twelve years of experiment work with 143 practical farmers in fifty seven counties representing every soil division in the state.

For cotton on all the sandy and gravelly soils in Chilton county the smallest amount of plant food recommended per acre is 32 pounds Phosphoric Acid, 18 pounds Ammonia and 12 pounds potash and may be obtained by using 200 pounds 16% Phosphate, 100 pounds Nitrate of Soda and 25 pounds Muriate of potash or 100 pounds Kainit per acre.

However for best results use 300 pounds of 16% Phosphate, 200 pounds Nitrate of Soda and 25 pounds Muriate of Potash per acre.

Apply all the phosphate and potash and one fourth the Nitrate of Soda at planting time and the other three fourths of the Nitrate of Soda may be applied as a top dressing immediately after chopping the cotton.

Special stress was put on the necessity of as much as twelve pounds potash for each acre planted to cotton if the best results are to be obtained, also the need of a quick acting ammoniated fertilizer was stressed and Nitrate of Soda was recommended as one of the best sources obtainable.

For corn following cotton the only fertilizer recommended was 100 lbs. of Nitrate of Soda per acre to be applied as a side dressing by the time the corn was knee high.

I wish every farmer in Chilton county could have heard Prof. Boyd's talk Saturday.

His recommendations were simple, reasonable, easily understood and easy to apply and coming from results obtained by 143 farmers in 57 counties naturally carry conviction with them.

If the recommendations made by him were applied by three fourths of the farmers in our county it would be worth many thousands of dollars to us each year.

The above was furnished us by the kindness of Mr. J. N. Dennis, for which we extend to him our sincere thanks.

STROKE OF PARALYSIS

Mr. Sidney Johnson, who for many years has been an employee of the L. & N. Railroad, and who is well known and has a number of relatives here, was stricken with paralysis last Sunday morning in Nashville, and is still unconscious and at the hospital there.

At the time he was running as flagman on the Pan-American fast train and was called out early Sunday morning to report for duty.

He went to his bath room for a plunge before he dressed for the road and was stricken while at his bath.

Mrs. Claude Reynolds, of Clanton is a daughter of Mr. Johnson and has several other relatives here besides a large number of good friends.

Sid Johnson is known and liked by the people all up and down the South and North division of the L. & N. and many a heart will be saddened many years yet to his family and sympathy will go out over this sad story.

It is to be hoped that he may recover from this attack and be granted many years yet to his family and friends.

BASKET BALL GAME

On last Friday afternoon, the Chilton County High Basketball five had a hard fought battle with the Autauga county High, Chilton winning the game by a one-sided score of 49 to 12.

This was indeed the best game of the season and will long be remembered by the Marbury five as this is the first time Chilton has won from them in a good while.

Mr. Howard Thompson was the star of the game in pitching field goals. He was assisted in this professional art by Jack Hayes, and in fact the whole team. Howard Thompson hooped 13 field goals and 2 fouls while Jack Hays also put a good number into the hoop. He hurled 9 field goals and 2 fouls.

This is the last game of the season for Chilton, and it was certainly a victory for the boys who compose the team.

Base ball will be taken up immediately and it is said, that they will have one of the fastest teams in this community, so when this season comes in good, we want to get hold of Marbury and do them the same way in baseball. We have the material for a good team and we are going to put it out.

ALL AMERICAN

The Milt Tolbert Show that is playing in Clanton this week enjoys the distinction of being 100 per cent American.

This can be said of very few enterprises of the kind and is a decided compliment to these worthy people.

They put on good, clean, moral and high class plays and there is not even a hint of vulgarity or indecency on the part of a single performance.

Their performances are highly interesting and full to overflowing with good, wholesome fun. It is a real pleasure to be able to thus commend these talented southern artists and to feel the pure breath of Southern chivalry and becoming modesty and decency that actuates them all.

For an evening of clean pleasure that will do you good we commend you to this Milt Tolbert Show.

TIME TO GET BUSY

For the past week the daily papers have been telling a sad story in regard to the great Cotton Mill town of Falls River, Mass.

Twelve of the large mills have closed down there and most of the others are working only half time. The workers are in bad shape. They have nothing to do and no promise of anything for the future there.

The mill owners claim that they can not compete with the southern mills. Great numbers of northern mills have moved south in the past two years and have located in North and South Carolina and Georgia and are engaged in supplying even the northern markets, with what they want at a cheaper figure than the Fall River people can meet.

These Southern mills have a better and cheaper climate to live in. They have plenty of hydro-electric power, which is much cheaper than coal. They are right in the cotton belt and can buy their material almost at their very door and thus avoid a heavy freight charge on the raw material.

So the conditions confronting these vast cotton mill industries is either to go out of business permanently and thus lose the immense amount invested in all of their expensive equipment, or move to the South where they can take advantage of these same favorable conditions.

The sentiment prevailing among most of these operators is to locate in the South. They mean to take steps immediately to obtain suitable locations and to proceed to get in to the new field at as early a day as possible. They are, at this very moment, engaged in seeking a new home among the southern cotton fields.

It seems to us that we should take action right now to get in touch with them and offer them inducements to come and live with us.

We have good transportation facilities. We are located near two of the largest hydro-electric plants in the United States. We have splendid climate conditions and a diversified soil that makes it possible to grow almost any food or fruit crops in common use. Our living conditions are the very best. Our labor situation is never bothered by strikes. Our broad acres produce cotton to perfection. Our present cotton yield can be doubled or tripled if a mill is located here to use the output.

In fact, no place in the South can offer better conditions for a mill than we can here.

We need a strong, live, active and hustling body of some kind here, with a united support behind it, to go out right now after one or more of these great textile industries that are compelled to come South or cease to exist.

Is it possible to get up any such action as that here? The opportunity is open now and all we need to induce a cotton mill to locate here is an earnest, organized movement in that direction by the real business men of this section.

Miss Lona Thompson, who is teaching school at Pine Dale school near Clanton was here Saturday and Sunday. Miss Thompson is quite an accomplished teacher and graduated at the county high school here last year. She spent last summer in the Jacksonville Alabama Normal at Jacksonville, Alabama.

Bookkeeping Big Help to Farmers

Differences in Production Costs and Returns Noted and Causes Sought.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

New benefits from farm bookkeeping are in prospect in many states as a result of the organization recently of accounting schools at which farmers meet to analyze and compare records, and study out sources of error and opportunities for improvement in farm management.

There are few states in which the movement is not represented. Reports to the United States Department of Agriculture say 35 farmers' accounting schools were held in Ohio this winter. In Maine every county was covered. Illinois had such schools in 15 counties. Many were held in Indiana, Pennsylvania, Iowa, North and South Dakota, Colorado, Oregon, California, Texas, and other states.

The usual practice is for farmers who keep accounts to meet in conference with county agents and extension workers of state agricultural colleges and the United States Department of Agriculture. They produce their records of crops sown and harvested, labor used, feed consumed, and so forth, and the reports are analyzed and compared. Wide differences in production costs and returns are noted and their causes sought, so that inefficient methods can be corrected and better organization and operation plans adopted for the future.

Records Give Production Costs and Returns.

Books of Approved Type. Officials of the Department of Agriculture say the plan is largely an outgrowth of the increasing use of uniform accounting methods by farmers. When efforts were started by the department about ten years ago to promote better farm accounting, an obstacle was the lack of a simple farm accounting book. This want was supplied, and now practically all state extension divisions sell account books of an approved type to farmers at cost.

As a result many farmers all over the country are keeping their accounts in about the same way. This has been a big factor in crystallizing farmers' ideas on the analysis of their business along uniform lines, and it has greatly lessened the difficulty of getting comparable figures from different farms. Usually the book produced at the farm accounting schools are all of the same type. They tell the amount of the labor income from the farm, the size of the farm business, the crop yields, and the return from live stock, as well as the amount of expense for different items. From this data farmers can discover their weak and their strong points, and the standards necessary for profitable farm operation.

Farmers are also meeting more than in previous years to compare their results from single crop or live stock enterprises, as well as the results from their total farm operations. County agents in 1923 assisted 20,000 farmers in single enterprise analyses. A typical example is a study made of potato-growing costs in Cuyahoga county, Ohio, which showed that the farmer with the lowest cost was producing potatoes at 42 cents a bushel, compared with a maximum on another farm of $1.33 a bushel.

Clubs for Boys. A valuable supplement to the movement toward cost-comparison conferences among farmers is the development of accounting clubs for boys. The boys in these clubs keep the home farm records and at the end of the year with their fathers assemble in groups to study the results. The clubs are intended to train the new generation of farmers in sound business methods, to demonstrate to them the value of bookkeeping before they reach maturity.

Farm accounting is also being taught in many of the district schools in a number of states. This is with the same objective in mind and the posting and summarizing of an actual farm business record in the simple farm account book constitutes the main text book material. Many boys are keeping home farm records as a result of this school training.

Selecting Seed for Stand of Red Clover

Easy Matter to Test Germination in Advance.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Much of the present difficulty experienced in getting a good stand of red clover may be overcome simply by the use of seed of good quality and germination, says the United States Department of Agriculture. A bright fresh-looking lot of red-clover seed will usually germinate pretty well, but it is so easy to test the germination in advance that there is little excuse for sowing poor seed.

If 100 or 200 average seeds are counted out and laid on a plate between pieces of moist cloth or blotting paper and the plate set away in a room where temperature is 65 to 80 degrees Fahrenheit, the seeds will begin to sprout in three or four days and in a week the value of the seed so far as germination is concerned can be definitely determined. The germination of clover seed, even when the sample is good, will depend somewhat on the number of hard seeds present. A sample of good seed should test something like 90 per cent, with at least several of the remaining seeds hard at the close of the ten-day test period.

However, even if the germination of seed is good great care should be taken to find out if possible where the seed was grown, since the work of the department has also shown that red clover grown in Italy is not adapted to most of the United States and should not be used in the eastern United States. The only way to prevent getting Italian seed is to buy from a reliable firm or organization and to insist that you do not want Italian seed.

Relative Advantages of Horse Power in Farming

The United States Department of Agriculture has recently investigated the relative advantages of horse power and motor power for farm operations and reports numerous reasons for the continued use of good draft horses. Horse power is characterized by its versatility and adaptability to perform various farm operations. The horse is not limited either by the topography of the ground or specialized ability to perform only a few farm tasks economically.

The horse is self-replacing, earns its keep, and increases in value up to the marketable age. Mares enough may be bred yearly to replace the mature stock which is marketed. The young horses raised under this plan continually increase in value and at the same time they are paying their way by doing the farm work.

Keeping horses also helps to conserve the fertility of the soil and provides an element of interest which helps to keep the youngsters on the farm. Then, too, there is less direct cash outlay for horse power, as horses consume home-grown feed chiefly.

"Motor" power, however, has advantages under certain conditions, and in many cases the two forms of power—horses and tractors—are both used.

Silage Is Shown to Be Superior as Stock Feed

The value of silage feeding is shown forcefully by recent data furnished by the bureau of animal industry, United States Department of Agriculture. In the wintering of mature beef cows in West Virginia, it has been shown that corn fed silage is worth 60 per cent more than shock corn. In growing beef calves in Illinois an acre of corn silage was found to be worth 30 per cent more than an acre of shock corn. This increased utility is attributed to the many advantages of silage. Practically no waste occurs in the feeding of silage and it creates an appetite for cheaper roughages. Then, too, the same crops fed dry are not nearly so palatable and succulent as they are in the form of silage.

Information as to what crops make good silage and on preparing and using them as feed is contained in bulletins which may be had free from the Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Proper Methods Prevent Loss From Tuberculosis

Of the 43,000,000 hogs slaughtered under federal inspection last fiscal year about 15 per cent showed tuberculosis infection to some extent. This entails a large food and monetary loss which can be prevented by using proper methods of tuberculosis eradication and management.

Tuberculosis among other farm animals is recognized as a dangerous source of infection for hogs; leading packers are now paying 10 cents per hundredweight additional for hogs originating in counties free or nearly free from bovine tuberculosis.

The United States Department of Agriculture has bulletins for free distribution which give detailed information on the prevention and control of tuberculosis.

Sweet Clover Needs Care

The vigor with which sweet clover grows and persists as a weed has led many to believe that little care is necessary to get a good stand of the crop. However, the opposite is true, this being due partly to the large numbers of hard seeds present in most lots of seed, but more often to poor preparation of the seedbed and carelessness in seeding.

Will Your Family Be Happy This Spring?

If yours is one of the few remaining families lacking an automobile, no doubt you have finally decided to get one within the next four months.

A low-priced modern automobile like the Chevrolet has become indispensable to the family of ordinary income. A million other families can easily prove to you that the better way is with Chevrolet. The beauty of nature, the interesting and educational features of other places and ways of living, remain things to read about or seem dimly in cold photographs until you are free to get to them at your convenience and pleasure.

But, suppose you have definitely decided to buy a Chevrolet this spring. This does not necessarily mean you are going to get it. Anyone posted on conditions in the automobile business will tell you that thousands of families are going to be unable to get cars this spring. This has been true almost every spring for the last ten years. There are just two ways of making sure of getting your Chevrolet for use when the flowers and balmy breezes of spring lure you to the country roads—buy it now or order it now.

If you do not want to pay for it in full at this time, any Chevrolet dealer will arrange terms to suit your convenience. You will be surprised to learn how easy it is to pay for a Chevrolet and use it while you are paying for it.

Please realize these statements are made by us in good faith and we mean just what we say about the possible difficulties of getting a car delivered to you this spring if you wait until then to order it. The only way to be sure of a Chevrolet this Spring is to order it NOW.

SUITABLE CONTAINERS PROTECT FOOD

Proper Containers Prevent Deterioration of Foods.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

A new Farmers' Bulletin, 1374, entitled "Care of Food in the Home," has been issued by the United States Department of Agriculture. It points out, in connection with the proper storage of food, that success depends not only on a good storeroom or pantry and an icebox or other means of keeping foods cool, but also on the use of suitable containers.

The choice of proper containers for foods prevents much deterioration and waste. As a general thing each food is best kept in its own closed container. Dry foods may be stored in glass, earthenware, metal, wooden, or specially treated cardboard or paper containers, depending on how carefully they must be protected from air, light and vermin. For moist and watery foods the choice of containers is more limited, for not only must leakage be prevented, but the effect of acids or some metals must be considered. A container that has no cracks or seams in which dirt or micro-organisms may lodge and that can be thoroughly washed and aired before fresh supplies are stored in it is in many cases preferable. Labeling food containers plainly saves time when preparing meals and helps to prevent the wasteful and sometimes harmful accidents that happen when one material is mistaken for another.

The food containers used in the refrigerator should be convenient in size, washable, as light in weight as possible so that undue quantities of ice will not be melted in cooling them to the temperature of the refrigerator, and fitted with covers to prevent the food from drying out and the escape or absorption of odors. In fact, all foods and food materials that are to be used without washing, such as butter, cheese, or sugar, should be wrapped or kept in covered receptacles, whether stored in the refrigerator or in the pantry, cellar, or any other place.

LESSENING DRUDGERY IN HOME LAUNDRY

Suggestions Make Washing and Ironing Easier.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The United States Department of Agriculture makes the following suggestions for lessening the drudgery of washing and ironing:

Stand erect. Have tubs and ironing board at comfortable heights. Use portable tubs. Fill through a place of hose attached to the faucet or pump. Empty through a hole cut in bottom or in side near bottom.

Use a washing machine if possible. It saves rubbing. A good hand machine may be obtained for small cost. Use a smooth, well-made washboard. A jagged washboard tears the clothes. Use a wringer. It presses out the water without straining the fibers.

Ironing Board at Right Height.

Have clean, well-kept irons. A smooth clean iron makes for good results.

Wash clothes frequently and before they become too soiled. It saves your strength and the clothes.

Save ironing by choosing simple clothing and linen. Many articles, including crepe, seersucker and knitted garments, may be pulled into shape instead of being ironed.

Remember that strong soap hardens and shrinks woolsens, yellows white silks, and removes color in colored materials. Rubbing wears all fabrics, hardens woolsens, gives silks a rough and wavy look, and injures color. Sunlight bleaches and whitens white cotton and linen material, hardens and shrinks woolsens, yellows white silks and woolsens, and fades colors. Sudden changes in temperature harden and shrink woolsens, and anything hotter than lukewarm injures silk and may change or remove color from any fabric.

Homemade Flavoring Is Delicious in Custards

A homemade flavoring which is not new but which is cheap and always delicious is caramel. Its more frequent use is recommended by the United States Department of Agriculture. It may be used successfully in custards, ice creams, and many other desserts.

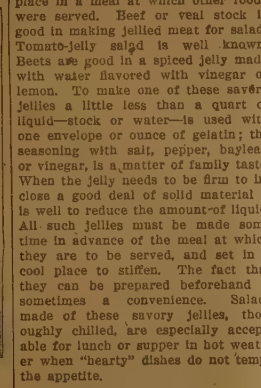

To make caramel flavoring, place one cupful of sugar in an iron saucepan. Heat it until well browned, stirring constantly even after the dish has been taken from the fire and until the danger of burning in the hot dish is past. Before the mixture hardens add one-fourth cupful of hot water and cook the mixture until it is about the consistency of thick syrup. Bottle and save for use when needed.

ASPIC SALADS HELP USE UP LEFTOVERS

Plan Outlined to Utilize Surplus Meat and Vegetables.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

A good way to use meat and vegetable leftovers is to incorporate them in firm unseasoned jellies made from meat stock or well-seasoned and flavored vegetable water stiffened with jelly which need not be accompanied by salad dressing unless one wishes. When there is not enough chicken left over to make regular chicken and celery salad, a chicken aspic is still possible if there is broth available, and perhaps a few tablespoonsful of cooked peas, carrots, celery or beans. This aspic jelly would not be an equivalent in food value for the ordinary chicken salad, but it would have its place in a meal at which other foods were served. Beef or veal stock is good in making jellied meat for salad. Tomato-jelly salad is well known. Beets are good in a spiced jelly made with water flavored with vinegar or lemon. To make one of these savory jellies a little less than a quart of liquid—stock or water—is used with one envelope or ounce of gelatin, the seasoning with salt, pepper, bayleaf, or vinegar is a matter of family taste. When the jelly needs to be firm to inclose a good deal of solid material it is well to reduce the amount of liquid. All such jellies must be made some time in advance of the meal at which they are to be served, and set in a cool place to stiffen. The fact that they can be prepared beforehand is sometimes a convenience. Salads made of these savory jellies, thoroughly chilled, are especially acceptable for lunch or supper in hot weather when "heartier" dishes do not tempt the appetite.

Baked Pears Are Equally as Delicious as Apples

Baked pears are not so familiar as baked apples to many people, but are equally good, says the United States Department of Agriculture. The pears may be pared if desired, but many people prefer the flavor when the skins are not removed. Halve or quarter the pears and remove the core. Cook in a small amount of water for ten minutes; add sirup or sugar and bake until tender. A few whole spices or a small piece of ginger root give additional flavor if desired.

Household Questions

No wonder the broom looks dejected. Hang it up and let it rest its feet.

Badly stained knives may be made to look as good as new by rubbing on charcoal.

A little charcoal mixed with clear water and thrown down a sink will purify it.

When preparing clothes for ironing have them evenly dampened and smoothly and tightly rolled.

Old nail holes may be filled with a mixture made of fine sawdust and glue. Fill the hole with it and leave till dry.

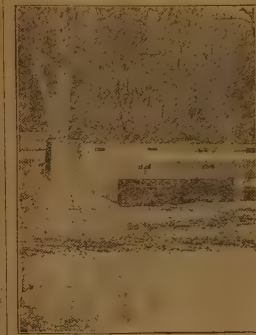

Save the chiffon velvet hat trimmings. There is nothing better for brushing the silk skirt free from dust. Keep a piece on the hat rack. It is excellent for brushing felt hats.

GOOD ROADS

BRIDGE BUILT TO WITHSTAND FLOODS

In certain parts of the West and Middle West streams that are ordinarily very small become raging torrents after a heavy rain.

Since it is neither practical to build a high-water bridge, because of the cost and the amount of filling that would be necessary in a flat, level country, the low-water bridge has come to be quite popular.

It is built of concrete and high enough to allow the flood waters of an ordinary rain to pass under it. But more water sends the stream above it and drift and trash are thus floated above it. This moves one of the great dangers to bridges across swift-running streams. The drift lodges against the piers and forms a dam. The weight of the water behind it develops more pressure than the bridge can stand and it is destroyed.

Improved Highways Soon Repay Original Cost

A good road is such a paying investment that it is the poorest kind of business judgment to do without it, according to the bureau of public roads of the United States Department of Agriculture. The bureau produces figures based upon a survey of traffic in Connecticut to prove its contention. An actual count of the traffic on the Boston post road showed that the average weight of vehicles and commodities passing over the road in nine hours each day was 1,140 tons. Adding one-third as a conservative estimate for the full day increases the weight to 1,520 gross tons daily.

Experiments made at the Iowa experiment station show that with gasoline at 24 cents a gallon the cost of moving this tonnage over a dirt road would have been $28.44 a mile, assuming the impossible, that such traffic could be carried over a dirt road. The cost of fuel for moving the same tonnage over a paved road would be $17.00, a difference of $11.44 a day. On the basis of 300 days a year, the actual saving in fuel alone for moving this tonnage would be $4,422. If the paved highway costs $40,000 a mile, the average interest at 5 per cent would be $1,000 a year, which, deducted from the saving on fuel, would leave a balance which would retire the cost of the road in less than twelve years.

This calculation does not take into account other savings in the cost of operating commercial vehicles or value of the heavy movement of passenger vehicles.

In less developed rural sections the value of the gasoline saved is reduced in proportion to the lighter travel, but the cost of the roads is correspondingly reduced, and there is no doubt that an analysis and comparison of the highway costs and the vehicle operating cost in any particular case will demonstrate the economy of improvement wherever the traffic is sufficient to call for any improvement at all.

Improvement Started on Two Important Highways

State Highway Director L. A. Boulay announces that work on the unpaved portion of the Ohio river road, between Hamilton and Belmont counties, a distance of over 300 miles, is getting under way and that the entire route will be open for traffic by the end of 1924.

Local material will be used, gravel being dredged from the Ohio river and crushed stone being obtained from quarries opened up along the route.

Work on the Atlantic & Pacific division, which extends from Cincinnati to Ironton, is to be inaugurated in a few weeks at Point Pleasant, the birthplace of General Grant in Clermont county, he said.

Better Roads Encourage Farmers to Buy New Cars

Good roads and more of them is a temptation that farmers cannot resist, and these great concrete ribbons are being built at the rate of approximately 20,000 miles per year, with no indications of the work diminishing. Reports from dealers throughout the country are to the effect that farmers have already begun placing orders for passenger cars and trucks for spring deliveries in greater volume.

THAT PAIN IN YOUR CHEST MEANS YOU HAVE TAKEN COLD

But Don't Waste Time Taking Liniments—You Need Cheney's Expectorant

You woke up this morning with a pain in your chest and a feeling of tightness and wondered if you might have taken a severe cold. Then you looked for a bottle of liniment and rubbed till the skin was blistered and wondered why you didn't get any better.

Well, the liniment couldn't get at the seat of the trouble, which was inside. You have a deep-seated cold and probably are threatened with pneumonia or pleurisy. You have got to get something inside of you—right into your circulation to reach the inflammation that is going to become congested if you don't hurry up and stop it.

Cheney's Expectorant goes right to the spot—dispels the inflammation, soothes the congested tissues and opens up all the air passages and makes breathing easy. The pain will disappear and you will feel easy in no time. You had better keep a bottle in the house for use in emergency. For sale by all druggists and in small towns by general merchants at 50c and 60c a bottle.—Advertisement.

STATE HIGHWAY BUILDING

From recent plans given out by the Highway Commission, they have a very large line of road building on their mind now.

It seems like they are intending to go into real road building in earnest. A large number of segregated projects are included in these places but no continuous system seems to be embraced.

The Commission and the engineers appear to be so badly divided and so hostile to each other that the public is fast losing confidence in anything they propose to do. One party talks favorably of a project and the other crowd immediately go to knocking it, so you never know what to really expect from them.

Sure enough road building is a big job by itself, but when a dozen or more engineers with help, equipment, expenses and so on, together with a large office force and other employees go on year after year, with their work before we get any real visible road work, money vanishes like mist before the sun. Twenty-five million dollars will only cleverly get Alabama started to building roads.

WONDERFUL CONDITIONS

When you stop and analyze the political conditions of our country you find existing circumstances in a shocking and disgraceful shape.

Our Congress, given out to be the most influential legislative body in the world, established for the purpose of safeguarding and directing our government affairs for the greatest good to the greatest number, has become or rather degenerated into, the most notorious assembly of tricksters and traders on earth.

During this entire session it has been devoted to maneuvering for political advantage instead of honestly trying to give us a lot of sane and necessary legislation of a general remedial nature following the war.

For months now it has been converted into a political court of investigation and has opened up frauds and high class stealings of public property and money that must really disgust all the rest of the world. It is astounding that our treasury is not bankrupt and our money on a parity with the German mark. No wonder the taxes soar higher and higher as each multimillionaire retires with his wad and a hundred more take his place in the line of official pillage.

The public puts up the money by billions and the grafters fill their pockets and retire to Europe or some other expensive resort to blow themselves and "rest."

If an expert and honest accountant had the opportunity of checking up on the actual necessary operating expenses of our government, it would be found that not more than 25 per cent of the tax money taken was required to operate the government equally as efficiently as at present. Seventy-five per cent of the income of this great country is squandered and stolen.

Unless something takes place at an early day to stop this fearful drain and waste, our country is going to deteriorate, and in the future it will pass away and be remembered in history as the colossal failure of free men to govern themselves.

Statesman will soon be unknown in our land. Only a scandalous few are in the lime light now. The political trickster is having his day now and he trades on the absolute rights of his constituents as common chattels for his own benefit.

THE INVISIBLE EMPIRE

The Alabama Traveler:

The Ku Klux Klan is in the lime-light for public discussion by proponents. The writer is not a member; does not know the obligation taken or the pledge of membership. What is said here is historic, or, from published report and in the nature of a dispassionate viewpoint.

The proponents assert the Klan as an organization is not political, but that Klansmen as citizens are interested and active in politics, through officially constituted authorities, carefully chosen.

Opponents assert the klan is a secret political organization, the main purpose of which is to substitute The Invisible Empire as Government, for the present established Government.

Proponents deny intention to destroy any form of religion, but assert that no religion must be allowed to assume the prerogatives of temporal authority in part or whole, in defiance of the Constitution and opposing the Rights of Man to worship God as he chooses. No use of Church cloak to screen mantels of State must be permitted in these United States.

Opponents declare the Klan would destroy all religion, save and accept the Protestant religion. Opponents express fear from hooded secrecy and private rituals guarded obligations and hidden personality, declaring all such not only unnecessary but dangerous to the Republic. Opponents declare outlawry by hooded individuals, such outlawry to be fixed purposes and principles of the Klan.

Klansmen point to page after page of sacred and profane history where secrecy of principles and personages were deemed necessary to success; where repeated sporadic outlawry by individuals was charged to membership of organizations opposing outlawry.

Christ in selecting his twelve Apostles chose one who was a traitor—Judas. One in twelve is a large percentage of unworthy membership. The purpose and principle of the eleven live and do good.

The American Revolution was carried to success by a secret organization and every general in Washington's Army was a member of that organization, one a traitor—Benedict Arnold.

Principles of that organization sheds blessings upon the people of this country and people of the world today.

The Christian faith was kept alive in spite of Herod, by a secret society. The spark of Christianity lit by John Huss in Austria lived by secret meetings. Martin Luther and his followers met secretly in Germany, until power came to throw off the yoke and cast aside the mask. The children of Israel could only know one another through their shibboleth and thus be called to secret meetings in hidden place to preserve their faith through years of persecution.

In the days of Loyola when the Roman bishop declared himself the infallible vice-gerent of God on earth, the early Christian church was preserved by secrecy protecting against atrocious outlawry and murder.

A secret organization protected against and finally destroyed the Spanish Inquisition. The stone cutters of Lisbon, Masons, met in secret and sustained Christianity. The Crusaders, Templars, devoted years to the recovery of Palestine and the Holy Sepulchre from infidel ownership, to be redeemed centuries afterwards by Protestants, some of whom wear hoods.

There is a potential power in the Klan that has 6,000,000 Americans under one pledge in military precision and readiness to serve, to obey leadership. Among so large a membership there will be one a Judas, but not at the ratio of one to twelve; there will be found an Arnold, but not at the ratio of one to nineteen. There will be some in the membership who will act on the principles of hate instead of help, but only in a small ratio.

The churches need not fear overthrow nor absorption by the Klan. Members militant, dominant in the churches can rely on the fact that many church leaders are Klan leaders, still protecting and proclaiming against union of Church and State. In the dynamic words that have emblazoned the pages of history for the past twenty centuries of civilization. So assert Klan leaders.

LOUISIANA VINDICATES HERSELF.

In the recent state election in Louisiana Parker and his detestable bunch of crooks and thugs, were utterly routed. The true, 100 per cent American, Fuqua, received a majority of 30,000 over Parker and his foreign host. State attorney Coco, who did his best to hang a lot of innocent men in More house parish for the murder of two contemptible parasites and whisky sellers, who were never killed at all, also got his in the neck. The voters absolutely slaughtered him, even after he had abandoned his efforts at hanging innocent Americans to please his Italian boss.

There is still hope for this great country as long as the South stands up for white and native government.

The day will come when even the North will shake off the curse of its foreign born bosses and fall in line with the South in taking back, from these alien hands, the freedom and liberty won by our forefathers at Yorktown, when our foreign enemies were conquered and sent back to the land from which they come.

SPLENDID TRIP

Judge J. W. E. Gullledge returned Monday from Birmingham where he attended a meeting of Camp Hardee of the confederate veterans.

He is enthusiastic over the kindness and courtesy extended these old heroes by the good people up there and is especially filled with appreciation for the personal kindness extended to him by the families of Messers Taylor and McDuffie two conductors on the L. & N.

Miss Laura Taylor took her car and carried him to every point of interest in and around the city and he had the time of his life.

Miss Taylor said she was going to visit Clanton this summer and the Judge advises all of the boys and girls to look out for her.

AVERY Chilled Plows

Rightful Leaders

AVERY Chilled Plows are leaders simply because they are really better in many important ways. Avery design is the result of nearly a century of plow-making. Avery plows are built in the finest, most complete and modern plow factory in the world. Scientific accuracy in the selection and testing of materials insures strength, durability, and almost perfect work. Avery repair parts always fit perfectly any Avery Chilled Plow of same size ever made. And because they cannot work loose they seldom break. The Avery "lock that locks"—to be had only on the Avery—holds the plowshare in place no matter how long in use; and relieves strain on bolts. Guarantee tag as shown is attached to every genuine Avery Chilled Plow. This guarantee does not make an Avery Chilled Plow any better, but it is our written pledge of quality to all buyers and users.

Avery Chilled Plows are protected by important patents; therefore all repair parts we sell our customers are always genuine and always covered by the Avery Guarantee. Call on us for all the facts about this famous plow.

There is a full line of famous Avery walking, riding and tractor plows, tillage implements, and Champion harvesting and hay machines.

FOR WORKING PEOPLE

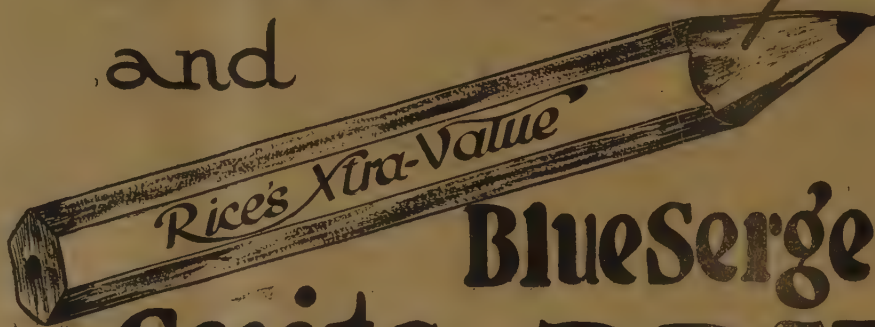

The best of workers get out of sorts when the liver fails to act. They feel languid, half-sick, "blue" and discouraged and think they are getting lazy. Neglect of these symptoms might result in a sick spell, therefore the sensible course is to take a dose or two of Herbine. It is just the medicine needed to purify the system and restore the vim and ambition of health. Price 60c. Sold by Upchurch Drug Co.

IT DRIVES OUT WORMS

The surest sign of worms in children is paleness, lack of interest in play, fretfulness, variable appetite, picking at the nose and sudden starting in sleep. When these symptoms appear it is time to give White's Cream Vermifuge. A few doses drives out the worms and puts the little one on the road to health again. ALABAMIANS! RALLY TO ALABAMA'S GREATEST OPPORTUNITY!

The eyes of the nation will turn on Alabama on March 11th. The nation will look to see how Alabamians regard their opportunity to have a President of the United States.

Alabamians, men and women, have a just pride in their state. Alabamians are loyal to their traditions. Every Alabamian takes pride in the thought of an Alabamian in the White House. Senator Oscar W. Underwood of Alabama is an outstanding Democrat whose fame is nationwide. He has an opportunity to be nominated by the Democrats of the nation as their standard-bearer.

In the face of state pride, in the face of loyalty to our traditions, we must put aside whatever petty differences we have had in the past and unite to the end that Alabama shall have one of her citizens at the helm of the national government. Opportunity is knocking at our door and we must not shut the door in the face of that opportunity, which we have never had before in the state's history.

Probably not in the life of an Alabamian now living will an opportunity to have an Alabamian in the White House come again. We must go to the polls on March 11th and by our ballots tell the nation we are as one to put an Alabamian in the White House. We must give Senator Underwood an overwhelming majority. Loyal men and women of Alabama, go to the polls on March 11th, and by your votes tell the nation you see your opportunity and are ready to seize it.

"SHOULTS"

Mr. Crit Oden spent last Thursday night with his parents here.

Mr. Bennie McAfee has bought a "Ford Car."

Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Sewell, of Maplesville were visitors here Sunday.

Mrs. Sanford Kelley was a guest of her daughter here last week.

Mr. W. M. Lawley and family, spent last Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Oden.

Mrs. Pearl McGee entertained, at her home, quite a number of both young and old folks with an "apron party" last Saturday evening. Each girl choosing a partner and turning down the hem of an apron, while the boys were given a needle and thread and hemmed the apron given them. It was quite a lot of fun to see the boys trying to sew. But after 45 minutes Mr. Percy Wallace had completed the prettiest made apron and was awarded a prize.

Preparations are being made to recover and paint the Baptist church here this week.

Mr. Brady McAfee has gone to Bessemer hoping to secure a position there.

Miss Alice Walker was the delightful guest of Miss Fay McAfee last Saturday night.

Miss Lela Henderson had as her dinner guest Sunday, Miss Mattie McAfee.

We are glad to know the Methodist church here has on a new covering.

Mrs. Pearl Sewell of Maplesville spent the day last Friday with her daughter here.

Mr. and Mrs. Mood McGee were visitors in Maplesville Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Noa Moore spent the day last Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. J. R. McAfee.

Mr. W. M. Oden, of Lawley, was a pleasant caller at our office Saturday. Mr. Oden was taking in the farmers meeting at the court house.

A BEAUTIFUL WEDDING IN BIRMINGHAM

The marriage of Miss Unice Wright the beautiful and charming young daughter of, Mrs. Lily Wright, and Mr. Offie R. Poore of Birmingham, was solemnized Thursday evening at 8:00 o'clock February 21st 1924. The bride was lovely in a grey satin crepe costume with accessories and never has a more radiant bride been given at the after of marriage. A reception at the home of the bride's mother followed the ceremony. After a wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Poore will be at home in Birmingham. Mrs. Poore has been a popular and admired member in church, social and intellectual circles and is well known in East Chilton where she spent several years of her life. Mr. Poore is connected with one of the largest companies in business in Birmingham.

Mr. H. T. Littlefield, of beat one, but now at Cherokee Bluffs, was here Saturday. Mr. Littlefield is considering becoming a citizen of Clanton. We will gladly welcome him in our midst.

AL and PERSONAL

Miss of Maplesville, was here last Saturday. Mr. Daniel, route five, was here last Saturday. Mr. J. B. Deason, route 3, was in our fair city Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Oden, of Lawley, were here last Saturday. Mr. Oden is a well known and true citizen of beat seven.

Mr. W. T. Johnson, of Verbena, was here Saturday. Mr. Johnson formerly lived near Clanton and his large number of friends here are always glad to greet him.

Messrs H. R. Oden and J. H. Dav- enport, two promising young citizens of beat three, were here Saturday. Beat three has a citizenship that any community can justly feel proud of.

Mr. C. M. Dunn, a law student at the University of Alabama, came over with Joe Mullins and spent Saturday and Sunday here. Mr. Dunn is a promising young lawyer who hails from the city of Mobile.

Mr. S. M. Edwards, of Thorsby, was here Saturday. Mr. Edwards is a jolly, jovial good natured man who knows how to say what he wants to without offending any one.

Miss Margaret Hester, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Hester, spent Saturday and Sunday with home people here. Miss Hester is the music teacher in the Shelby County High at Columbianna.

Mr. P. O. West, of beat thirteen, was here Saturday. Mr. West holds one of the very best positions with the Alabama Power Company. He is an all round good citizen and hails from one of the leading Democratic beats in the county.

Mr. Jasper Callaway returned from Tampa, Fla., Sunday where he has been for sometime visiting his daughter, Mrs. Annie Edwards. Mr. Callaway did not find the "Fountain of Youth," but he enjoyed his visit to the south and feels several years younger.

The Methodist people expect to be housed in part of their new church in the near future. As soon as the windows arrive they will be put in the lower department and the congregation will worship there instead of the court house. This will add new life to the already buoyant spirit of the many people interested in this new house of worship.

Mr. M. A. Nunnally, Worshipful Master Hiram Lodge No. 42, A. F. & A. M., Jacksonville, Ala.

Dear Bro. Nunnally:

Your letter of Feb. 23rd. received and in reply will say that I retired as Grand Master on Dec. 6th last, so do not consider this reply as coming from a present official of the Grand Lodge of Alabama. During the two years in which I served the Grand Lodge as its Grand Master it was my pleasure to be associated with Bro. Geo. Fleming Moore, Editor-in-Chief of the Fellowship Forum. I appointed Bro. Moore as Grand Orator of the Grand Lodge of Alabama and regard him as a warm personal friend. I do not mind answering your letter freely and frankly, as I have nothing to conceal, neither do I object to your making public the contents of this letter which is in reply to your letter.

I am reliably informed that Bro. Moore was not requested to resign as the active head of Scottish Rite Masonry for the Southern Jurisdiction, but that he requested that he be transferred from this position which he held for life, and in accordance with his request he was transferred and made the Sovereign Grand Commander for the Scottish Rite of the Southern Jurisdiction Emeritus, with full salary for life.

Mr. S. J. Headley, route seven, was one of the many esteemed citizens on the streets here Saturday.

Mr. W. R. Jones, route one, was in town Saturday.

Mr. George T. Guy, of Mountain Creek, was among the leading farmers from that section of the county who attended the meeting here Saturday in the interest of good farming methods.

Mr. Dave Norris and wife were visitors to Clanton Friday. We are always glad to see Dave and his estimable lady. We are trying to induce them to move to Clanton and hope to succeed.

TO BE REGRETTED

It has been our privilege to attend movie shows, theatres and other places of public amusement in quite a number of different towns and cities in Alabama and the rule of good order and decent behavior has always been observed.

The young folks, the frying size boys and girls and even the smaller children would come in and take their seats and keep them. There is no running about and whistling and howling and clunking of peanuts, marbles and chunks of coal and other missile among the audience. Good order is always observed at these shows in other towns and it is a shock to strangers and people accustomed to visiting shows and public entertainments in other towns to drop in to one in Clanton and observe conditions.

Mr. Wade, of the Wadesonian movie house here told us that lumps of coal and marbles had been thrown through his screen here until it was useless.

People pay their good money to go to these places and are entitled to protection from such rowdyism as is carried on there.

You know, such behavior as this injures our town away from home. Some people go to their homes after a visit here and tell the people that Clanton is not even civilized.

Even the liberty and the license of the young generation can go too far whether you are afraid to say so or not.

SENATOR UNDERWOOD IS 33RD DEGREE MASON IN GOOD STANDING

Hon. Julian F. Spearman, of Anniston, Past Grand Master of the Masons of Alabama, Answers Letter From Worshipful Master of Jacksonville Lodge No. 42, A. F. & A. M., Concerning Senator Underwood's Masonry

Anniston, Ala., Feb 25, 1924.

Mr. M. A. Nunnally, Worshipful Master Hiram Lodge No. 42, A. F. & A. M., Jacksonville, Ala.

Dear Bro. Nunnally:

Your letter of Feb. 23rd. received and in reply will say that I retired as Grand Master on Dec. 6th last, so do not consider this reply as coming from a present official of the Grand Lodge of Alabama. During the two years in which I served the Grand Lodge as its Grand Master it was my pleasure to be associated with Bro. Geo. Fleming Moore, Editor-in-Chief of the Fellowship Forum. I appointed Bro. Moore as Grand Orator of the Grand Lodge of Alabama and regard him as a warm personal friend. I do not mind answering your letter freely and frankly, as I have nothing to conceal, neither do I object to your making public the contents of this letter which is in reply to your letter.

I am reliably informed that Bro. Moore was not requested to resign as the active head of Scottish Rite Masonry for the Southern Jurisdiction, but that he requested that he be transferred from this position which he held for life, and in accordance with his request he was transferred and made the Sovereign Grand Commander for the Scottish Rite of the Southern Jurisdiction Emeritus, with full salary for life.

The Fellowship Forum is not a Masonic periodical. It has never been and is not now the spokesman for Masonry in Alabama. The only thing that is official so far as the Grand Lodge is concerned is the Grand Lodge itself; the Grand Master between the communications of the Grand Lodge and the Masonic Manual published by the Grand Lodge which contains everything but the traditional part of Freemasonry.

In regard to Senator Underwood, he is a 33rd degree Mason and is at present in good standing. He has never repudiated Masonry, neither has Masonry repudiated him. He is held in high esteem by the Masonic Fraternity in Alabama.

Masonry is not a political organization or order. We have on our roster practically 50,000 voters in Alabama who vote as their consciences dictate. We have among our membership both democrats and republicans and some who are neither. We have both the old line parties represented in the Grand Lodge officers. It has been my observation that any attempt to deliver the vote of the Masons of Alabama to serve for selfish purposes has not only been a failure but has always proved to be a boomerang.

Yours fraternally,

JULIAN F. SPEARMAN.

AN AGED MAN DEAD

Last Monday morning death called for Dr. Franklin Jacks, a Confederate veteran, 80 years of age and his heroic spirit passed over the river and went to join his loved ones on the eternal shores.

At the time of his death he was residing with his nephew, Mr. C. B. Norrell, five miles south of town, on the B & M Highway.

Undertaker Martin left with the remains early Tuesday morning for Prattville where they will be laid, in their final slumber, beside the wife who preceded him to the home beyond the grave some years ago.

Elder Hangly will conduct the services at the grave.

A PECULIAR PRIMARY

A fixed minority of the State Democratic Committee met in Birmingham last week and substantiated the call for a preferential primary for March 11.

This primary has already been turned down by the State authorities and will not be recognized as a legal primary by the courts of the state.

It is a very unwise and undemocratic action and is going to complete the defeat of Mr. Underwood at the polls. It is being forced through by his supporters, who seem determined to hog the voters of Alabama and hand them over like a sack of potatoes.

There is no precedent for such action on the part of this committee and, by this very act, they have rendered themselves absolutely unfit to serve in any capacity, as democrats.

Language is not strong enough to express the condemnation they deserve at the hands of the party.

The democratic party stands primarily for a government of, by and for the people. The rights of every man are guaranteed by this party. It is pledged to a policy of fairness, and any person or persons who conspire to thwart the righteous purposes of this platform is no longer worthy to be even recognized as a democrat.

A cut and dried primary to be put on and carried out by people without pay and without state recognition, is an unmitigated disgrace to the party and a brazen affront to every loyal democrat in the state.

We do not feel like that this bold attempt to rob the people of their franchise privileges will mean anything, or will even be recognized in half the counties. It can not be made mandatory neither can it be made final by the action of 15 men who, by this very attempt have clearly demonstrated their disloyalty to the great and everlasting principles of democracy.

From first to last Oscar Underwood has been butchered by his friends and now, it looks to us, like they had finished the job and made his defeat sure.

WHERE WAS UNDERWOOD'S SON WHEN THE FIGHTING BEGAN?

Ex-soldiers, sailors, and marines, do you remember the case of Underwood's son during the war? Do you not recall that he got his son recalled from France before the Americans were sent to the front and assigned to a camp in America as a "staff" officer?

Do you remember how he fought the soldiers bonus, yet voted to give the Railroads a bonus of several million dollars, when the roads were turned back to the owners. He tries to excuse his act by claiming that a bonus to the soldiers would cheapen the patriotism of the American people, but says nothing about cheapening the patriotism of the owners of the railroads by giving them a large bonus. Who do you think deserves the bonus? Is it the soldiers who trudged through the muddy fields of France and spent many nights in the wet trenches infested with cooties and faced the murderous fire of the German guns? Or is it the railroad owners who sat in warm offices or rode in palatial coaches? Underwood has said by his acts that he thinks the railroads are more deserving than the soldiers and sailors. You have a chance to show Mr. Underwood what you think on March 11, so go to the polls on next Tuesday and cast a vote for Musgrove and let Mr. Underwood know that he can not cram things down your throat all the time. Let's defeat Underwood so badly that he will never rise.

North Carolinian Found Inactive Liver Caused His Trouble—Took Black-Draught—"In Splendid Shape Now."

Rutherford, N. C.—"I have lived in this vicinity all of my life," says A. S. Jackson, a well-known resident of this place, "and for about twenty years out of my thirty-eight I have used Theodore's Black-Draught."

"I used it mostly in the spring when we have what is commonly called spring fever. I would get up mornings and my joints would ache. I would feel sore, I would feel sleepy and stupid. I didn't feel like I wanted to work. I found, after this feeling and a dull headache, that it was caused from an inactive liver."

"I heard of Black-Draught and how it was recommended. It certainly did me a world of good. So now I keep it in the house all the time. I use it each spring and it keeps me in splendid shape."

Pains in your joints and muscles are often the result of poisons which have been absorbed into the system instead of being carried off in a natural manner. These waste products cause a great deal of trouble to many people, and much relief has been found. In many cases, by seeing to it that the bowels act regularly and freely day after day, Theodore's Black-Draught should be taken as often as necessary to open the bowels and put them in a healthy state of daily activity."

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Daugherty Won't Resign and Will Be Investigated —Reed on McAdoo.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

ATTORNEY GENERAL DAUGHERTY, less complaisant than Mr. Denby, will not get out of the cabinet voluntarily—at least not for the present. President Coolidge will not ask for the resignation of the nation's chief law officer. The senate will go ahead with its proposed investigation of the conduct of Mr. Daugherty and the Department of Justice, without opposition by the administration forces.

These conclusions were reached the middle of the week, after three days of earnest consultations in the White House. The President conferred at length with William M. Butler, his campaign manager; Frank W. Stearns, his Boston backer, and with other party leaders. He reached the conclusion, it is said, that Mr. Daugherty's continued presence in the cabinet would be very injurious to the chances of the Republican party, especially in Ohio, and that he should resign. This concurred with the advice given the President by Senators Lodge and Pepper. But the attorney general himself was still to be dealt with. On Wednesday he went to the White House and talked with Mr. Coolidge for an hour. No results. Mr. Butler called again, and in the afternoon Mr. Daugherty returned. He declared with finality that he would not quit the cabinet unless his resignation were requested in writing, since he was innocent of any wrongdoing and was ready to be investigated by the senate committee. President Coolidge, through Secretary Slamp, then gave out his decision not to demand Mr. Daugherty's resignation, and the latter gentleman issued this statement:

"It is not my purpose to even consider tendering my resignation as attorney general until after a fair hearing on charges preferred against me. The attorney general at once left Washington for Chicago on business connected with the prosecution of Charles R. Forbes, former director of the veterans' bureau. From there he planned to go to Florida, not returning to the capital for two weeks. By that time the investigation of his conduct presumably will have begun. It is believed in Washington that Mr. Daugherty will resign at the conclusion of the inquiry, which he is confident will result in his vindication. Those who urge his elimination point out that, even if his honesty and efficiency are established by the investigation, his admission of having speculated in Sinclair Oil stocks after entering in Harding cabinet are confessions of grave impropriety and indiscretion."

EARLY in the week the Republican national committee took a hand in the oil controversy by issuing a statement defending the policy of leasing navy oil reserves and undertaking to place the blame, if any, on Democrats.

"The leasing act, which gives to the secretary of the interior the right and power to lease public oil reserves to private interests, was fathered by Walsh."

"That particular section of the act under which Secretary Denby acted in signing leases to Doheny and Sinclair was not only suggested by Secretary Daniels, but was written by him practically word for word as it now appears in the law. He frankly stated he wanted such power in order to enable him to do exactly what Secretary Denby subsequently did."

The leasing act received its first application under Daniels and John Barton Payne, when oil lands both within and without the naval oil reserves were leased to private interests to be developed by them on a royalty basis."

Mr. Payne was secretary of the interior and has been mentioned by his friends as a presidential possibility. The committee's statements met with denials from Daniels and others.

INVESTIGATION of the oil reserve leases went on merrily throughout the week. C. Bascom Slamp, secretary to the President, was the first witness, and he told the committee he dined frequently with Fall and E. B. McLean while at Palm Beach, Fla., and that he urged Fall to make a clean breast of the $100,000 transaction. Concerning that matter and all else that he knew of the oil affair, McLean was called on to tell the senators. Their determination to question him closely was strengthened by the reading of many telegrams that passed between Washington and Florida, revealing the strenuous efforts made to call off Senator Walsh from his intention of putting McLean on the witness stand. The messages showed A. Mitchell Palmer tried to induce Senator Underwood to influence Walsh, and the names of William G. McAdoo and his son Francis appeared. McLean, it appeared, leased a wire from Washington to his Palm Beach cottage and the chief White House telegrapher was engaged to operate it. The committee decided to call Mr. Palmer to the stand.

SENATOR JIM REED of Missouri, he of the serpent's tongue, formally opened his campaign for the Democratic presidential nomination by a characteristic speech in St. Louis. Pessimistic and bitter as usual, he declared that "not one-tenth of the corruption and iniquity which has existed in oil lease affairs has yet been laid bare, and then he exercised his peculiar talents in exhorting William G. McAdoo, his leading rival. Citing an array of alleged facts and figures, he undertook to show that McAdoo expected to receive $1,004,000 in legal fees from E. L. Doheny, the oil magnate, and the Charles W. Morse interests and the motion-picture concerns, "although he did not appear in a single lawsuit." Winding up his relation of McAdoo and oil, Reed said it was not until on February 1, when Doheny "was compelled to disclose the fact that he had employed Mr. McAdoo," that "Mr. McAdoo was seized by a spasm of virtue and resigned."

"The sole reason he quit," the senator concluded, "was because his employment had become known."

"Some of you may play poker. I state it merely upon information and belief that there is an old poker rule: 'Anybody caught cheating has got to quit the game.'"

The Republicans lost no time in reading the Reed speech into the record of the senate.

The Youngstown (O.) Vindicator published a story that McAdoo received a fee of about $200,000 for representing the Republic Iron and Steel company in a tax reclamation case before the tax commission. McAdoo admitted that his former New York law firm had that job, but placed the fee at $150,000, of which he received his share.

DEMOCRATS in the lower house, assisted by the insurgent Republicans, did a lot of things to the Mellon tax bill. Over the protest of the secretary of the treasury they located the maximum tax on estates and inheritances from 25 to 40 per cent, with an amendment by which an allowance would be made for taxes paid on inheritances under state laws. Next, after an exciting debate and several amendments, the house adopted an amendment by Green of Iowa, one of the agricultural group, which imposes a tax ranging from 1 per cent on gifts worth $50,000 or 40 per cent on those of $100,000 or more, all gifts under $50,000 being exempt. The cigarette tax was then raised from $3 to $4 per thousand. Representative Garner, asserting this would add $600,000,000 a year in revenue, and the clause in the Mellon bill doing away with the tax on these commissions amounting to 50 cents or less was adopted. The tax on notes and parts was cut in half. It was agreed that a final vote on the measure would be taken before the end of the week and Representative Longworth, majority leader, spent two days in a final effort to arrange a compromise on the maximum surtax rate.

Secretary Mellon was advised by Senator Smoot that the senate is just as radical as the house, if not more so, and that there is little chance of any material reduction in tax rates below the levels fixed in the bill as it is passed by the house.

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE seemingly fears that the attention of congress is so distracted by the oil lease scandal and similar matters that it will let through appropriation measures which will undo the budget system. An authorized spokesman for the President said that one of the most disturbing factors of the present time was the large number of appropriation bills pending which called for enormous expenditures. Bills are being given serious consideration which provide for additional expenditures larger than the entire expenditures of the government, the Post Office department excepted, before the war.

Bills which cause the President most concern relate principally to measures for extra compensation, increased pensions of all descriptions, and the soldiers' bonus bills, but added to these is a general tendency to increase expenditures all along the line. This tendency, the President insists, calls for determined resistance or else the country will be swamped. The result not only will be a failure of any tax reduction, but the country will actually be facing an increase in taxes. He is convinced that there are plenty of resources in the country to support all of its population in comfort if the people will only be willing to go along on the present level until there is production enough to warrant an increase. But, he holds, if through congressional action, yielding to pressure exerted from many organizations, appropriations are increased, the country will have to face a decline until there can be a liquidation and a fresh start.

CONGRESS suspended business Wednesday and the senate and house joined in a memorial service to the late President Harding. President Coolidge, the cabinet, the Supreme court and the foreign diplomats were in attendance, and Mrs. Harding sat with a group of friends in one of the galleries. The only speaker was Secretary of State Hughes, who sketched Mr. Harding's career and paid eloquent tribute to his accomplishments in public and private life.

PREMIER THEUNIS of Belgium and his cabinet, defeated when the chamber of deputies rejected the Franco-Belgian convention relative to imports and exports from neighboring countries, resigned on Wednesday. This in itself was not so important, but its effect on the settlement of the German problem may be great. Theunis and his foreign minister, Jaspar, have co-operated closely with the French government and it is admitted that no cabinet can be selected in Brussels that will be so pro-French. If Poincare finds he is to be isolated it may be he will not be so willing to make concessions in the adoption of the Dawes committee plan for the reorganization of German finances and the payment of reparations. The news from Brussels caused the franc to fall to a new low mark—24.50 to the dollar.

The Dawes committee report, which probably will be submitted to the reparations commission this week, provides for payments in kind by Germany during the proposed moratorium. The budget subcommittee has prepared a plan for balancing the German budget for three years, with extension of allied control over an additional seven years, ten years in all. The committee has completed its work on the German gold bank plan and the railway plan likewise has been practically finished.

EXPERTS of the League of Nations encamped in trying to devise ways of reducing naval armaments talked and quarreled for two weeks in Rome and adjourned without practical results. Too many of the nations wanted to increase instead of decrease their naval defenses. Russia's demands concerning the Black and Baltic seas were enough in themselves to disrupt the conference. Another may be called later by the league.

FORMER FIELD MARSHAL LUDENDORFF, Adolf Hitler and others were put on trial in Munich for their part in the comic opera Bavarian "putsch" of last November. Court prosecutors and spectators were all most friendly toward the accused and there was every sign that the trial would be a farce.

MARY SUCCEEDS ON MAIN STREET

By LAURA MILLER

"IT HAIN'T NEVER BEEN DONE"

She started off on the wrong foot, seemingly. One of the worst girls in high school, at seventeen hilariously prouising to bring home a nice, handsome cowboy, she became a teacher who "frode with the ranchers, gossiped with the women, danced with the cow-punchers, and didn't go to church but once while in Wyoming." Can't you imagine all the old granies—male and female—shaking their heads?

Actually, Olga Edith Gunkle was blessed with superb natural health and energy. The schoolgirl "saved herself from disgrace" by cramming four years' work into three, and loving grubby children of a mission class. Came college, university and settlement work. But let Olga Edith be her own vigorous self. She discovered that:

"In New York or Wyoming people needed something besides food and raiment and leisure time; they needed something that would make their lives glad and joyous and daring and noble. In other words, they needed 'that something' by many called religion. So I came to Zanesville, Ohio, as a director of religious education (much against my friends' advice, who insisted that I stay in New York) and here I was licensed to preach. My reasons for coming to a small place were these:

"I believe that many people work in a large city, not because they love their job and because of the job's sake, but because they love New York and would work at anything for the sake of staying in it. I don't believe it is 'How big is the town your job's in?' that matters so much as 'How big have you made your job in the town you are in?' that really counts."

"The second reason for working in a small town (especially if one's work is rather new in that old tradition hasn't been placed upon a throne and taught to wear a little stick to the tune of, 'It hain't never been done like that before.' Because I was the first director of religious education in Zanesville there were no traditions as to how I should look, act or do my work. So I was able to do things very much more easily and with less friction than if I had been compelled to vanquish old Brother Tradition."

Thirdly, to say in the parlance of the ministerial profession, a young person becomes noted, and well balanced more quickly in a small place than in a large because of her larger opportunities for notice and advancement for efficient, effective work."

THE DESERT AND THE MILK OF HUMAN KINDNESS

"The locality is irrelevant" is the dictum of a successful woman of Tucson, Ariz., when asked whether she thinks the business college graduate should go to a big city for work. "I advise her not to go if she can find work at home," Mrs. Reynolds continues. "There's just one provision that is important. It is that the girl can adhere to a standard of morality which will always preclude loss of self-respect."

This is no preachment from a professional reformer. Novella Routh Reynolds has learned that "an honest code pays in the end" from the many-sided business world that the Reynolds Commercial school keeps her in touch with.

World war need found Mrs. Reynolds and other business women of Tucson just as readily as if they had hurried to Washington or New York. It even brought legitimate prosperity since her service lay in equipping an unparalleled number of students for government work.

Tucson holds, Mrs. Reynolds has found, an extra appeal to the heart of any employed woman who has a spark of the maternal fire. The horde of health seekers need chery suggestions on how to adapt themselves to arid surroundings, unaccustomed conditions and homesickness. Mrs. Reynolds declares this chance for service where service is so sorely and so constantly needed is the most interesting part of being a business woman in Arizona.

Like many successful women, Mrs. Reynolds has developed outside her business an association that keeps her in touch with what women are doing everywhere. In her case the doorway to world interests is membership in the Daughters of the American Revolution. She is historian, Tucson chapter, and member at large on the national historical research committee. In April she was sent as delegate from the D. A. R. to Washington for a conference of the Women's Universal alliance, a world organization.

Slighted Visitor.
"Columbus was sadly disappointed after discovering America." "Yes," observed Miss Cayenne, "The dear old fellow was ahead of his time. Our continent wasn't prepared to invite him to a few banquets and start him out on a lecture tour."

"I believe that many people work in a large city, not because they love their job and because of the job's sake, but because they love New York and would work at anything for the sake of staying in it. I don't believe it is 'How big is the town your job's in?' that matters so much as 'How big have you made your job in the town you are in?' that really counts."

"The second reason for working in a small town (especially if one's work is rather new in that old tradition hasn't been placed upon a throne and taught to wear a little stick to the tune of, 'It hain't never been done like that before.' Because I was the first director of religious education in Zanesville there were no traditions as to how I should look, act or do my work. So I was able to do things very much more easily and with less friction than if I had been compelled to vanquish old Brother Tradition."

Too Late

An Englishman and a Scotchman were having a discussion on success in life. Said the former: "Success is easier than most people think. Why, when I was a young man I knew a youth who got a job in a big city hotel, and it wasn't long before he owned the whole place." The Scotchman sagely nodded his head. "Aye, no doot," he said, "but since then they've invented cash registers."

WHO WILL IT BE?

The shape that the political machine is getting into as regards the next presidential candidates has got everybody up in the air.

So far as the democratic party is concerned it looks like the nomination will necessarily go to a "dark horse." None of the candidates now in the race have much of a chance to be the man. They party is too badly divided for either of them to go into the nominating convention with votes enough to nominate. It may be that two of them can trade and by massing their strength land the plum, but it looks like all things point to a dark horse—a man who has not been in the contest. It will probably take the services of a man entirely out of the fight, to gain the support of enough votes to nominate, because the lines of demarcation between all of the avowed candidates is so tightly drawn that a compromise in any of them would be a difficult thing.

On the other side of the house, our black and tan republican opponents are also being placed in rather a serious position as regards a candidate.

They can hardly afford to go back on Coolidge and choose a different standard bearer, for that would utterly discredit their present administration and they are also painfully aware that his record and his affiliation in the Tea Pot Dome oil graft, will cause him to be a heavy load to carry, even with the millions of hoolie that would be contributed in an effort to hold the present bunch in power by the crooked money interests in New York. If he is the candidate and the democrats make any kind of a fight, he will certainly be defeated. He is the weakest public leader the republican party has had since the days of Rutherford B. Hays.

On the other hand Hiram Johnson, a lily white and a fearless and honest man, is gaining in strength every day but he is inveterately hated by Wall Street and the black and tans and can hardly have a chance at the nomination.

Silent Cal with all of his oil taint and absolute imbecility as a president has a cinch, so far, as the republican nominee. If his nomination does not utterly defeat the G. O. P. then wall street and the other high rolling hoodlars have bought this country outright and we will catch the devil by consumers and laborers taxation for another four years, and by that time revolution will be about ready to blaze forth.

IMPROVEMENT ORDINANCE No 2.

An Ordinance to provide for certain improvements on Second Avenue North from the East property line of Sixth Street to the East property line of First Street and on First Street from the South property line of Second Avenue North to the North property line of Second Avenue South.

Be it ordained by the Town Council of the Town of Clanton, Alabama, as follows:

Section 1. That Second Avenue North from the East property line of Sixth Street to the East property line of First Street, and First Street from the South property line of Second Avenue North, to the North property line of Second Avenue South, shall be graded.

That the North and South sides of a fifty foot roadway on Second Avenue North from the East property line of Sixth Street to the West property line of First Street, and the East and West sides of a thirty six foot roadway on First Street from the South property line of Second Avenue North to the North property line of Second Avenue South be curbed with Portland cement concrete combined curb and gutter, the curb and gutter to be six inches thick and the gutter thirty inches wide.

That the side walks on each side of Second Avenue North from the East property line of Sixth Street to the West property line of First Street, and First Street from the South property line of Second Avenue North to the North property line of Second Avenue South, shall be paved with portland cement sidewalk paving for a width of five feet.

That vitrified clay drainage pipes, inlets of brick, laid in cement mortar with cast iron covers shall be constructed where necessary along said street and avenue.

That alley crossings shall be paved with portland cement concrete paving eight inches thick.

Section 2. That said improvements shall be made in accordance with the established grades on file in the offices of said Street and Avenue, and according to full details, drawings, plans, specifications and surveys of said work, and estimates of said work, which shall be prepared by the City Engineer, as early as practical, and placed by him on file in the office of the Town Clerk at Clanton, at least two weeks prior to the date hereinafter fixed for hearing objections, remonstrances or protests before the Town Council where property owners who may be affected by said improvements, may see and examine the same.

Section 3. That the cost of constructing said improvements shall be assessed against the property abutting on the portions of the Highway, so improved.

(a) That the cost of improvements at or upon street, avenue, intersection shall be assessed against the lots or parcels of land abutting on said highways so intersecting for one half block in each direction.

(b) That the cost of said sidewalk or alley paving at the intersection of any alley with said street or avenue, where said improvements are made shall be assessed in fair proportion against the respective lots or parcels of land abutting or cornering on the alley at such intersection.

(c) That the cost of laying drainage pipe and constructing inlets shall be assessed against all lots or parcels of land abutting on the portion of the highway so improved and drained by said drainage pipe and inlets.

(d) That no assessment shall exceed the cost of such improvements, or the increased value of such property by reason of the special benefits derived from such improvements.

Section 4. That the property owners along said Street or Avenue shall be required to see their water pipes are placed at least eighteen inches below the grade of the Street or avenue and should any property owner fail or refuse, upon demand to comply with this section then the contractor in charge of said work shall lower or relay said lines, and the cost of such work be charged to the property owner and included in the assessment against such property owners, and collected as such assessment for street and avenue improvements are collected.

Section 5. That the estimated cost of said improvement is $12,500.00, and that the Council of the Town of Clanton, will meet on the 3rd day of March, 1924, in the Council Chamber of the Town office of Clanton, at 10 o'clock a. m. to hear any objections, remonstrances or protests that may be made against said improvements, the manner of making the same or the character of material to be used.

Read, approved, and adopted, this the 13th day of February, 1924.

L&N Employees With Their Families Would Form A City Of 200,000

The Louisville & Nashville Railroad has on its pay-roll 52,000 employees to whom it paid in 1923 over $75,000,000. Most of them have families, and every one, no doubt, contributes to the support of some family.

Computing by the Government average of 4.3 persons to an American family, there are wholly supported or to some extent benefited, by the wages of L. & N. employees, over 200,000 people—a number greater than the population of a city the size of Atlanta, Georgia.

In addition, thousands of other people are given employment in various industries from which the L. & N. purchases materials and supplies of all descriptions, aggregating in 1923 over $37,000,000.

Moreover, these 200,000 people of the L. & N. family constitute a complete city; because there is no class of labor, and hardly a single profession, not represented among the L. & N.'s 52,000 employees.

These, and other facts which the L. & N. is making public, will enable you to realize the economic value of this great transportation system to the territory it serves. They should help you to remember that as this railroad prospers so you and your neighbors prosper, and that whatever hurts the L. & N. and restricts its capacity for profitable public service must necessarily hurt you and your community.

New Year Greeting

The good old year of 1923 has become now a memory of the past. With all of its joys and sorrows it is buried and, as the days go by, it will become merely a misty dream.

We have all had to face some trials and sorrows, but in the main, it was a kind and gracious year to us all. In bidding it good bye, I wish to express my sincere thanks to the many friends and customers who have loyally stood by me with their friendship and patronage and have enabled me to wind up the old year with a feeling of satisfaction with my success and with a steadfast hope for the future.

I wish for you one and all, the successful culmination of your brightest hopes for the New Year. May good health, happiness and prosperity attend you through the days to come. May 1924 have for all of us happy surprises and untold blessings.

I am deeply grateful to every one who has favored me with their patronage during the year just gone and most respectfully ask that you will continue to give me the opportunity to deserve your confidence and trade.

Your friend,

G. C. Armstrong

BIRTH OF A NATION

We are pleased to announce that the Wadesonian Theatre will put on here for three days—March 27, 28, 29 that greatest of moving picture successes, The Birth of a Nation.

No truly loyal white American citizen can afford to miss seeing this wonderful Southern picture. It will learn you a great deal about the lurid history of your section if you belong to the generation that has grown up since the 60's and will show you some of the awful and shameful conditions that your fathers and mothers had to face in making for you the most wonderful home land in the world.

It carries a true and historical chain of events that the great Southland had to face after the civil war. Every man, woman and child who can possibly do so owes to themselves to see this show.

SPEND THE DAY "QUILT PIECING"

One of the most enjoyable days was spent Tuesday when Mr. and Mrs. D.H. Centry, keepers of the Almshouse, entertained their neighbors at a spend the day quilt piecing. Everyone was busy with their needle until noon when a lovely dinner was served. Afterwards the quilt piecing was continued and at the close of the day work by the help of "Julia" the faithful cook of the day, three pretty quilt tops were finished.

Included in the quilt piecing and dinner were Mr. and Mrs. Lobe Vanden, Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Bates, Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Bean, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Maddox, Mrs. Grover Jones, Mrs. Callie Teel, Misses Loutishie Bean and Byrdie Teel.

THE HOSPITAL

Mr. Posey Williamson went home Tuesday.

Mrs. Willie Williams was able to go home Saturday.

Mrs. D. L. Jarmon of Jemison is a patient for several days last week.

Mrs. R. P. Mims is rapidly improving since the removal of a tumor.

Mr. K. F. Davis of Autauga county was here this week with a little son who had sustained serious injury by getting his leg and hip crushed under a wagon wheel.

Rev. W. W. Robinson was operated on Wednesday.

Mr. Guy Abram, who was brought in by Dr. Hayes after being crushed under some heavy timber, is recovering.

Mr. George Marcus was a patient several days last week.

Mr. Cory Robinson was in Tuesday to have a bullet removed from his leg.

Mrs. Irene Stewart of Prattville is visiting her sister Miss Gardner.

NOTICE OF SALE

At the request of the County Board of Education I am asking for sealed bids to be presented to the Board on or before Friday, March 28th for the sale of the Mt. Carmel school building of this county. (This building is located about 9 miles West of Clanton.)

County Supt. Education

THE TUESDAY PRIMARY

Last Tuesday the quietest election ever held in Alabama was pulled off. It was called a preferential presidential primary.

The names of Musgrove, Dimmore and Underwood were on the ticket. The returns indicate that Underwood carried the state by about 24,000 majority.

The result in Chilton county was an Underwood victory, but at this hour we have failed to get the exact figures.

Musgrove talks of making a contest.

Dimmore was hardly known in the race.

CHILTON COUNTY MUSICAL ASSOCIATION

Tuesday night the Chilton County Musical Association was organized at the Wadesonian Theatre. Col. J. O. Middleton was elected president; Col. Percy Pitts secretary; Mr. J. Z. Mims treasurer; Mr. T. J. Bucell business manager.

This is a move in the right direction and deserves the hearty support of all the people in Clanton and Chilton county.

The program put on Tuesday night by the Weldon Music Co. at the Wadesonian consisting of music furnished by Messrs. C. R. Foss, Clarence Bice of Thorsby, Mr. and Mrs. Percy Pitts and Mr. Victor Wahn was quite a creditable affair. For some time the large audience was highly entertained by splendid music.

After the program Colonel Middleton together with the other officers met at the Weldon Music House for the purpose of making arrangements to organize a band. We had a band here once and all remember the valuable service rendered to the town and county by the same.

THANKS THE KU KLUX KLAN

Please allow me space in our paper to express my warmest thanks to my neighbors and friends for their many acts of kindness to me since my misfortune in losing my barn and contents by fire. They have been uniformly generous and my heart goes out to them in appreciation.

And I would especially extend my heartfelt thanks to the members of the Ku Klux Klan for the splendid donation in cash of $50.00 which they brought to my home last week and for the noble letter of sympathy and assurance of good will that accompanied the donation.

May God bless them everyone and hold up their hands in such splendid acts of service as this.

Gratefully yours,
W. S. COX

Greager, of Texas, was accused of land frauds and under the fire of Senator Hefflin's guns during inquiry Greager accused Hefflin of being a K. K. K. Hefflin replied that whether or not he was a K. K. K. was not at issue, but when it was he would face that question. The point being inquired into was whether or not Greager was guilty of land frauds and entitled to a sentence in the penitentiary. Those who dodge issues had best let Hefflin alone.—Alabama Traveler.

OLD VETERAN WRITES

Twenty four years ago, a man who had rendered faithful service in the Army of the "Confederate States," conceived the idea to erect a home which should be a place of refuge for the men who wore the gray as they became old and unable to fight the battles of life. For such an important undertaking it took the warm heart and the large brain of Jefferson Manly Faulkner to plan and direct the erection of the best Confederate Home to be found in any State in the Southland. In the years passed as well as now it has been a place of refuge for many who were down and out. Many of them have heard their last roll call, and their bones are now resting in the two cemeteries at the "Home."

The last Legislature honored his memory by changing the name from "Confederate Veterans Home" to "Jefferson Manly Faulkner Soldiers Home." When he died, his remains were interred in the cemetery at Marbury. Recently however, Mrs. Faulkner and her two sons have decided to remove his body and place it away by the side of his comrades in Arms who are buried here. This is very commendable and fitting as "The Home" was his pride while he lived and it seems entirely proper that he should sleep with those who loved and honored him while he lived, and whose memory is recorded by those who remain. "The good that men do lives after them."

It can be truly said of the Faulkners that they loved and served the South in times of war as well as peace. His father, who was a Baptist preacher, commanded a regiment of Confederate soldiers during the War between the States. While Jefferson Manly Faulkner was Captain of a company which followed his lead on many hard fought fields of battle.

It is useless to say that they were both Democrats and aided largely in the redemption of the State from a dictatorial misrule. Thinking of their loyalty to the cause of the Southland has caused a retrospection of the revealing fact that when one of our heroes who had worn the Gray became a "scalawag" and betrayed the best interests of his people, hundreds of men for the right and the supremacy of the "White Race." The Confederate Veteran was never "black and tan" with the exception of two men. I can not recall the names of the Confederate officers from General Robert E. Lee on down who failed to live up to the principles for which they had fought.

General James Longstreet who has never taken any part in politics found himself at the close of the War with no means of support and suffering from wounds received in battle. General U. S. Grant, who had been at the military Academy with him prior to the War appointed him as receiver of customs at New Orleans. His acceptance of the appointment met instant censure at the hands of Southern people, and the men of his old Corps, which he had so ably and gallantly commanded turned their backs to him, because he was the recipient of favors at the hands of a President who was considered an enemy to the South. Billy Mahan, of Virginia, a man who had acquired fame as a General in the Confederate Army, and who had led with gallantry in many battles, in the days of "Reconstruction," turned traitor to his people and by affiliation with the negro and their allies was able to set up his office at their hands, when the civilization of his state was at stake and while supremacy seemed to be a thing of the past. Men who had served under him, and who honored him for his leadership in battle, turned from him with contempt and loathing such as Benedict Arnold received at the hands of his Countrymen.

In spite of defeat in War, "Confederate Veterans" as a rule, were very loyal and true to the cause of their native States. And it was but a few that aligned themselves with the "Kinky Heads"—and that's that.

On Sunday the 10th, at the "Home" Mr. W. H. Yarbrough and Mrs. N. L. Lachley were married. Reverend

OF MR. SID JOHNSON

As we go to press the Sad comes telling of the death of Mr. Sid Johnson who died at The St. Thomas Hospital in Nashville, Tenn. Mr. Johnson in his early boyhood days was a citizen of Clanton, and had quite a number of friends in Clanton and throughout the county, and when he was just a young man he worked with the L. & N. Company as brakeman back years when they used the old pin system, and air were not heard of by the railroad.

He had been connected with the L. & N. Company continuously for thirty years, worked him from brakeman to Flagman, then to freight conductor, and later was promoted to passenger conductor, and at the time of his death held the position as passenger conductor of the Fast Train Pan-American.

Mr. Johnson's death was quite a shock to his many friends who loved him, and the officials of the L. & N. Company that he had been connected with for so many years, he was almost every man, woman, and child between Montgomery and his place will be hard to replace.

He leaves a widow, and two or three children, one of his daughters is the wife of Mr. Claude Reynolds of Clanton, and his wife lives in Montgomery, Alabama where Mr. Johnson could be at the end of his run. Just a few years ago Mr. Johnson's mother died and was buried at Clanton, and it is believed that Mr. Johnson's body will be shipped here, and buried in the family cemetery on Wednesday afternoon.

CHANDLER ENTERTAINS

A most delightful social event of the past week was a dinner party given by Mrs. D. D. Petrey. The apartment was actively decorated with palms and narcissus. At the close of the game a lovely salad plate with tea was served, and the guests drew numbers from a hat. Mrs. Guy Higgins drew the highest number and was presented with a box of linen handkerchiefs. Mrs. L. C. Ross received a land made apron for the lowest number. About thirty-six were present to enjoy this lovely hospitality.

W. A. Reynolds Entertains

The Women's Missionary Society of the Church were entertained on Tuesday afternoon by Mrs. W. A. Reynolds. The mission study on "Inmost interestingly discussed." were made to serve dinner the following day and an Easter Program held in near future. After the meeting the hostess, assisted by Mrs. Guy Roberts and Mrs. Mat Wooley served a lovely salad plate with coffee.

THE ROAD-HOUSE RAIDS.

(By Mrs. Shelby G. Taylor.)

Again, another dragging of the seine through the quagmire of iniquity! This time thirteen young girls ensnared in the meshes. Just think! Thirteen of our young girls this past Monday night who should have been under parents' or guardians' supervision adrift at midnight or thereabouts! With whom? And where? The appalling fact remains that the self-satisfied mothers of these misguided girls could hardly be convinced that their daughters were the miscreants. Even under the incriminating proof of their vigilant committee of censure.

From hearsay it is gathered the culprits bore telltale evidence of their violation and breakage of social laws. This casting aside of all moral regard and consequences, has been openly continuing for months. Last Summer the practice flourished like chickadees in the Spring, and seemed equally as infectious. "Park cars" were guilty revealed at every road bend, while legitimate driving was menaced by the heedless, one-handed steering of the "petting-party" heroes, who gavotte over the "highways" in serpentine lunges and sways. "Love me and the world is mine"—also the road.

A nation rises to the status of its womanhood. Now a shockingly blighting prospect can we behold when the young womanhood of the country is running the gamut of questionable thrills—free dom unchecked and all consideration of moral rectitude void and lacking. A sweeping assertion.

But, what are we to think with the evidences overwhelming what our better ideals would have us believe? Can we not purge our community of this cancer which is tearing like some foul and hideous vulture into the very vitals of our civilization, while civilization is enchained with its selfish, pleasure-loving indifference?

Can we not, each one to an individual, take up the cudgels in this crusade against vice in its worse form, a surreptitious form, where it is least looked for and less expected?

How do we know, any of us, where or when this insidious monster will attack, the moment its poison fangs will imbed themselves into the hearts we hold dearest.

A community stands valantly in its welfare against deaths. To a man the people shoulder weapons to guard against the onslaught of a dread epidemic or scourge threatening the life of its people. So when can we not—mothers, fathers, physicians, ministers and the entire representation of a community—have the force of this question with its consequences brought home?

There is a death far worse than a mere physical death. It is the death of souls. It is the death of all that is fine in womanhood. It is the decay of the moral fiber of our young womanhood—the hope of the nation. Who of parents would not infinitely rather stand beside the cold, waxen corpse of a loved daughter, and believe her "safe in the arms of Jesus" rather than have her life, defiled, degraded, and finally damned.

Prohibition has its sleuths who are ever alertly and painstakingly on the scent for any violations. Yet, rather a hundred moonshiners be allowed unmolested ply of their unlicensed trade

ADVANTAGES OF THE SMUTTY STORY

(By permission of Commercial Club) It advertises a man's ignorance. It displays a lack of a sense of propriety.

It indicates an undesirable state of inner character.

It reveals the nature of the fibre of the soul.

It shows that the man's better self is not in control.

It illustrates the sordidness of soul when unrestrained.

It means meagerness of resources of entertainment.

It proclaims coarseness of one's idea of humor.

It is the poorest sort of excuse for fun.

It reveals a fissure in character which, when widened, cracks.

It suggests the possibility of greater deffilement.

It proves a disappointment to every right thinking friend.

It stultifies the testimony of other good friends.

It soils the inner life of every hearer.

It hangs pictures in the chamber of imagination.

It provokes men who prefer purity in word as well as deed.

It disgusts men who dwell on the wholesome side of life.

It nauseates men who are fighting for right and hate dirt.

It makes no friends but loses many.

It sounds the note of possible personal unworthiness.

It convinces none that you are a good man to do business with.

It dishonors parents and wife and children and friends and land and country and business and home and God.

Power of Warships

The total electric energy generated by the six electric battleships, 144,000 kilowatts, if applied to other purposes than driving ships, would—

Light an ordinary household lamp for 637 years.

Operate 3,200 street cars.

Pull 48 electric passenger trains out of the Grand Central terminal in New York.

If applied to a suitable jack would lift a mountain of solid rock 5,000 feet high and 5,000 feet in diameter at the base at the rate of one foot a day.

If used to pump water it would lower the level of Lake Michigan ten feet a year.

If applied to the projection of shells, shooting directly upward, it would bombard the moon at the rate of 200 tons of shells a day.

Would supply the necessary electricity for light, heat and power for 600 towns of 5,000 population each.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

World's First Clock

In 1309 the first clock known to the world was placed in the tower of San Eustorgio, in Milan. In 1344 a clock was installed in the palaces of the nobles at Padua. This was a wonder of mechanism indeed, for, besides indicating the hours, it showed the course of the sun, the revolutions of the planets, the various phases of the moon, the months and the fates of the year.

In 1420 an alarm clock made its appearance. The chronicle has placed on record that this clock sounded a bell at a stated hour, and at the same time a little wax candle was lighted automatically. How this was done we are not told, but it must not be overlooked that until about a hundred years ago we had no means of obtaining light other than the tinder box.—Detroit News.

Tells of Being Captured by Horde of Cannibals

Sir Harry H. Johnston, explorer, linguist, diplomatist, who cut a large figure in the extension of British dominion in Africa, tells in his new book, "The Story of My Life," many interesting stories of his experience with wild tribes of the Dark Continent. On a canoe trip up the Cross river, he relates how "a horde of excited people, armed with guns and spears, waded out into the river and compelled the canoe to stop. In fact dragged it summarily into shallow water. Three or four lusty savages pulled me off at a run to the shore, and carried me off at a run to the town, where I was put in a hut with the door open. Here I had to submit to be stared at for many an hour by hundreds of inquisitive savages, unaware as to the fate of my Kruboy and Ekki servants. Almost over my head, hanging from the smoke-blackened rafters of the house, was a smoked human ham, black and bluish green. About a hundred skulls were ranged round the upper part of the clay walls in a ghastly frieze."

The explorer went through the form of making a treaty with the chiefs, but finding that "a great deal of palm wine had been drunk" cut short his visit after he had made presents of cloth and beads. The chief men of the town "insisted on giving a return present—a hundred yams and two sheep, and at parting an old chief or medicine man bestowed on me a necklace of human knuckle-bones from his own neck."—New York World.

"What do you mean by cheating me like this?" cried the angry customer. "You said this chain would last a lifetime, and here's all the plating worn off in a month."

"Mine friend," replied the little Jew jeweler, "I said that chain would last you a lifetime because when you pay it you look so ill I didn't think you could live so weak out."

A Resume of the More Important Events of Interest Condensed To An Epitomized Form.

Safely reposing in the closet that contains the collections of the state law enforcement department at the State Capitol is a "radio set" bearing the likeness and label of a bottle of scotch whiskey. Officials of the American Railway Express company at Montgomery noted that a package bearing the markings of a radio outfit was leaking. They investigated and found a smashed bottle of liquor and another bottle intact, which were turned over to Walter McAdory. The package was en route from New Orleans to Louisville, Ky.

The Hungarian colony established near Calvert, in Mobile county, some two years ago, has sought to obtain assistance in the form of government funds, which were not obtainable, according to information reaching the state department of agriculture. It is reported that the colony, composed of former industrial workers, brought in from Pennsylvania, has not so far fully adjusted itself to its changed surroundings. The colony is reported to be in need of funds for seed and fertilizers for the crop this year.

Farmers of Alabama apparently intend to use fertilizers on a heavy scale this season, and to plant early, according to information from the state department of agriculture. The fertilizer movement so far this spring is progressing at a more rapid rate than even last year, according to officials of the department, in spite of the fact that 1933 witnessed an unusually heavy consumption of fertilizer in Alabama.

A jury in the Etowah circuit court awarded Miss Nellie Hamilton $4,000 damages in her suit against the Gadsden General hospital. She alleged that as she was leaving the hospital several months ago, having been dismissed by her physician, she was seized and held a prisoner for 11 hours because she did not pay her hospital bill.

The auxiliary schooner Markeeta which arrived in Mobile flying the British flag, reported to customs officials that her cargo of 930 cases of liquor was thrown overboard during rough weather in the gulf, was seized by government officials on a libel filed in the federal court charging that registry of the vessel had been changed unlawfully.

The proposed interurban railway from Florence to Nashville, Tenn., by way of Mt. Pleasant and Franklin, Tenn., appears to be getting closer to an actuality with each passing day. The options which are being taken for the right-of-way contained the stipulations that they are void unless work is started on the road by August 1.

One of the longest legal documents ever filed in Walker is that of the Alabama Power company in the suit brought by H. E. McCormick of Birmingham. Mr. McCormick says he owns a half interest in the site upon which the Gorgas steam plant was constructed and prays that the property be sold for division of the proceeds.

Efficient first aid work is having a marked influence in lowering the death rate due to accidents in and about the mines in Alabama, and in order to stimulate interest in this line of work, Milton H. Fies, representing the DeBardeleben corporation, announces a first aid contest to be held at Jasper on March 21.

Possibly one of the smallest stills on record was captured by Sheriff Moon and Deputy Sheriff Allgood in the northern part of Lee county, near the Chambers county line. The capacity of the "baby" still was about four gallons.

A movement has been started by L. H. Manning, Thurmond Harris and others to secure for Sheffield an up-to-date athletic field.

Clyde Taylor, a young man who resides about five miles east of Fort Deposit, while operating a sawmill, sustained a mangled hand.

County game warden, Dr. G. W. Brown, has organized a hawk and crow extinguisher association for Colbert county.

G. T. Harris, a prominent farmer of Jasper, Route 3, stated that he had already prepared eight acres of land for watermelons and just as soon as the ground gets dry he says he will plant the seed.

A. H. Echols, 112 1-2 South Twenty-second street, Birmingham, found dead in a vacant lot between Twenty-ninth and Twenty-ninth streets and Seventh and Eighth avenues, North, was believed to have been Birmingham's latest victim of liquor poisoning.

The jury in the $20,000 damage suit of S. A. O'Quinn of Tuscaloosa against James F. Alston returned a verdict awarding $500 damages to the plaintiff to compensate him for injuries which he is alleged to have received when an elevator in the Alston Building fell with him in May, 1932.

The Attalla Gun club has purchased two acres of land near that city for club purposes. It is understood the members intend to create the nucleus for a country club to be built later on. The club has enrolled 40 new members as the result of a recent drive.

Ten thousand little booklets containing brief but complete information concerning Florence and the Muscle Shoals district have been printed by the Florence Chamber of Commerce and are being distributed through all sections of the county.

Two small boys, in their teens faced Alderman Harris in Phoenix City mayor's court. One of the boys gave his age as 16, and the other as 17 when called to answer the charge of public drunkenness. They were fined a small amount and given a warning.

E. T. Terry, well known merchant who has been conducting a general merchandise business, both wholesale and retail, in Huntsville during the last several years, has filed a voluntary petition in the bankruptcy court, listing liabilities of approximately $32,000 and assets of $6,000.

Gadsden is to furnish 25 of the 100 candidates to be put through at the Dokey spring ceremonial at Birmingham, April 15. It is also announced that the temples of Chattanooga and Montgomery will attend by special trains.

Fayette county farmers are taking advantage of fair weather to turn the soil. Stalks are being cut and spring plowing is beginning in earnest. Much gardening and sowing of oats have been witnessed in that county the past few days.

Following the publication of lower rates on coal in the Muscle Shoals district, Secretary Jones of the Chamber of Commerce, announced that an agreement had been reached for a reduction in the rate on gasoline.

The past few days of sunshine has seen great activity in farm life in DeKalb county. All fertilizer dealers and many farmers say that there will be a 25 per cent increase in the acreage of cotton with 100 per cent increase of fertilizer to the acre.

EGGS FOR PRESERVING SHOULD BE FRESH

Putting Down Eggs in Water Glass Solution.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Eggs in water glass properly preserved will keep in good condition from six to ten months and can be used satisfactorily for all purposes in cooking and for the table. They will prove an economy for use in cakes, puddings and other cookery, and a convenience when the hens are not laying enough for ordinary daily needs, or when it is impossible to send to the store for the usual order, or when unexpected company comes.

Eggs fresh from the nest, gathered as soon as possible after being laid, are best for preserving. When only one day old they will be almost equally satisfactory, but should not be "put down" after they have been kept three or more days. Best results have been obtained by the United States Department of Agriculture by using one part water glass to nine parts of water.

Select a five-gallon earthen or stone crock which will hold about 15 dozen eggs and clean it thoroughly. Scald it and allow it to dry. Heat ten to twelve quarts of water to the boiling point and cool it. When cool, measure nine quarts of water into the crock, add one quart of sodium silicate (commonly called water glass), which can be purchased at most drug stores. Stir well to mix the solution thoroughly.

Put Eggs in Any Time.

The solution is now ready for the eggs, which may be put in all at once or from time to time as they are obtained. Before any eggs are put in the crock it should be set in a cool dry place where it can remain undisturbed. If any attempt is made to move the jar after it has eggs in it some of the eggs might crack and spoil, affecting the entire crock. The solution should cover the eggs at least two inches at all times. If any of the solution evaporates, more should be mixed in the same proportion and added. If the jar is covered with a light lid or waxed paper, very little evaporation will occur.

CANNED VEGETABLES IN DIFFERENT WAYS

Family Soon Tires of Them Served in Same Way.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

If canned vegetables are always served in exactly the same way, the family soon tires of them whether put up at home or bought. There are many ways of dressing these products up, however, to make them more tempting.

No matter how canned vegetables are served, they should be boiled thoroughly after they are poured from the can and before they are tasted, the United States Department of Agriculture counsels the housekeeper. A little onion juice or celery salt or a bit of green pepper or celery tops or a small piece of bay leaf, improves the flavor of many canned vegetables.

Here are some suggestions: Canned tomatoes, spinach, asparagus, okra, eggplant or corn can be scalloped by spreading in layers in a baking dish, with bread crumbs between. Each layer is sprinkled with butter, salt, pepper, or paprika, seasoned with the liquor from the can, and any other preferred flavoring. Bread crumbs usually form the top layer, so that when the dish is baked, it is attractively browned.

Canned sweet potatoes may be mashed and baked, or made into sweet potato pie, or baked in layers with slices of apples between.

Canned vegetables can be combined with each other or with the so-called winter vegetables. Tomatoes are good with peppers, or with okra and onion, with corn, with string beans, or both, or with celery. These may be served as vegetable dishes or combined in soups. Turnips and celery in combination are excellent, especially in a white sauce. Diced carrots with canned peas or string beans cut in small pieces, are usually liked. Beets and turnips may be hollowed out to make cups in which peas or small lima beans are served.

A ham bone or piece of bacon put in for flavor, with a little vinegar, is often liked with canned string beans or canned spinach. Spinach soufflé and spinach loaf are two dishes that make plain canned spinach seem different. When serving canned baked beans, they may be reheated to advantage with a little extra seasonings consisting of a tablespoonful of molasses, a pinch of mustard, and a bit of salt pork or bacon.

Keep Cut Bananas White

Very often it is necessary to cut up bananas for salad or dessert and leave them standing for some time. As a rule they turn black and spoil the appearance of the dish. This can be prevented if you sprinkle the cut fruit with a little lemon juice. The juice will improve the flavor.

A Baking Hint

Take a dripping pan that will about fit your gas oven and fill with beach sand; put it underneath the first grate of your oven and you will have no difficulty in browning your cake or biscuits on top.

DO NOT SPREAD DUST IN CLEANING HOUSE

Vacuum Cleaner and Dustless Mop Are Favored.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The feather duster and the broom scatter the dust; the vacuum cleaner and the dustless mop take it up. A carpet is not as easy to clean as a rug; too many ornaments catch dust. There are several hand-power carpet sweepers on the market not requiring electricity, any of which collect the dust instead of scattering it. A dustless mop can be used anywhere.

A Dustless Mop Can Be Used Anywhere.

If a broom must be used, the dust may be held to some extent by scattering wet shredded newspaper or tea leaves or any of the harmless sweeping compounds offered for sale. The strokes should be even and firm and taken in such a way that the broom or brush is kept on the floor most of the time and not flirled through the air, says the United States Department of Agriculture.

The dust cloth should be held in a fairly compact mass, so that the surface to be cleaned is wiped or polished and at the same time the dust is held by the cloth. Small pictures and bric-a-brac should be dusted and removed from the room or placed in a pile and covered. Draperies and portieres should be taken down or pinned up. Furniture, mirrors and large pictures should be dusted and covered with cloths. Both cleaning and dusting should be done from the top down.

Household Questions

The kitchen should be the pleasantest room in the house. How about yours?

Before using a lamp wick soak it in strong vinegar, then dry it thoroughly and it will burn brightly and without any unpleasant smoke or smell.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Daugherty's Resignation Is Expected, Following New Corruption Charges.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

IF HARRY DAUGHERTY is still attorney general of the United States when this reaches the reader the expert prognosticators in Washington are badly at fault. Last Thursday they predicted his resignation from the cabinet would be in the hands of the President by the end of the week, and that it would take effect on Monday, the day when Secretary of the Navy Denby was to step out of office.

Mr. Daugherty went to Florida for a stay of two weeks, but was summoned back to Washington, arriving Friday. Already the President had changed his mind about asking the attorney general to retire, according to reports, and was considering his successor. Those said to have been approached included Senator Borah of Idaho, Judge William S. Kenyon of the Federal Court of Appeals, Federal Judge Frank S. Fletcher of Idaho and Curtis D. Wilbur, a Supreme court judge of California.

President Coolidge's change of mind presumably was brought about partly by the sensational revelations of official corruption to the federal grand jury in Chicago that indicted Charles R. Forbes, former director of the veterans' bureau. These were not related to the Forbes case, so the information was carried to Washington by a special prosecutor. Some of it seriously involves the Department of Justice, relating to procurement of pardons for federal prisoners. This is only a part of the matters that will be investigated by the senate committee named to handle the charges against Daugherty. The committee is made up of Senators Brookhart of Iowa, chairman; Moses of New Hampshire, Jones of Washington, Ashurst of Arizona and Wheeler of Montana.

This Department of Justice evidence was not the most sensational carried to Washington from Chicago, however. Charges of wholesale corruption and graft during the Harding administration were made against certain persons known as "the Ohio crowd," and two members of the house of representatives, as yet not publicly named, are directly accused of having collected between $150,000 and $200,000 in two or three years from federal prisoners and their friends as payment for pardons, paroles, commutations and other forms of clemency. If the charges are substantiated, these congressmen face expulsion from the house and also indictment for a penal offense. As soon as Special Prosecutor Crim reported in Washington, President Coolidge directed the Department of Justice to take immediate steps toward the prosecution of the two representatives. The house was asked to investigate the matter by Representative Garrett of Tennessee.

Whether officials of the Department of Justice were in collusion with the members of congress who received payments for dispensation of clemency is not clear. One official, closely identified with the Harding administration who was active in obtaining clemency in cases in which the members of congress were interested, is said to have been their dupe.

THOSE telegrams that passed between Washington and E. B. McLean in Florida and the persons that handled them occupied much time of the senate oil lease committee last week. A code expert of the army signal corps translated the messages that were in cipher and Mrs. Duckstein, an operative of the bureau of investigation in the Department of Justice, admitted sending the telegram warning McLean that the committee was on his trail. She said the code she used was obsolete. William J. Burns, chief of the bureau, testified that McLean was a "dollar-a-year" operative and that the message was sent to him in the hope that he would resign that position. More interesting was this telegram sent to McLean by Mrs. Bennett, editorial writer on the Washington Post: "Saw principal. Delivered message. He says greatly appreciates and sends regards to you and Mrs. McLean. There will be no rocking of boat and no resignations. He expects reaction from unwarranted political attacks."

Senator Heflin of Alabama read this to the senate and ventured the opinion that "principal" meant President Coolidge. He therefore asked that the committee call on Mr. Bennett to explain just what the message meant and who it was that he saw. Senator Caraway also talked about that message and told the senate: "I'd like the President to say whether or not he entered into communication with McLean in Florida. One hundred million people would like to know." Some of his allusions to Mr. Coolidge were undignified and in wretched taste.

Caraway's question was answered Thursday when two telegrams from President Coolidge to McLean were read to the committee. They sounded innocuous and Mr. Coolidge explained in a statement that the first related to the district commissioners and the second was in regard to a message from McLean congratulating the President on his statement concerning the demand for Denby's resignation.

The President nominated Samuel Knight of San Francisco as special counsel to take charge of the government's suit to stop the Standard Oil company from naval reserve No. 1 in California. Senator Walsh told the senate committee that he had learned Mr. Knight had acted as attorney for the Equitable Trust company of California, a Rockefeller institution, and indicated that for this reason he would oppose his confirmation.

REPRESENTATIVE LONGWORTH'S compromise tax bill setting the maximum surtax rate at 37 per cent won in the house, the insurgent Republicans falling into line. But what the senate will do with the measure is a question. President Coolidge let it be known that he still wants the Mellon bill passed and it is believed the senate finance committee might be persuaded to report it as a substitute for the measure passed by the house. But Senators Watson and Moses have informed the President that the 25 per cent surtax would not be approved on the floor of the senate and that the figure probably would be boosted to 37 per cent, or perhaps as high as 40 per cent.

THERE appeared in the house last week a strong sentiment in favor of a soldiers' bonus bill providing for a cash bonus or issuance of an endowment insurance policy, at the option of the beneficiary. The ways and means committee completed the hearings on bonus legislation, during which charges were made that concerns with which Secretary Mellon and Secretary Weeks are connected have been contributing funds to the anti-bonus campaign. Senator Caraway already had written Secretary Mellon about that story, and the latter replied that he has never authorized or co-operated with any person "in raising any fund whatever" that had for its purpose any propaganda "against the bonus measure, nor any other measure that has been before congress during the time that Mr. Mellon has occupied his present office."

SENATOR HIRAM JOHNSON issued a statement early in the week to the effect that the Coolidge campaign managers knew they were beaten in all direct primary states where the voters have a free voice in the selection of delegates and that, consequently, they were resorting to petty tricks to defeat the Johnson candidacy. On Tuesday the Republicans of Iowa met in convention, chose their 20 delegates to the national convention and instructed them for Coolidge. On Wednesday the Republican convention of Minnesota was held and in a majority of them Coolidge was endorsed for the nomination, making it virtually certain that the state's delegation at Cleveland will be instructed for him. The lack of opposition to Coolidge from radical sources in these two states, and the withdrawal of LaFollette from the primary contests in several Northwestern states, were looked upon by some politicians as indications of the probable formation of a third party. LaFollette says his refusal to be a candidate for the Republican nomination is due to his feeling that his present duty lies in the senate, and also to his certainty that in the Cleveland convention "the steam-roller will be operated by the same forces that controlled it in 1912 and other years."

Mr. McAdoo replied to Senator Reed's attack on him with a letter in which he fiercely denounced the senator, setting forth the Missouriian's rather unenviable political record and asserting that Reed had resorted to "the most glaring disregard for the truth" because McAdoo would not stay out of the Missouri primary contest.

FIFTY-EIGHT members of the house of representatives—35 Democrats, 22 Republicans and 1 Socialist (Berger)—have united in an effort to have the Volstead law so amended as to permit the manufacture and sale of beer, wines and cider containing not to exceed 2.75 per cent alcohol. They introduced a bill to that effect.

ARCHBISHOPS PATRICK J. HAYES of New York and George W. Mundelein of Chicago sailed for Rome on Saturday, having been summoned suddenly to the Vatican, and it was announced that they would be elevated to the cardinalate at a consistory to be held March 24. They will be the first native-born Americans to hold such high office in the Roman Catholic church.

THE Filipino independence mission, which has been active in Washington for some time, was dealt a sad blow last week by a letter from President Coolidge to Manuel Roxas, head of the group of natives. The President covered every angle of the controversy and declared flatly that he did not think the islanders were yet ready for independence. He based his opinion on the danger to the Filipino people of economic or political disaster, in event of withdrawal of American support and protection; on the inability of the Filipino people at present to maintain the financial burden that would be imposed by political independence, and on the lack of political capacity necessary to the people of a minor nation assuming the full responsibility of maintaining itself in the family of nations.

The President asserted the complaints against General Wood were unjustified and that the governor general was "a hard-working, painstaking and conscientious administrator."

ALL who deserted from the army or navy between Armistice day, November 11, 1918, and the formal end of the World war have been granted amnesty and restoration of citizenship by the President, who followed the advice of Secretaries Weeks and Denby in the matter. March 15 is now given as the date for the submission of the report of the Dawes committee of experts. It is said the committee will propose that Germany continue its deliveries of materials for reparations, but that it will not be asked to make any cash payments for five years. Of course it would have to pay the German industrialists for the materials delivered to the allies.

DAIRY FACTS

COWS ON PASTURE NEED SOME GRAIN

The common practice of feeding no grain to dairy cows on early pasture is probably not good economy in the long run, in the opinion of workers in the field of animal feeding at Cornell university.

They point out that pasture grass is a strong stimulant to milk production. If no grain is fed the cows are likely to run down in flesh. This will lead to reduced milk production later on, when the pastures begin to dry up, and heavy feeding then will ordinarily not prevent this reduction. Cows of average production when they go on pasture should be fed at least one-third to one-half of the amount of grain they were receiving when in the barn.

But the grain mixture does not need such expensive high protein feeds as linseed oil, cottonseed meal or gluten feed as are given during the winter season. A mixture made up of equal parts of wheat bran, ground oats and hominy or corn meal would be suitable.

A grain mixture depends upon the kind of roughage with which it is to be fed. Pasture grass is a high protein feed and, furthermore, the proteins it contains are of the highest quality, so high protein feeds may be left out of the grain ration. Yet grass lacks fat or energy-producing nutrients. Except for this deficiency, it is an almost perfect feed for milk production.

In a ration made up of pasture grass and a grain mixture containing no high protein feeds, the protein content will always equal or exceed the amounts called for in feeding standards for cows producing up to sixty pounds of milk daily, as long as pasturage is plentiful, green and succulent. This statement applies only under these conditions. When pastures begin to dry up and get short during July and August the grass contains much less protein than earlier in the season. The grain mixture must then be changed to include some high protein feeds. In addition more grain must be fed to make up for the shortage in pasture.

Best Plan to Grow Into a High-Producing Dairy

"When good grade cows are selling from $150 to $200 per head, there is a tendency to buy cheap ones," says C. B. Finley, dairy expert of Iowa. Many men, he finds, get enthusiastic over the possibilities of dairying, sell their herds and replace them with cheap dairy cows who are only a few choice heifers. No doubt individual cases warrant buying a few good pure bred cows for foundation animals.

The man who grows into the dairy business has an opportunity to reorganize his crop rotation and establish a legume crop so necessary for milk production. As a rule it is also necessary for him to improve his barn and put in a silo, all of which costs money and must be done as profits allow.

Corn Fed to Live Stock

More than 85 per cent of the United States corn crop is fed to live stock and somewhat less than 10 per cent is used for human food, according to recent data compiled by the United States Department of Agriculture. The hog is the largest consumer, 40 per cent being fed to swine on farms. Horses and cattle are next, using 20 and 15 per cent, respectively. The exports of corn, as grain, have never been large.

DAIRY NOTES

Dairying is the balance wheel of agriculture.

It takes no longer to care for a good cow than a poor one.

Inaccurate farm and shipping scales will take their cost out of your pocket several times over in a year.

It is hard to understand why so many cow-keepers have not yet discovered the value of the silo. If they have discovered it they are certainly neglectful in putting it into operation.

The feeding of scrub cows and the "scrub" feeding of good cows are two of the worst mistakes a dairymaid can make.

Do not stint the dairy cow, give her all she will eat of the right kind of feeds, properly balanced, if you expect her to produce liberally.

From 25 to 40 per cent of all tuberculosis in children under five years of age is contracted by using products from tuberculous cows, according to the federal Department of Agriculture.

ROAD BUILDING

ADVOCATE MORE CASH FOR IMPROVED ROADS

Increased federal appropriations for highway aid were advocated at the convention of the American Association of State Highway Officials held at New Orleans "for the mutual profit of more than 13,000,000 American motorists and all the states," according to Charles M. Babcock, Minnesota commissioner of highways and former president of the organization.

Discussions of good roads plans, policies and progress of the association made up the major part of the program. Delegations from nearly all states in this country and from several Canadian provinces and European countries were in attendance.

"The tax on automobiles now takes five cents of every dollar paid for new automobiles, tires and accessories and three cents of the new truck purchase dollar," said Mr. Babcock. This revenue since 1917 has totaled $589,012,021, against $264,782,216 of federal highway aid appropriations during the same period. The government is therefore using less than half the amount collected directly as taxes from highway users in the manner to give them the most direct benefits.

Besides these federal taxes, auto owners are paying county, township and city taxes, wheelage taxes, gasoline taxes and other levies on their cars.

"The most constructive policy demands increase in federal highway aid appropriations, and certainly in sums closely matching federal income from the automotive source. Any other puts our government in the position of retarding highway development, standing in the way of the car and truck owner, who would advance the good roads program along the most sound economic lines."

Highways in Ohio Cost $12,702,731 During Year

During the fiscal year ended June 30 last, Ohio spent $12,702,731 for construction and maintenance of highways, according to the annual report of State Auditor Joseph C. Tracy, part of which has been made public. He said corrections in vouchers during the year saved the state $21,412.71.

The two inspectors provided by special appropriation to make continuous inspection of construction and repair work upon the highways, traveled 38,500 miles and made 1,200 investigations during the year, the report said.

The method now in use in Ohio of awarding road contracts on competitive bids was commended in the report, which declared the "cost-plus" system the most wasteful.

It was asserted in the report that road contractors must be permitted to make a "reasonable" profit or a time will come when experienced contractors will not bid on jobs.

Paved Roads in Illinois Pass All Other States

According to the latest report of the state highway department, Illinois now has 3,851 miles of paved roads in service on the bond issue and state-aid systems. This mileage does not include pavements built by counties, cities or villages. A total of 1,011 miles of new roads were completed in 1923—a record unequalled by any state of the Union. By the end of 1924 officials estimate that the state will offer 4,400 miles of state pavements in addition to the local roads.

This record construction work practically has completed the main or bond issue system which serves both interstate and intrastate traffic. These pavements have been laid over the natural traffic channels. They touch all of the principal cities and towns, and directly serve 80 per cent of the people living in Illinois.

Mason Says Indians Were First Good Roads' Touts

The good roads movement in the Americas had its inception at least 500 years ago among the Indians of Columbia, Dr. J. Alden Mason, archeologist attached to the Field museum here, has found.

Long before white people had any thoughts about the two American continents, the Indians of Columbia were walking on stone paved streets, according to Dr. Mason, reporting on his recent visit to the country.

"And at that time the road builders had some other object in view than those of today. Instead of building streets to keep their feet dry, the natives are said to have been inspired in all probability by a desire to keep off ticks, minute insects, which infest the territory."

Benefits of Good Roads Reach Whole Community

The value of good roads is not to the tourist from out of the state, nor to the tourist in the state anything like it is to the people who live along that road, who use it daily to get to market, to reach the community school or to visit other communities on business or pleasure. Given a good road to church and to school, and a whole community receives the blessings from it.—Anniston 87

THE B. & M. HIGHWAY

The latest move made by the State Highway Commission in regard to the Chilton county section of the highway, took place Tuesday and is in keeping with all of their previous action, so far as it related to Chilton county.

The 17 miles project leading south from the Shelby county line was about to get in a shape where actual work would have to commence. Personally we were surprised at the prospect of getting even this job-tailed section of road work in our county out of the Commission. But they evidently know their game pretty well. They now have discovered a pretext for calling that project off until it is re-advised. That means a period located in the very remote and indefinite future.

Another dastardly waste of time and money is an entirely new survey to be made for this B & M highway from Clanton to Prattville. This road will go 10 miles west of Verbena and through a section of country so sparsely settled that drinking water for tourists has to be carried in thermos bottles.

If they carry on this survey with the speed (?) that has made all of this other survey projects notorious, it will take at least three years to finally locate an indefinite and approximate site for the road.

So, the B & M highway in Chilton county just about as well be forgotten. This present $25,000,000 bond issue will all be spent before actual road building ever commences in Chilton county.

The more probable outcome of the whole business will be that the road route of this highway will be located and the road will be kept on the west side of the railroad all the way from the Shelby county line.

It is a fact that two of the Commissioners, Scruggs and Suttle, have formed an alliance to put over whatever project they see fit, which practically means that a bank or two in Birmingham and the slag syndicate up there will have almost, if not quite, a controlling voice in the highway activities for the future. This is plain talk but a close study of the past activities of the Commission will bear out the statement.

Our sister town of Verbena woke up to the unfair provisions that were being cooked up for the highway and sent a delegation down to protest against this ridiculous and unreasonable change in the route, but they failed to get results. The machinery was already set up and fixed by the Birmingham interests. The record made in spending the money voted by the people for road building purposes this time will inevitably kill any future road bond issue that may be gotten up for 50 years in the future.

This B & M highway could be completed, by way of Wetumpka, for less than the cost of any other route suggested. It would intersect the best farming country in central Alabama practically all of the way and serve 50 per cent more white and intelligent citizens than by this new route. They are the people who are paying for it and justice demands that they should have the service. This new project is egregiously wrong and wicked on the face of it and its very inception is disgraceful.

PRESIDENT WILSON WAS THE BEST FRIEND GERMANS HAD AMONG NATIONS

When Count Von Bernstorff reminded his people that they laid down arms in the World War, not because of any "fourteen points" but because army headquarters urged an armistice to prevent disaster, admittedly he is only relating historical facts. The fact that Bernstorff, who has become a powerful factor in the new Germany is asking his countrymen to accept the bitter truth and be guided by it is typical of the whole trend in the Teutonic republic in the opinion of the American press. Germany is making a spectacular and genuine economic comeback, due to finally facing the facts editors say. These editors agree further that Germany never had a better friend than Woodrow Wilson.

Had it not been for Woodrow Wilson "the Allies, intoxicated with victory, would have hacked Germany to bits," in the opinion of The Milwaukee Journal, which goes on to say, "in time, when the passions aroused by defeat have cleared away, most of Von Bernstorff's countrymen will come to see these things, and when they do, they will also realize that the only nation that might have kept a cool head in forcing the terms of the treaty was removed from the council table when a little clique of politicians deceived the friends of Germany and others in this country into supporting their rejection of the treaty." As The New York Evening World sees it, "Von Bernstorff's most important contribution to the truth of history is his reminder, but for Mr. Wilson, Germany would have lost the Rhine and the Valley of the Saar, which is one of the reasons that a monument to Wilson will one day be raised in the city of Berlin." The wholesome truth is the medicine the Germans need, according to The Baltimore Review which declares "their supreme need is leaders of frankness and courage, who will strike the scales from their eyes and bring them to a true understanding." Until recently, The Salt Lake Tribune suggests "only one German of prominence, Maximilian Harden, has combated the German viewpoint against Wilson." Although The Tribune recalls "there was a time when an element among the French resented Wilson's attitude as entirely too pro-German, it required some time to permit these Frenchmen to discern the basis of Wilson's policy," but "whether the Germans will come to read the history of the peace conference aright remains to be seen."—Birmingham News

NEW RECORD IN AUSTRALIAN RACE WON BY STUDEBAKER

Special-Six Cuts Over Sixteen Hours off best Previous Time Between Fremantle and Sydney, Australia.

Speeding across desert wastes, mountainous roads and rugged mainland, a Studebaker Special Six touring car has just established a new record in a thrilling race against time from Fremantle to Sydney, Australia.

The car was driven by John Burton. It went through the gruelling grind of 2,889 miles in five days, 21 hours and 45 minutes. This is 16 hours and 12 minutes faster than the previous record of 6 days, 13 hours and 57 minutes.

In addition, Burton drove the Studebaker through to a new record in his race, by clipping off considerable time between Fremantle, Adelaide and Melbourne. The Special Six negotiated the entire 2,889 miles under extremely severe conditions and came through in perfect running order.

This new Australian record of Studebaker's comes on the heels of new marks recently established by stock model Studebaker cars in the Syrian desert and in the Union of South Africa.

BAPTIST MISSIONS GREATLY EXTENDED

THE WORK ON FOREIGN FIELDS SHOWS LARGE EXPANSION FROM FORWARD MOVEMENT

NEW COUNTRIES ENTERED

Southern Forces Now Have Missionary Fields on Every Side of Globe With Audience of 900,000,000.

DR. J. F. LOVE, Sec. Foreign Mission Board

Indicating the extent to which the foreign mission work of the Southern Baptist Convention has been set forward by the larger proceeds that have come to it from the Baptist 75 Million Campaign, Dr. J. F. Love, secretary of the Foreign Mission Board, reports that since 1919, when the Campaign was projected, the following increases in the work of that board have been made: Number of foreign missionaries in the field has increased from 500 to 649, number of native workers from 627 to 2,820, number of churches from 505 to 891, number of church members from 49,659 to 183,000, number of self-supporting churches from 143 to 211, number of baptisms per year from 6,635 to 12,611, number of Sunday schools from 780 to 1,447, number of Sunday school pupils from 86,115 to 67,407, number of day schools from 512 to 796, number of pupils in day schools from 15,732 to 22,783, and contributions per year from $173,373 to $437,568.

Nearly as many persons have been baptized by the missionaries on the foreign fields since the Campaign began as had been baptized during all the seventy-five years of missionary operations prior to the inception of this movement, Dr. Love reports. This does not include Russia, where more than one million members have come into the Baptist churches in recent years. Nearly one-fourth as many persons were baptized on the foreign fields last year as there were members, all told, on the foreign fields when the Campaign began.

At the time the Campaign began Southern Baptists were operating only in Mexico, Brazil, Argentina, Chile, Uruguay, China, Japan, Africa and Italy. As a result of the larger proceeds made available from the Campaign the board has been enabled to enter the new fields of Spain, Jugoslavia, Hungary, Roumania, and Russia in Europe, and Palestine and Siberia in Asia. This gives to Southern Baptists a total missionary audience of 900,000,000, or more than one-half the total population of the globe.

Older Fields Re-Enforced. But of more significance than the entry into these new fields is the reinforcement that has come to the work in the older fields, in the estimation of the officials of the Foreign Mission Board. This reinforcement consists not only in sending out many new workers but providing larger equipment in the way of church houses, mission residences, schools, hospitals, orphanages, publishing houses and the like. Summarizing the growth that has come in the forces on the older fields since the Campaign began the following results are pointed out:

Number of churches, 76% increase; number of church members, 108% increase; number of church buildings, 46% increase; number of schools, 54% increase; number of pupils, 108% increase; number of residences for missionaries, 94% increase; number of foreign missionaries, 63% increase; number of native missionaries, 264% increase; number of hospital buildings, 61% increase; number of treatments given, 61% increase; number of hospital beds, 104% increase.

Much Remains To Be Done

With all the increases that have come in the foreign mission work only a portion of the program that was contemplated for foreign missions as a result of the Campaign has been accomplished as yet. It is in the hope of completing this program through more effectively equipping the work and workers on both the older fields and the new ones that the representatives of the Foreign Mission Board are cooperating with those of the 75 Million Campaign in an effort to complete the payments of $1,000,000 to this movement.

AVERY Chilled Plows

Rightful Leaders

AVERY Chilled Plows are leaders simply because they are really better in many important ways. Avery design is the result of nearly a century of plow-making. Avery plows are built in the finest, most complete and modern plow factory in the world. Scientific accuracy in the selection and testing of materials insures strength, durability, and almost perfect work. Avery repair parts always fit perfectly any Avery Chilled Plow of same size ever made. And because they cannot work loose they seldom break. The Avery "lock that locks" to be had only on the Avery.

holds the plowshare in place no matter how long in use; and relieves strain on bolts. Guaranteed as shown is attached to every genuine Avery Chilled Plow. This guarantee does not make an Avery Chilled Plow any better, but it is our written pledge of quality to all buyers and users.

Avery Chilled Plows are protected by important patents; therefore all repair parts we sell our customers are always genuine and always covered by the Avery Guarantee. Call on us for all the facts about this famous plow.

There is a full line of famous Avery walking, riding and tractor plows, tillage implements, and Champion harvesting and hay machines.

Mr. JOE POPWELL DEAD.

Mr. Joe Popwell, a pioneer citizen who had reached his 80th birthday at his home about seven miles from Clanton on route three March 6th. He has been a prominent figure in his community and county for many years. He was noted for his sturdy character and firmness in all of his dealings with his fellow men. He has many relatives, who have contributed their part in the upbuilding of Chilton county. In addition to his three sons and friends and relatives, Mr. Popwell leaves a wife and nine children. He was survived by five daughters and two sons. He was buried on the afternoon of March 7th in the cemetery at Highland church of which he had been a member for several years. Rev. T. J. Deason, his beloved pastor, having charge of the service.

For your spring HAT, and DRESS, you will not only save money, but you will be delighted with your SELECTION, if you buy from McDonald Merc. Co.

Mr. W. O. Rich, until recently a citizen of Clanton but now an employee of the Birmingham Age-Herald, was here Saturday and Sunday. We are more than glad to learn that Mr. Rich has secured such a fine position with so well known paper as the Herald.

Mr. Corley had quite a severe attack of indigestion the first of the week. We are glad to state that he is now improving and will soon be at his post of duty again. Few men in Alabama are his equal when it comes to putting down his thoughts on paper.

$1500 REWARD

Will pay the above reward for any information leading to the recovery of my lost and run male dog. Notify, V. J. HEARD, J. D. ARMSTRONG, J. P. CRUMPTON.

FOR WORKING PEOPLE

The best of workers get out of sorts when the liver fails to act. They feel languid, half-sick, "blue" and discouraged and think they are getting lazy. Neglect of these symptoms might result in a sick spell, therefore the sensible course is to take a dose or two of Herbine. It is just the medicine needed to purify the system and restore the vim and ambition of health. Price 60c. Sold by Upchurch Drug Co.

IT DRIVES OUT WORMS

The surest sign of worms in children is paleness, lack of interest in play, fretfulness, variable appetite, picking at the nose and sudden starting in sleep. When these symptoms appear it is time to give White's Cream Vermifuge. A few doses drives out the worms and puts the little one on the road to health again. White's Cream Vermifuge has a record of fifty years of successful use. Price 35c. Sold by Upchurch Drug Co.

DON'T BURN YOUR PASTURE OFF

In some quarters there exists a belief that by burning the range during the winter earlier and better spring grass is obtained," says a statement issued by the Alabama Commission on forestry. "Formerly many stockmen followed this practice, but within recent years frequent investigations, supplemented by those conducted by foresters in connection with forest fires, have convinced many of them that not only does the anticipated benefit fail to materialize but a positive injury also results. Being protected by the cover of old grass it is somewhat concealed from the view, but the cattle readily pick it out and at the same time obtain the proper amount of roughage. From a careful computation of this relative amount of such green grass as compared with that found growing in the spring on the winter burns, it is found that there really is more green grass per acre in the former case than in the latter. Furthermore, when the range is burned, the existing green grass being destroyed with the old vegetation, there ensues a considerable period pending the growth of the new spring grass before there is pasture of any kind whatever. Thus, instead of hastening the growth of grass in the spring, the winter burns really destroy a large quantity of pasture at least equal both in quality and in amount to that which it is expected to obtain by burning, and at the same time interposes an interval during which no grass at all is available. Of late many stockmen have come to realize that the practice of winter range burning has resulted in far more harm than good."

WOCO PEP HAS A BIRTHDAY

All dealers and agents of the Wofford Oil Company, makers and marketers of the famous Woco Pep heavy blend motor fuel, will gather in Birmingham, Wednesday, March 19, for the "birthday party" celebrating the anniversary of the introduction of Woco Pep to the public. It is announced here Saturday by Jno. T. Ellis, Jr. Sons local Woco Pep agents who will leave for Birmingham, Tuesday to participate in the celebration.

The celebration will be held at its kind held by the company more than a hundred dealers from Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi and Tennessee will be in attendance. Sales conference, a dinner, novel contests, a band and an evening theatre performance are included in plans for the day.

One novel feature of the celebration

ent will be a contest to establish a new world's record for filling an automobile tank with motor fuel. The present record of two and a half minutes curb to curb, serving ten gallons of Woco Pep, is held by A. J. Little, Woco Pep agent at Columbus, Ga. and numerous entrants will attempt to lower this mark. Winners of the contest will be awarded handsome medals and already challenges have been received from oil marketers in other territories.

At the Company banquet, new members will be initiated into the "Woco Pep" recently organized fun-making body of the Wofford organization. The club is something unique in the oil industry, having been organized to promote goodwill and fellowship among Wofford employees. Membership is attained by Woco dealers.

Woco Pep was introduced on March 15, 1918, in Birmingham, being the first benzol-blend motor fuel marketed commercially in this country.

Since that date the Wofford Oil Company has extended its operations into Mississippi and Tennessee as well as about Alabama and the Woco Pep mark has become one of the most prominent in southern motor-fuel circles.

The Wofford Oil Company as an organization in its twenty-first year has been organized in 1903 by J. Wofford, present head of the company. Its growth during the sixteen years has been one of the most rapid in the southern industry.

Wood, son of our worthy citizen, Mr. J. G. Wood, was here Saturday. Mr. Wood holds a lucrative position with the Alabama Power Company. Mr. Williams, who is brother of Mr. Williams, was here Saturday. Mr. Williams is now in the business world in City.

Is Your Back Giving Out?

ARE you miserable with an aching back? Do you get up lame and stiff—lag through the day, tired, weak and worn out? Do you wonder why you are so run down? Many times this condition is due to weak kidneys. Winter's colds and chills are hard on the kidneys. The kidneys are apt to slow up in their work of filtering body-poisons from the blood. These poisons accumulate. Then comes backache, with rheumatic pains, headaches, dizziness and kidney irregularities.

Don't risk serious kidney trouble! Use Doan's Pills—a stimulant diuretic to the kidneys. Doan's have helped thousands. They are recommended by many grateful people. Ask your neighbor!

"Use Doan's," Say These Good Folks:

W. C. Knight, prop. of general store, 4th St., Sylacauga, Ala., says: "The flu left my kidneys disordered and my back became weak and lame. If I stooped, I could hardly get up on account of the sharp pains in my back. My kidneys acted irregularly, causing me to get up often at night to pass the secretions. Mornings my muscles were stiff and drawn. Doan's Pills relieved me."

Mrs. J. A. Billingsley, 7 S. Jordan St., Bamson, Ala., says: "I used to be troubled right smart with my kidneys and my back was lame and weak. There was a dull ache in my back all the time and I was bothered by the irregular action of my kidneys. I began using Doan's Pills and it wasn't long before they drove the trouble away."

Enormous Losses in Hatching Eggs

Poultrymen Urged to Have Breeders in Excellent Health.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.) A good criterion of one's ability as a poultry raiser, the Department of Agriculture says, is the number of chickens raised to maturity in proportion to the eggs set. Success depends to a large extent on this one factor.

Causes for Losses.

The causes for enormous losses in eggs and dead embryos occurring annually in the country are many. A conservative estimate places the loss due to eggs that did not hatch in 1923 at over $3,000,000. Be sure, department poultrymen advise, that your breeders are in excellent health, have sanitary quarters, and that one male is mated to not over 15 females. Other losses are due to the fact that many poor eggs are set. Test your eggs carefully, and take out all with thin and spotted shells or those with cracked shells. Make sure that all eggs set are also of standard size.

The greatest loss in incubation occurs in the embryos that die in the shell. This may be due to faulty methods of incubation or to eggs of poor hatching quality. Immature pullets, breeding stock that has been sickly and birds that have been forced heavily for winter production are apt to produce eggs that will not hatch well.

Use Healthy Breeders. All breeders used should be thoroughly healthy; they should have abundance of constitutional vigor; and they should receive good breeding rations. The department advises against the use of too much protein, probably not over 15 per cent, in the mash rations; plenty of green food should be provided. Furthermore, give the breeders as much exercise as possible. In fact, do everything possible to insure the production of eggs of good hatching quality and many apparent troubles in incubation will be solved.

Hog Slaughter for 1923 Breaks Previous Record

More than 10,000,000 more hogs were slaughtered under federal meat inspection during the calendar year, 1923, than during any previous year, according to figures just made public by the bureau of animal industry, United States Department of Agriculture. The number slaughtered during the year was 53,333,708. The best previous record for a calendar year was made in 1922. During that year 43,113,629 hogs were slaughtered. During December, 1923, not only the best record for the month of December, but for any month, was broken. During that month 5,093,759 hogs were slaughtered under federal meat inspection. The best previous record for a month of December was made in 1918 during which month 5,661,890 hogs were slaughtered. The best previous record for any month was made in January, 1919, during which month 5,845,696 hogs were slaughtered.

Dwarf Trees Are Useful Where Space Is Limited

The practice of using dwarf instead of the ordinary standard trees is more or less prevalent among prospective planters of small areas. Dwarf trees are produced by propagating them on certain stocks of roots which because of their inherently restricted habit of growth restrict also the size of the tops that have been grafted or budded on them.

While earliness of bearing, and exceptionally high quality of the product are often claimed for dwarf trees, some of the best experience in this country has failed to substantiate the latter claim. Dwarf apple and pear trees have their place, however, in the garden or yard, especially under intensive methods of culture, where the space is too small to admit readily of the development of standard trees.

Common Grains for Hay

Any of the common grains, such as wheat, oats, barley, make good hay if cut at the proper stage of development, which is at the period of blossoming. That is when the plant contains the largest per cent of digestible nutrients. It is not common to use these plants for hay in this country. Most people seem to think they can get more out of them by allowing them to ripen, saving the grain and feeding the straw.

Vegetable Garden Is Essential on Farms

Farmers Should Plan Having Supply During Year.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

While we are talking about the advantages of the kitchen garden in connection with the homes of those who live in the suburban districts 'taint must be lost of the importance of good farm gardens. The United States census figures taken in 1919, showed that 78.9 per cent of all the farms in the United States have home gardens. This leads to the question, what did the other 21.1 per cent of the farm families have upon their tables. The answer would probably be mainly canned vegetables or no vegetables at all. It is safe to assume that the majority of these farm families who did not have a garden to fall back upon were often without vegetables on their tables. In view of the fact that vegetables furnish about four-fifths of the bulk of our ordinary diet, it would seem highly essential that every farm in the United States be well provided with garden facilities. When it comes to the matter of the actual value of the crops grown there is no comparison between general farm crops and those of the garden, as the average value of the garden crops is usually six to ten times that of a similar area in farm crops.

Not only should the farmers of the country give more attention to their home vegetable gardens in the spring, but they should so plan that a supply of vegetables will be maintained throughout the summer and plenty to can and store for winter.

Get Cows Into Condition by Liberal Corn Feeding

Cows that are milked down may be gotten in condition by feeding an extra amount of corn in the grain ration. A dry cow should always gain in weight and this gain can be made as quickly and cheaply with corn as with any other grain. A mixture of six parts of ground corn, two parts of ground oats or bran and one part of oil meal by weight is a very satisfactory mixture. Cotton seed should not be fed at this time owing to the lack of succulent feeds consumed. When the cow has gained as much weight as is desired, the corn should be replaced by bran and ground oats. At least ten days before the cow is due to freshen, bran, oats and oil meal should constitute the grain ration. Equal parts by weight of the first two with about one pound of oil meal per day forms a very satisfactory ration.

When the pregnant cow is within a few days of freshening, her grain ration should be considerably reduced. Bran mashes are excellent at this time because of the laxative and cooling nature. If constipation is in evidence, one quart of raw linseed oil or one pound of epsom salts should be given. Many cases of milk fever could be avoided if proper care were given just previous to freshening. With the exception of a few hours before calving, some roughage such as clover, alfalfa or soy-bean hay should be provided in liberal quantities.

Watermelon Seed Needs Best Kind of Attention

Many farmers fail to secure a good stand in their field of watermelons. Oftentimes they fail to secure as good a crop of commercial size melons as they should. Many melons show signs of disease. It is possible to protect against poor stands and poor crops if proper attention is given to seed as well as seed beds. Seed should be tested for germination. Then they should be disinfected. Specialists on truck diseases recommend the following: Take the amount of seed you have and soak them in a 1-to-1,000 solution of corrosive sublimate (bichloride of mercury) for ten minutes. Do not leave them in this solution longer than ten minutes.

Remove from the solution and wash thoroughly in three or four changes of clean fresh water to remove the disinfectant. The seed are now ready to plant.

This corrosive sublimate solution (1 to 1,000) is prepared by dissolving 1 tablet (which may be purchased at any drug store) in 1 pint of water. This amount is sufficient for a quarter of a pound of seed. Increase in this proportion for larger amounts.

Butter, Milk and Cheese Selling at High Prices

Prices of dairy products did not suffer as much from the drastic deflation following the post-war period as did other farm products, says the United States Department of Agriculture. Butter, cheese, and milk have sold at prices remunerative to farmers. Butter is now higher than the general price level. Cheap feed in western butter districts, and high prices and some curtailment of production in milk districts, have enabled dairy farmers to weather the storm with less adversity than farmers producing commodities a part of which must be exported. Poultry and eggs have also continued on a fairly profitable basis.

Profits Don't Bother

Farmers who don't want to be bothered with keeping records and giving close attention to the details of farming as a business are not usually bothered with profits from the business.

WESTERN PIONEER TELLS INTERESTING EXPERIENCE

Frank Rikert, Who Left Illinois for California in Covered Wagon in 1864, Wouldn't Take $100 for Bottle of Tanlac.

Frank Rikert, well-known resident of North Sacramento, Cal., who came to the state from Illinois in a covered wagon in 1864, along with other hardy pioneers, recently exhibited a bottle of Tanlac, which he had just purchased, to a friend at his home and remarked: "If I thought this was the last bottle of Tanlac I would ever be able to buy, I wouldn't take one hundred dollars for it," thus proving the high valuation he places on the famous treatment. "I believe Tanlac really saved my life when I took it after the flu about a year ago," continued Mr. Rikert, "for the attack left me 20 pounds off in weight, and unable to turn over in my bed without assistance. I tell you, I thought my time had surely come."

"But, thanks to my wife's insistence, I kept on taking Tanlac till I was able to do all my work again, had back all my lost weight, and I've been feeling years younger ever since. I'm always telling my friends about Tanlac, and can't say too much for it."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Accept no substitute. Over 40 million bottles sold.

What "Soteria" Means

The use of soteria in England is new. It is a Greek word which means salvation. It derives its meaning from two other Greek words, one meaning deliverance or safety; the other to rescue from danger. Therefore the English word may well have the full meaning of safe deliverance from danger.

MARY SUCCEEDS ON MAIN STREET

WOMAN'S ADVENTURES IN CONTENTMENT

"Tar-heel born, tar heel bred, When I'm dead, it's a tar heel dead."

So do the girls of North Carolina, dog with gusto. So do they live, work, marry, die, proud of the 98 per cent native-bornness of their state. They feel that a big city is no place for those "who ain't went out much, not tar!"

So reports Fronde Kennedy, who has known the Carolinas from the day she was born, "a long time ago," as she says, to the present "office of the dean of women of Trinity college." Her letter carries its own charm:

"I do not know when I began to find my chief delight in the printed page. I can remember lying flat on the floor with my chin cupped in my hands, poring over Lempriere's Classical Dictionary and Swiss Family Robinson impartially before I was ten. I regard my heritage from my father as a priceless gift, but it included so small amounts of dollars and cents that the education I was able to secure was pitifully different from what we had kindled in me a desire for. I was fortunate in my course at college to fall under the influence of at least one real scholar, who kept alive in me the flame of intellectual curiosity. At the age of eighteen I had my diploma and was ready to begin teaching. It was necessary that I at least relieve my mother of the expense of my own support, and I did so—on a salary of thirty dollars a month, fifteen of which I paid out for board."

"Probably to some people I seem a good example of a woman who has succeeded in life. I have not, really, in comparison with my own standards and dreams, achieved anything, and yet I concede that I would be most unreasonable and ungrateful not to acknowledge my blessings; and I have many. I am tuned to rural life. I like to hear of setting hens and newly planted gardens, and to watch farmers' almanacs and see how well they hit the weather. I like to go to a military opening and sit down with the crowd and advise my friends about the hats they are trying on. I like to 'set a spell' with my friends. So, although I love New York and go whenever I can for a little while, I expect to live in a rural section, preferably in a town of about twenty thousand people, I hope through a green old age!"

MUNICIPAL HOUSEKEEPING

Of all the part-time jobs that have recently developed for women, those connected with "municipal housekeeping" seem to have proved the most interesting. Local political tasks ordinarily pay so little that they can be undertaken only by the woman who has sufficient income to meet her needs, plus some time that she would like to put to service outside her home.

A book which modestly announces itself as the "Who's Who and What's What of the Woman's World," lists Mrs. E. E. Brown's work as member of the town council of Oakdale, La., as a real achievement. To get the background of her work it is said, it's almost necessary to have visited Louisiana to know the force that old French plus old Southern tradition is still exercising to keep out innovations; and to have felt the power exerted by the dictum, "We want our women to be ladies of the old type."

The first councilwoman in Louisiana trained herself in knowledge of parliamentary law, public questions, etc., by serving in the State Federation of Women's Clubs. She organized and has for nine years been president of the Oakdale Civic League. "Meanwhile, she kept the devotion of husband, children and neighbors. The young people of Oakdale know that her home is always open for parties. She finds time to produce two or three plays a year for charitable purposes that bring all the civic spirits of town and parish together. Withal she is a most perfect hostess of a charming home which is never neglected."

To all this, Mrs. Lottie Fitzgerald of Oakdale who thus describes her neighbor, adds courage. In the city government questions arose which Mrs. Brown could settle neither by tact nor by parliamentary skill. Politics ranged itself on one side. Mrs. Brown's belief in how it ought to be done ranged itself on the other side. Influence sided sometimes with politics. If politics was wrong on the one question, "Will this leave a mark for good on the city?" Mrs. Brown consistently voted against politics.

America's First Orchestra.

Bethlehem, Pa., is the most remarkable town musically in the United States. The settlement had an orchestra as early as 1780. Their modern musical festival is often referred to as the American musical Oberammergau or the American Bayreuth.

THE REIGN OF DAVID

LESSON TEXT—II Sam. 7:18-29; 8:14, 15. (Read I Sam. 18 to II Sam. 24.)

GOLDEN TEXT—I delight to do Thy will, O my God.—Ps. 40:8.

PRIMARY TOPIC—A Shepherd Boy Becomes King.

JUNIOR TOPIC—David and Goliath.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—David a Character Study.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—What David Achieved for Israel.

1. Chosen King While a Shepherd Boy (I Sam. 16:1-13).

1. Samuel Sent to Bethlehem (vv. 1-5). Samuel was directed to go to Bethlehem and from among the sons of Jesse choose a successor. God instructed him to avoid publicity by the concealment of his real purpose. Samuel was not under obligation to tell all that he knew, especially since the parties had no moral right to know.

2. Samuel Anointed David (v. 18). Though the Lord has refused to choose one of the eldest sons of Jesse, when this stripping of a boy came before Samuel, the Lord indicated His choice. This anointing typified the endowment of the Holy Spirit which is essential for any and all service for God.

11. David's Training.

1. In the Open Fields (I Sam. 16:11-13; 17:34-37). As a young man, his business was to keep his father's sheep. The prevailing tendency of such an occupation would be to take things easily, but David did not fall into a life of indolence. He became such a skilled musician that he was called to play his harp before the king.

He was also an expert marksman, so that he could throw a stone with such precision as to need only one throw to down the Philistine giant. Then, too, he was physically fitted, for he had been "educated in the school of the lion and the bear."

11. David's Training.

1. In the Open Fields (I Sam. 16:11-13; 17:34-37). As a young man, his business was to keep his father's sheep. The prevailing tendency of such an occupation would be to take things easily, but David did not fall into a life of indolence. He became such a skilled musician that he was called to play his harp before the king.

He was also an expert marksman, so that he could throw a stone with such precision as to need only one throw to down the Philistine giant. Then, too, he was physically fitted, for he had been "educated in the school of the lion and the bear."

2. In the King's Court (I Sam. 18:2, 21-9). Here was formed that tie of friendship with Jonathan which not only was a bright spot in David's life, but lives in history as a unique affair.

3. In the Camp of the Outlaw (I Sam. 21:10; 8:13). The king had given commandment to kill David. When the truth of this was realized David fled to the king of Gath, where he reigned madness. Though David did some foolish and unbecoming things during this time, he is to be commended for his self-mastery in that he would not touch the Lord's anointed.

11. David Made King of Judah (II Sam. 2:1-4).

Trusting God, David went to Hebron, where the men of Judah anointed him king over them. Thus, a part of the nation recognized him as king and ratified the work which Samuel did years before.

1. The Dual Kingdom (II Sam. 2:8; 4:12). Most of the tribes of Israel held to Ishbosheth, Saul's son, whom Abner had proclaimed king of Mahanaim. Feuds continued between the rival factions. David's power increased, while that of Ishbosheth waned. This period of civil war lasted seven and a half years.

2. David Crowned King of United Israel (II Sam. 5:1-5). Abner's death and Ishbosheth's assassination put an end to David's opposition. Besides, David's behavior during this time gradually won for him the confidence of the tribes, so that they all came to him at Hebron and anointed him as their king. They assigned as their reasons for anointing him their king:

(1) He was their brother (v. 1).

(2) He was their true leader in war, even in Saul's time (v. 2).

(3) He was the Lord's choice (v. 2).

IV. David's Worship and Prayer (II Sam. 7:18-29).

1. For God's Goodness to Him (vv. 18-22). This was shown in promising to build him a house. The content of this covenant is set forth in verses 8-18. It contains the following elements:

(1) A house, or posterity (v. 18).

(2) A throne—a royal authority (v. 19).

(3) A kingdom (v. 13).

(4) Perpetuity, that is, forever (v. 18).

This was an absolute promise. Disobedience on the part of David's seed would entail chastisement, but not an abrogation of the covenant.

2. For God's Goodness to the Nation (vv. 23-26). No other nation in all the world had been accorded such treatment. The central thought is God's goodness centered in his redemption of the nation from Egyptian bondage.

V. God Preserved David Wherever He Went (II Sam. 8:14, 15).

God will do the same for all those who trust Him.

Royster's "cured" fertilizer is certified fertilizer

More profitable crops result from the use of fertilizer that has been thoroughly "aged"

You can't look at the ordinary bag of fertilizer and tell how good it is. You have to risk the time and money of a season's work before you KNOW. It isn't known to be good until you get your money!

Certified Fertilizer

But Royster's "cured" fertilizer is like a certified check.

It is certified by the forty years we have spent in learning the needs of the soil you work.

It is certified by the experience of successful farmers all about you, who say "Royster's fertilizer increased my earnings."

"Cured" Fertilizer is better plant food

It is certified by the "curing"—a feature of Royster's fertilizer which increases its value because of a more complete chemical action, making the plant food readily available to the plant. (Royster's goods age in great bins for four to six months. They are then re-milled and bagged.)

Ask for "Royster's"

Stop guessing about fertilizer. Look for the name "Royster" on your bags of fertilizer and you have found the assurance that your crops will have proper feeding from seed time to harvest.

IMPROVEMENT ORDINANCE No 2.

An Ordinance to provide for certain improvements on Second Avenue North from the East property line of Sixth Street to the East property line of First Street and on First Street from the South property line of Second Avenue North to the North property line of Second Avenue South. Be it ordained by the Town Council of the Town of Clanton, Alabama, as follows:

Section 1. That Second Avenue North from the East property line of Sixth Street to the East property line of First Street, and First Street from the South property line of Second Avenue North to the North property line of Second Avenue South, shall be graded.

That the North and South sides of a fifty foot roadway on Second Avenue North from the East property line of Sixth Street to the East property line of First Street, and the East and West sides of a thirty six foot roadway on First Street from the South property line of Second Avenue North to the North property line of Second Avenue South be curbed with Portland cement concrete combined curb and gutter, the curb and gutter to be six inches thick and the gutter thirty inches wide.

That the side walks on each side of Second Avenue North from the East property line of Sixth Street to the West property line of First Street, and First Street from the South property line of Second Avenue North to the North property line of Second Avenue South, shall be paved with portland cement sidewalk paving for a width of five feet.

That vitrified clay drainage pipes, inlets of brick, laid in cement mortar with cast iron covers shall be constructed where necessary along said street and avenue.

That alley crossings shall be paved with portland cement concrete paving eight inches thick.

Section 2. That said improvements shall be made in accordance with the established grades on file in the offices of said Street and Avenue, and according to full details, drawings, plans, specifications and surveys of said work, and estimates of said work, which shall be prepared by the City Engineer, as early as practical, and placed by him on file in the office of the Town Clerk at Clanton, at least two weeks prior to the date hereinafter fixed for hearing objections, remonstrances or protests before the Town Council where property owners who may be affected by said improvements, may see and examine the same.

Section 3. That the cost of constructing said improvements shall be assessed against the property abutting on the portions of the Highway, so improved.

(a) That the cost of improvements at or upon street, avenue, intersection shall be assessed against the lots or parcels of land abutting on said highways so intersecting for one half block in each direction.

(b) That the cost of said sidewalk or alley paving at the intersection of any alley with said street or avenue, where said improvements are made shall be assessed in fair proportion against the respective lots or parcels of land abutting or cornering on the alley at such intersection.

(c) That the cost of laying drainage pipe and constructing inlets shall be assessed against all lots or parcels of land abutting on the portion of the highway so improved and drained by said drainage pipe and inlets.

(d) That no assessment shall exceed the cost of such improvements, or the increased value of such property by reason of the special benefits derived from such improvements.

Section 4. That the property owners along said Street or Avenue shall be required to see their water pipes are placed at least eighteen inches below the grade of the Street or Avenue and should any property owner fail or refuse, upon demand to comply with this section then the contractor in charge of said work shall lower or lay said lines, and the cost of such work be charged to the property owner and included in the assessment against such property owners, and collected as such assessment for street and avenue improvements are collected.

Section 5. That the estimated cost of said improvement is $12,500.00, and that the Council of the Town of Clanton, will meet on the 3rd day of March, 1924, in the Council Chamber of the Town office of Clanton, at 10 o'clock a. m. to hear any objections, remonstrances or protests that may be made against said improvements, the manner of making the same or the character of material to be used.

Read, approved, and adopted, this the 13th day of February, 1924.

New Year Greeting

The good old year of 1923 has become now a memory of the past. With all of its joys and sorrows it is buried, and, as the days go by, it will become merely a misty dream.

We have all had to face some trials and tribulations, but in the main, it was a kind and gracious year to live in. Bidding it good bye, I wish to express my sincere thanks to the many friends and customers who have loyally stood by me with their friendship and patronage and have enabled me to wind up the old year with a feeling of satisfaction with my success and with a bright hope for the future.

I wish for you one and all, the successful culmination of your brightest hopes for the New Year. May good health, happiness and prosperity attend you through the days to come. May 1924 have for all of us happy surprises and untold blessings.

I am deeply grateful to every one who has favored me with their patronage during the year just gone and most respectfully ask that you will continue to give me the opportunity to deserve your confidence and trade.

Your friend,

G. C. Armstrong

CHILTON COUNTY NEWS

VOLUME 3

CLANTON, ALABAMA, MARCH 20, 1924.

NUMBER 28

BASE BALL FRIDAY

Friday afternoon at 3:30 the Chilton county Hi and Marbury will contest the opening game of the season at Polk's Park at the high school building. Let every person who can possibly do so turn out and help our team win the opening game of the season. Remember, they need our help and support to make a winning team.

According to information, we have the material to have one of the best high school teams in the state.

NICE SHOWING

Last Sunday although the day was extremely inclement, quite a good attendance turned out to the Baptist Sunday School.

The Young Men's class had charge of the opening exercises and were on hand, 21 strong. They certainly made a splendid showing as they took their places in the choir chairs and faced the congregation. If these young men would only realize how handsome and genteel they look under such surroundings as those they certainly would turn out en masse to every Sunday school service.

NOT SERIOUS

The first of last week wild rumors flew thick and fast around town about some trouble that a couple of the local young men had butted into up in Shelby county.

The report had it that they were guilty of high way robbery.

Being very doubtful of the truth of any of these rumours, we refrained from making any reference whatever to the case last week.

A commitment trial held last Friday, seems to have vindicated our first impression, and while both the young men, Mr. Arnon Wagoner and Mr. Dewey Eubanks, were bound over to the grand jury, the investigation before that body will only amount to an inquiry into what appears to have been a general fight resulting from the effects of a little too much of that famous Shelby county corn.

Among those who went up from here to attend the commitment trial last Friday, were Messrs W. W. Fox, Jno. M. Robinson, Mac Broadhead, Thos. M. Parrish, Ed Wagoner, P. Pitts and Walter Sanford. There may have been others, but we do not recall their names just now.

It affords us pleasure to make this announcement and to learn that nothing serious confronts these two young men, for both of them are highly connected here and their troubles would reflect some of the best families in this section.

MR. MAHAN MOVES BACK

Mr. J. A. Mahan and family have moved back to Clanton. Mr. Mahan for some time has lived in Alexander City, where he has been holding a responsible position with the Alabama Power Company.

We appreciate the fact that despite the inconvenience of continuing his present occupation, Mr. Mahan and his worthy family have again become citizens of our town.

SEND US YOUR JOB WORK

THE FEDERAL HIGHWAY

This week, in another column, appears a letter from our friend, Mr. S. N. Davis, of Route 6, in which he differs with us in some of the material issues we made in the paper last week in regard to the Highway situation.

We are glad Mr. Davis wrote, for to clearly grasp any situation it is necessary to view all sides of it. Some of his arguments are good though we differ widely with him on the fundamental principles involved.

As to building up a section of country with good roads we agree with him only this far. If the country is of a nature fertile enough to support life, by farming, a highway might help some in developing it. But if the land is so sandy and so poor that it bears close resemblance to the Sahara desert, we doubt that the road would build it up much.

Now, Mr. Davis is writing from a section of country that is all right and he and his neighbors need, and are entitled to, good roads and the money is being amply supplied to give them good roads, but further on down this proposed survey, and for quite a number of miles the country has not, is not and will not support any farming interests to speak of. It has been tried out by both southern and northern farmers and all of them lost all they invested and moved away.

We think Mr. Davis will find that he is vastly mistaken in regard to the State keeping up the old highway. If they ever did any work on it we failed to hear of it and we know that portions of it became the worst road you could find anywhere. Neither the state nor the counties either have ever done much to keep up that road. It was another big bubble that busted.

Thank you, Mr. Davis come again.

FIRE TUESDAY NIGHT

A narrow escape from a fire of more than a serious nature occurred in the home of Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Roy, on Fifth avenue, last Tuesday night about 7 o'clock.

Mrs. Roy went in to her bed room and made up a fire and put her baby to bed. She then returned to her cook room to finish up her night work. In a few minutes she smelled something burning and, on returning to her bed room, she found the bed in which she had put her baby only a few minutes before on fire.

She rescued the baby, but before she could extinguish the fire the bed was completely ruined and considerable damage done to the room.

The insurance on the building and contents was carried by Mr. C. Reese Mullins and the adjustment of damages was made by him the next morning before the baby woke up.

The bed evidently caught from a spark from the fire place.

NEW STORE

Mr. E. C. Williamson, a young man who served across the sea in the great war, has opened up a general merchandise in the old post office building down by the railroad.

We are pleased to welcome Mr. Williamson to our town and bespeak for him your friendship and part of your patronage. We hope he will be pleased with us and our people and stay with us.

SLEEPING OVER OUR RIGHTS

In the papers Sunday we notice where the city of Andalusia, in South Alabama, has already secured one of the largest cotton mills out of the twelve that recently closed near Falls River, Mass.

We called attention to this closing down of those mills and begged and insisted that an organized effort be put forth at once to secure one of them.

One letter or two does not mean anything, what we want to do if we ever succeed in landing any industry of importance is to go after it intensively. All of the business men, all of the Banks, all of the real progressive citizens of the town and county should concentrate their efforts and load the mails down with invitations to come down and see us and let us show them what we are willing to do.

The cotton mill business is doomed, so far as the northern mills are concerned. They can not meet southern competition and they have frankly said so. They are being compelled to close down because the southern mills are in a position to beat them in the wholesale market. Some of them may go out of business but not many, for they have too much money tied up in high class machinery. Consequently, they are going to be compelled to move south and get in the business on the same basis and with same advantages as those possessed by the southern cotton mill.

You can all surely realize the fact that Clanton and Chilton county stands in urgent need right now of some permanent industrial development. We are going to have to induce or install something of this kind or else the progressive boom that has been with us since the war will gradually pass away.

For many years the lumber business here has provided a considerable amount of cash during the dull months and kept the wheels turning fairly well, but this industry is practically exhausted now and we are in crying need of something else to take its place.

With dozens of big cotton mills preparing to move south right away, a real intensive and intelligent effort would land one here. We have every thing to offer that they require. Good health, good climate, good people, good labor conditions, good shipping facilities, good cotton farms and plenty of them, and, greatest of all, and what they specifically require, a most unlimited supply of the greatest and most reliable power in the world—electricity.

Clanton and Chilton county has as much to offer as any place, and vastly more than the majority of them, and still, we are letting this great opportunity pass without making an effort to land us a cotton mill.

The two greatest advantages of Alabama, the Alabama Power Company and the L. & N. Railroad, both have a publicity department that works all the time in inducing industries from the north and west to come south and to come to Alabama. Both of these great industrial organizations are pledged to help us all they can when we start something tangible. They will do all they can to land us a cotton mill, if we will only get busy and put out an intensive and concerted effort or ourselves. We have to furnish something for them to work on and do our full part at home and, with such a movement and with the assistance we can get from them, a cotton mill can be landed now in Clanton.

PROGRAM OF THE CHILTON COUNTY FIFTH SUNDAY MEETING MARCH 30 1924

- 3:10—Miscellaneous.
- 3:30—Adjourn.

Let every church of the Chilton county Association send delegates to this meeting.

THE METHODIST CHURCH

In a few days now our good Methodist friends are going to move back under their "own vine and fig tree."

They have been waiting for the arrival of the windows for their massive new structure. They now have notice that these have been shipped and are looking for them every day.

They will move into the commodious basement story first, while the work will be pushed in completing the splendid auditorium.

This is one of the most complete and perfectly arranged church houses in Alabama and few people who have not made a study of it, realize what an extensive and wonderful building it is.

It is 112 feet in length and 72 feet in width. It is three stories high and every inch of the vast interior is utilized for some essential purpose.

We rejoice with our good brethren that they have built this vast and modern house of God, and sincerely congratulate them on the bright prospect for its speedy finish. They have built with a vision of the future and time will soon demonstrate the wisdom of the course.

CLANTON PUBLIC SCHOOL

Parents and teachers of children attending the grammar school will be pleased to learn that at the meeting last Friday of the Parent-Teacher Association it was decided to increase the school library by the addition of the "Book of knowledge" or children's Encyclopedia, in 29 volumes handsomely bound in red.

The set was purchased from the publishers the Grolier Society of New York through H. E. Marvin, State representative.

NEW SAW MILL

Some days ago Mr. W. A. Reynolds bought of the Robinson Lumber Company quite a large body of timber lying over several miles from town.

Monday a large No. 7 Wheeling mill with a 100 horse power boiler to drive it, arrived by rail and was being unloaded to carry up on this track of timber.

In a few days now the mill will be in operation and will put out some 30,000 feet of good yellow pine lumber.

TO BUILD BUNGALOW

We learn that Mr. W. A. Reynolds is going to have erected, on the lot just east of his own palatial home, a nice bungalow.

Some of the material is already on the ground and work will begin as soon as the weather will permit.

THE COUNTY ROAD TAX

We notice, from a card in the Union-Banner, signed by Judge Reynolds, that the County Commissioners have repealed the 30 hour clause and made it 24 hours after a 20 minute rain before you can haul certain classes of commodities.

That is some little help and we are grateful for even that, much, but we do not see any intimation that they intend to repeal or modify the section that dips into palpable class legislation, and allows some people to haul 800 pounds after a rain, while other people are denied the privilege of hauling anything at all.

We have been told by a responsible party that all four of the Commissioners claimed to him, that they did not understand that law to mean that when they passed it. They understood that anyone would be allowed to haul 800 pounds.

We can't see, for the life of us, why 800 pounds of lumber or cord wood could damage a road any more than 800 pounds of brick or iron.

That law is a wonder in its way and would be an unbelievable story if it was not printed plainly in the county road law book.

Mr. J. V. Best, of Route 7, out in the splendid Baker settlement, was a pleasant caller at our office Thursday. Mr. Best is not only a 100 per cent democrat and good farmer, but is conducting a fancy and family grocery store out there where he pays the very highest market price for chickens and eggs.

Dr. C. C. Wilkerson returned last Saturday from Columbia, Alabama. He reports that his father is not doing well. He is suffering from a light stroke of paralysis. The many friends of Dr. Wilkerson hope that his father will soon recover from his illness.

THE "HOME" PUTS ON A NEW DRESS

The Home is putting on a much needed new dress. All but two of the cottages have been recovered with stained shingles, and they will follow, as soon as the weather will allow the carpenters to work.

Speaking of the weather, we had here, on Thursday of last week, a snow storm and flakes covered the ground four inches deep on a dead level. Two of the elderly ladies in the Home amused themselves by engaging in a snow ball battle. The old men had enough to remain in the house and watch the scrimmage at long law.

I see that the Editor has had an attack of acute indigestion. If there is any one who can, from experience tender sympathy it is this proponent as he has recently suffered in like manner. But for the quick and skillful work of Dr. Fowler there might have been a funeral. I do not like funerals. I would hate to be the principal at my own funeral, and I am very grateful to the Doctor for his timely intervention in my behalf. He is one of the best practitioners I have ever known, but he can administer some of the worst tasting medicines a fellow ever had to swallow but in spite of it I am still alive.

The general health of the inmates of the Home is fine. When the fact is considered that the average age here is 85, it is remarkable that so few deaths occur. The Doctor seems to know how to patch them up and hold to them. And Mrs. Fowler helps. When one appears to be slipping she prepares some form of nourishment that is strengthening and palatable. We like that which she prepares much better than we do the pills, powders and liquids the Doctor gives.

Tuesday the 11th, was a bad day in which to hold an election. The wind blew almost a gale and it was cold. Only 28 votes were cast at Mt. Creek. Strange to relate more than half of these were cast by those who have been declared, by the Probate Judge as not qualified voters. Fortunately, every one of them has in the past been registered and have voted. And yet, their names do not appear on the poll list. In days gone by their names have been, on the poll list but by some sort of "Hokus Pocus," have disappeared and they are made to appear as illegal voters.

Eighteen years ago I registered in Chilton county and since that time have voted no where but in this county. Have helped to manage some of the elections in Beat 5, Box 2 and have seen my name on the list of registered voters. And yet, at this time my name does not appear on any poll list. "He who steals my purse" will find no money in it, but he who, in the greed for office, robs me of my right of suffrage is guilty of a crime against morals, law and decency.

It seems to me to be quite unfortunate that in the preparation of the poll list such a poor quality of ink should have been used as to cause it to fade away. If it were in order I would suggest that the Probate Judge, in the future, provide those who do the writing with indeleble ink. That would save confusion and prevent honest men from resenting that which they deem and attempt to defraud them of their rights as citizens.

PARENTS-TEACHER ASSOCIATION

On Friday March 28, the Association is going to give a Carpet Rag Social for the benefit of the Grammar School.

All ladies who will help us in this good work are requested to gather and roll up a one pound ball of carpet rags. They will write their names and put it on the inside of the ball.

The gentlemen who buys the ball will conduct the lady whose name he gets in to supper.

Watch the papers next week for place and full particulars.

Every lady in the town and county is cordially invited to send in a pound of Carpet rags.

DISGRACEFUL CONDUCT

We have often spoken of the good behavior that has always prevailed in Clanton at all public places of assembly weather at the churches or at places of amusement and this has been a fact until quite recently.

There is an element among the frying size boys and girls now that is making it necessary for us to change our former opinion.

At the recent Tolbert show here there was especially during the concerts some behavior that was not only highly disgusting but really deserving of legal arrest and punishment.

In a recent issue of the News we called attention to some of the damage done by those hoodlums at the Wadesonian.

Aside from the shame and disgrace that always attaches to the perpetrations of such assinine and heathenish behavior and the mortification that it entails upon their relatives and friends the public, who pay their good money for these entertainments, is being robbed by them and deserves the protection of the law.

This bad behavior is also beginning to manifest itself at church occasionally and we hope that it will not even be necessary to refer to this part of it again unless it is to report the arrest and punishment of the guilty parties.

STREET IMPROVEMENTS

The city council decided Tuesday to turn down all bids for contract street work and to do the work by the town.

A concrete mixer is to be bought and the City Engineer will be in personal charge of the work.

This sounds like an intention to do real street improvement in the future and we hope to see the work pushed and trust that success will be with them.

YOUTH RAMMED ARM INTO LION'S THROAT

Beast Chewed Hand While Another Used a Hatchet.

The Furioli Arabs, dwelling along the southeastern border of the Sahara, may have many failings, but lack of courage cannot be counted among them.

One morning an oldish man walked into my office and said that a lion and a lioness were molesting the peace of his village, about fifteen miles away. He wished me to come and destroy the beasts. I promised to go the following day, but unfortunately the investigation of a case of murder occupied my attention and I could not go.

The day after, the old man came before me, dangling at the end of a piece of rope what I first thought was a skin of honey, but a second glance showed it was the head of the lioness. He told a story which I corroborated the same afternoon when I went to the village to dress the wounds of the chief actors.

Three boys about fifteen or sixteen years old—no Arab knows his exact age, but calculates by the time of some striking incident—went out to their field each carrying a small throwing spear, and they saw the lion and his mate under a bush. The first lad threw his spear and missed, and the quarry bounded off under another bush. The next boy hurled his spear and also missed. A third spear hurtled through the air from the arm of the youngest lad and struck the lioness in the side. She immediately turned and, with one spring, seized the thrower round the shoulders, threw him to the ground, and began gnawing at his neck.

One of the boys took off the long garment he was wearing, bound it swiftly around his arm and, grasping the animal's left ear with his left hand, drove his right arm down her throat. As her teeth closed on his arm, the third Arab picked up his small hatchet and rained blows on the head of the lioness until she fell dead at his feet.

The boys soon recovered from their wounds, and for weeks afterwards all the girls of the village wore little pieces of lion meat in their hair as a tribute to the prowess of the young men.—Maj. Edward Keith Roach in the National Geographic Magazine.

Willing to Settle

A school teacher said to a small boy:

"Joe, this arithmetic problem of yours about the bucketer and the apples is all wrong. You'll have to stay after school and work it out."

"How far wrong is it?" Joe asked.

"It's a dollar wrong," said the teacher.

Little Joe, a profiteer's son, drew forth a roll of bills and peeled a dollar off.

"I'll just pay up instead of working the thing out," he said. "You see, I'm awfully busy this afternoon. Pop and me are going off for the week-end on our new flying boat."

PERFUME SCENTS FOUND IN ANIMALS

Musk Is the Essential Ingredient of Most Odors.

Although perfume and flowers always are associated, it is not to the flower garden, but to the animal kingdom that perfume makers go for scents. It is said that in all the flower kingdom there are only six flowers that chemists can call on to help make perfume; these are the rose, tuberose, jasmine, jonquil, violet and orange blossom. The rest only furnish odors that can be imitated in perfumery laboratories. Nothing in lilac perfume, for instance, comes from lilacs.

The much-maligned "musk" is an essential ingredient of almost all perfumes. Without musk there would be no perfume, for it is the substance that holds all the others together, and imparts permanence to the more fickle vegetable odors. The odor of musk is the most enduring in the world. Musk is derived from the musk deer, a little animal about twenty-two inches high and three feet long, that inhabits central Asia. Three thousand pounds of musk are sold annually, and every ounce is worth its weight in gold.

"Clivet" is another animal perfume obtained from the glands of the civet cat, a native of Asia and Africa. This is one of the most valuable ingredients for the making of perfumes. Recently $145,000 worth of this article reached this country, packed in hollowed bullock horns, the method of transportation since the days of Solomon.

Castor is obtained from the beaver. The other principal animal product used in perfume is "ambergis." This is the cast-off secretion of the sperm whale, and like musk, has a very disagreeable odor in its undiluted strength, but it is perhaps the most indispensable raw material used by high-grade perfume manufacturers. It is found floating on the surface of the sea in warm climates. The pieces floating in the ocean sometimes weigh from 60 to 225 pounds, and we occasionally read in the paper of some skipper making his fortune by picking up a mysterious gray mass that turns out to be ambergis.

"Ah don' know dat, suh."

"Then why did you give it to me?"

"Cause you give it to me when you come in, suh."—The Forecast.

Tentative Grades for Can Tomatoes

Hoped That Specific Standards, Will Result in Improvement of Stock.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Tentative grades for canner tomatoes have been formulated by the United States Department of Agriculture for the purpose of providing a basis for agreements and purchases of raw material used in the manufacture of canned tomatoes and tomato products. It is hoped that the use of specific standards will produce better business relations between manufacturers and growers, and ultimately result in a measurable improvement in the quality of the stock delivered to the canner.

The principal of standardization is now firmly established and becomes more popular each year, the department says. Grades are widely used in the buying and selling of farm crops and are now considered a necessary feature of any well-ordered system of marketing. It is felt that grades probably can be made applicable to most, if not all, of the fruits and vegetables grown for canner purposes.

No Standard Grades. Up to the present time there has been no standard grades for canner tomatoes. Some manufacturers have endeavored to buy on more or less definite specifications, but there has been little uniformity in the terminology and application of such locally drawn standards. Establishment of federal grades will enable all canners to buy on a quality basis and enable growers to sell tomatoes at prices commensurate with the quality delivered, the department says.

Success of the department's system of grading canner crops depends largely upon the establishment of definite gradations in price to conform with the variations in quality and condition, it is pointed out. Such price gradations will furnish a stimulus to the grower to strive to deliver only a high quality product, in order to secure the attendant premium. A fair basis for discounting deliveries of low-grade tomatoes will also discourage the grower from delivering low-grade stock, and bring about a marked improvement in the quality of the tomatoes grown and harvested. The grower who finds the use of standards to produce tomatoes that will grade U. S. No. 1 will be inclined to discriminate more carefully in the purchase of his seed or plants, and will focus his interest on the elimination of the unproductive and poorly adapted strains of tomatoes and the constant improvement of a few well-selected varieties, the department feels.

Growers of canner tomatoes will not be expected to use the proposed grades as a basis for separating the crop into two or three classes before hauling to the canner, as this probably would unduly increase handling costs. Canners ordinarily are not equipped to handle lots of different qualities separately, and since individual lots lose their identity immediately after being unloaded there would be little advantage in doing extensive sorting of the crop in the field, the department says. It is felt that the more logical plan would be for manufacturers to employ the standards as a basis for sampling the loads as they come to the receiving platform, thereby ascertaining the grade and fixing the value of each lot.

To Try Out Standards. The principle of buying canner tomatoes on grade is meeting with considerable interest among canners of tomatoes and tomato products and several manufacturers have indicated their intention to try out the proposed federal standards as a basis for their buying next season. One manufacturer in southern New Jersey has incorporated in U. S. No. 1 grade in his agreements with the growers. In western New York the grades will be used by one large operator on a portion of the acreage which he has under contract for 1924. Indiana canners have assured the department that they are heartily in accord with the efforts being made to formulate a fair and workable system of grading, and have offered their co-operation in getting such a system established uniformly in this state.

The tentative grades have been approved and adopted unanimously by the Tri State Packers' association, an organization representing the canner interests of Delaware, Maryland and New Jersey. It also is reported that the proposed grades probably will be established as legal grades in New Jersey by the bureau of markets of the state department of agriculture.

Sweet Clover or Alfalfa

Soil Need Inoculation

Where neither sweet clover nor alfalfa have been grown it is necessary to inoculate the soil to obtain a stand of either. Sometimes in the case of overflow land, where inoculation has been carried by a stream from other fields it is not necessary to inoculate but it is not wise to attempt seeding on a large scale without the certain knowledge that the soil is properly inoculated. In summer seeding the hot rays of the sun will destroy the bacteria if not properly covered, but in the winter seeding is not necessary to attempt to cover the inoculation.

Yellow sweet clover can be grown farther north and at higher altitudes than can white sweet clover. It ripens about three weeks earlier and does not grow coarse and tall.

Right Materials to Reduce Potato Scab

Disease Has Been Cause of Serious Losses.

In view of the great tendency of scab to appear when the soil is alkaline, Dr. W. H. Martin, specialist in potato diseases at the New Jersey State College of Agriculture, suggests that the potato grower exercise caution in the use of alkaline materials such as lime and nitrate of soda.

Potato scab has long been the cause of serious losses to the potato grower of the state. Although this disease was less severe than usual during the past season, few fields were observed to be entirely free from it. Many fields were observed where as much as 90 per cent of the crop was so scabby as to be unsalable. It is recognized that scab is usually most severe on an alkaline soil and that as the soil acidity is increased the severity of the scab attack decreases.

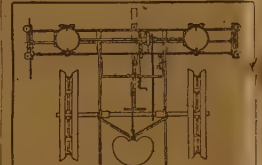

One instance was noticed recently by the potato specialist, where all of the nitrogen in a complete fertilizer was derived from nitrate of soda, with the result that a large portion of the crop was so scabby as to be unsalable. On this same farm, on land where such phosphate of ammonia was used as a source of nitrogen, a considerable reduction in scab was observed.

The influence of ammonium sulphate and nitrate of soda in the development of scab is shown by the results of a test conducted in 1921. Where all nitrate of soda was used only 20 per cent of the crop was clean, as compared with 42 per cent where sulphate of ammonia was used. In view of these results the potato grower can well afford to give serious consideration to the question of source of nitrogen in his potato fertilizer and avoid the use of large amounts of nitrate of soda where scabby potatoes have been grown in the past. Further information on this subject may be obtained by writing to the New Jersey Agricultural experiment station at New Brunswick.

Check Row Corn Planter

Improved by Illinoisian

Check row corn planters came out first in the time of our grandfathers, but improvements are being made year by year, as inventors find something that needs improving. A Rock Island (Ill.) inventor has patented the parts of a planter described here. The front runner and rear frames are hinged together, each check row having a hinged part and a catch. A single flexible cord or cable extends from one to the other, and is supported on the front runner frame. A rock shaft is mounted on the rear main frame to swing vertically therein. When rocked by the treadle, two cord engaging elements on the rock shaft frame exert longitudinal tension on the end parts of the cords.

Fertilizer Safe to Use on Land Not Fertilized

The safe use of fertilizer is not in continued applications of it to succeeding crops, but in occasional use and always on land not fertilized the year before. While one application increases the yield and quality of grain, the continued use of fertilizer is to exhaust the land and lose in the end more than we gain. Fertilizer is not a royal road to success, nor is it a substance for crop rotation or barbed manure.

The chief benefit in its use on corn belt soils is in the start it gives crops and consequent root system developed, enabling winter wheat to withstand a severe winter with nominal loss. The necessity of late sowing to avoid Hessian fly infestation gives wheat a late start. Where fertility is short, the plant has little root growth before frost checks growth entirely for the season. Fertilizer fits in in such a case, but not in continued use on the same land and crop.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Sensational Evidence Heard by the Daugherty Investigation Committee.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

HARRY DAUGHERTY, still attorney general of the United States despite the predictions of Washington's expert guessers, is now undergoing formal investigation as to his official conduct by the senate committee appointed for that purpose. Brookhart of Iowa is the chairman and Wheeler of Montana the "prosecutor," while Daugherty is represented by former Senator Chamberlain and Paul E. Bowland.

Miss Roxie Stinson, divorced wife of Jesse Smith, the attorney general's confidential aid who committed suicide last May, was the first witness, and she gave a lot of sensational testimony which involved Daugherty in many questionable transactions. Miss Stinson said Smith, after their divorce, supported her and confided in her constantly. Among the important statements she made on the first day of the hearing were:

That Smith told her that "we," meaning, she insists, Smith, Daugherty and perhaps others, were involved in a deal to sell rights to exhibit Dempsey-Carpenter fight pictures, which Smith expected to yield a profit of $180,000. The transportation of fight pictures in interstate commerce is forbidden by law.

That Smith and Daugherty came into possession of a considerable amount of White Motor Car company stock certificates in blank, twenty-five shares of which she sold "quickly and quietly" on instructions from Smith, and that Smith told her the stock cost "us" nothing.

That Smith and Daugherty came into the possession of shares of Pure Oil company stock, which Smith likewise said cost "us" nothing.

That Smith had two "blind" stock brokerage accounts in the firm of Samuel Ungerleider & Co. at Columbus, through which he did considerable speculation.

That once when she urged Smith to stop speculating because he was losing money, he told her he had just deposited $175,000 of "eastern money" in the bank of Mal Daugherty, brother of the attorney general, in Washington Courthouse, to protect his (Smith's) losses.

That Smith told her about a mysterious "green house" in K street, near the Department of Justice, where "they" met to discuss their deals.

That Daugherty and Smith were inseparable in all these transactions and that Smith never acted without the full knowledge and authority of the attorney general.

That Smith disliked the life of intrigue he led in Washington, but said he would stick it out because of his friendship for Daugherty and that, prior to his suicide, he lived in constant fear of "being closed down upon."

Secretary Mellon's name was brought into the Daugherty investigation by Gaston B. Means, former Department of Justice agent, who said that for President Harding he investigated matters connected with "certain permits" having to do with violations of the Volstead act.

"I gave Captain Seale thousands of dollars to catch him" (Mellon), Means testified. Seale was formerly a Department of Justice investigator who was active in pressing for investigation of air craft scandals.

Also at President Harding's request, Means testified he investigated Senator Caraway, and also Senator LaFollette after the latter had been agitating investigation of the Teapot Dome scandal.

Means testified that in February, 1922, in the old Bellevue hotel in Washington he received from "a Jap" representing Mitsui and Company" $100,000 to stop government prosecution in the Standard Aircraft case and that he turned the money over to the late Jess Smith, Attorney General Daugherty's "bumper and friend."

EDWARD B. McLEAN, the Washington newspaper publisher, appeared before the Teapot Dome committee and admitted that at Fall's request he had previously misrepresented the circumstances of the famous $100,000 loan. His testimony may be thus summarized:

Fall, in November, 1921, asked him for a loan of $100,000 to buy a ranch. He gave Fall two checks for this amount, but Fall returned them uncashed. Two years later, in December, 1923, Fall, a sick man under investigation, called McLean to Atlantic City and asked him to make a public statement to the effect that he had furnished the $100,000, making it appear that the checks had actually been cashed. He agreed on Fall's assurance that he had not obtained the money from Sinclair or from any connection with the Teapot Dome. Later, when disclosures before the senate committee began to arouse his suspicions he told Fall he was going to tell the truth and did so to Sinclair Walsh when Walsh went to Miami in January. He agreed it would have been better for all concerned if the truth had been told in the beginning.

McLean's story minimized the importance of the mass of telegrams that passed between Washington and his place in Palm Beach, and he scoffed at the rumor of a million dollar slush fund.

Senator Lenroot of Wisconsin resigned as chairman and member of the oil lease investigating committee because of ill health. He was succeeded by Senator Ladd of North Dakota, one of the LaFollette group.

OUT in Cheyenne, Wyo., the government's fight for the annulment of the Teapot Dome lease to Sinclair and the Mammoth Oil company was started before Federal District Judge T. Blake Kennedy. Altea Pomerene and Owen G. Roberts were there for the government, and Sinclair was on hand with his attorneys, ready, he declared, to fight the government's suit "from hell to breakfast." It may be added that Edward Doheny also says he is prepared to defend his rights in any action the government may bring to cancel oil leases held by him.

SINCE the attorney general declined to give the house of representatives any information concerning the criminal charges said to have been made against two congressmen before Chicago grand jury, the house decided to investigate the matter and a committee of five, headed by Theodore E. Burton of Ohio was named. Representatives Langley of Kentucky and Zihlman of Maryland, who admit they have been told they are the two men involved, have vehemently denied any wrongdoing and have demanded an inquiry.

WITH all the investigations undertaken and contemplated by congress and all the time it is wasting in acrid partisan debate, one wonders why it does not order an inquiry into its own neglect of pressing public business. There are those, too, who think there might well be an investigation of the influences that induced the passage last week, the bill authorizing acceptance of Henry Ford's offer for Muscle Shoals. McKenzie of Illinois introduced the measure and it was adopted by a vote of 227 to 142, party lines being disregarded. Under the terms of the bill Ford will obtain for $5,000,000 properties that cost nearly $84,000,000; he has the right to lease dams 2 and 3 at Muscle Shoals and adjacent power stations for 100 years for a total rental of nearly $220,000,000; the government is to replace the Gorgas steam power plant for not more than the $3,427,487, for which it sold it to the Alabama Power company, and sell it to Ford along with nitrate plants 1 and 2 and the Waco quarry. It is not necessary to give other features of the bill, but it may be stated that the offer of a group of southern power companies, submitted in the Hull bill, was in the opinion of competent authorities much more generous. Also there is before congress a measure for the starting of a great superpower project in which Muscle Shoals would be a vital link, and many eminent engineers and industrial economists are convinced that superpower development is to be the greatest thing in the country's near future.

There is no intimation of undue financial influence used to secure the adoption of the Ford offer, but the automobile magnate seems to have our legislators "buffaloed" politically.

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE sent a special message to congress last week urging it lay aside all other business and authorize a 25 per cent reduction in 1923 income taxes before March 15, the last day for the filing of schedules. He said the people expected it and it would benefit all elements. Opposition appeared at once, and Representative Longworth told the President there was not the slightest chance of passing the emergency resolution. The Democrats and insurgent Republicans accused Mr. Coolidge of playing politics. On all sides, however, it was agreed that the general tax bill, now being debated in the senate, will carry the 25 per cent retroactive reduction.

THE new soldiers' bonus bill, providing paid up life insurance policies, was completed by the house committee. The policies are to be twenty-year endowment and valued on the basis of length of service, with $1 allowed for each day of home service and $1.25 for each day of overseas service, and to the total will be added 25 per cent. Provision is made for dependents and for cash payments to veterans not entitled to more than $50. The total cost of the bill, it is estimated, would be about $2,000,000,000, and not more than $90,000,000 would have to be expended by the government in any one year.

FEDERAL JUDGE KENYON having declined the navy portfolio, President Coolidge offered the position to Curtis D. Wilbur, chief justice of the California Supreme court, and that gentleman accepted it by wire, saying he would go to Washington as soon as the appointment was confirmed by the senate.

Justice Wilbur was born in Boonesboro, Ia., in 1867 and was educated in the public schools there and in Jamestown, N. D. He was graduated from the United States Naval academy at Annapolis in 1888. Later he studied law and began practice in Los Angeles. For many years he has been regarded as one of the leading lawyers and jurists of California, and is known especially for his work in behalf of child welfare. He is a Congregationalist and a prominent Sunday school worker. Judge Wilbur's brother, Dr. Ray L. Wilbur, is president of Stanford university.

EDWIN DENBY's retirement from the position of secretary of the navy was accomplished with dignity on his part and accompanied by hearty expressions of esteem by his associates and personal friends. Before he left his offices he was sworn in as a major in the marine reserve corps in the presence of many high officers of the navy and marines, and as he took the oath the marine band outside played the corps march, "Semper Paratus."

BANKERS of New York and neighbors have gone to the rescue of the French franc by establishing a banking credit of not less than $100,000,000 in favor of the Bank of France, acting for the French government. The loan will be used to stabilize French exchange and for other purposes, and is so well secured by gold held in the vaults of the Bank of France that the interest rate is said to be relatively low. When the loan was announced there was a sharp rally in francs on the exchanges, and speculators began to wall. Poincare was still having trouble in forcing his tax increase measure through the senate.

There were disturbing rumors from Paris that a military coup d'etat was being hatched and that the government was aware of it and was ready to proclaim a state of siege or martial law. The German government also was meeting resistance to its tax regulations and other emergency ordinances, and the Socialists were so determined that President Ebert dissolved the reichstag on Thursday. Ebert has told his friends that he will retire after the elections in May.

GREECE is now added to the nations that have recognized the Russian soviet government. The Greek cabinet under Kafandarlis having resigned, a new ministry has been formed by Papanastasiou.

The DAIRY

INCREASED INCOME DERIVED FROM COW

The number of dairy cows and the interest in dairying has increased greatly during the past few years. This has been due to the greater income to be derived from dairy cows during the period of depression. The question of overproduction has been brought up in view of this dairy interest.

It is not the problem of overproduction which should concern us, but rather the problem of encouraging real dairymen to take up dairying and how to keep them in business permanently after they are once established. Periods of depression have come before and many have taken up the dairy cow. The fact to be regretted is that as soon as grain or cattle or any other agricultural pursuit becomes profitable again, a large number disavowed the cow and gave up the business. Will this occur again, and if so, how can it be prevented?

No man should undertake dairying unless he really likes cows, and no man should begin before first making the firm determination to stay with the industry. Nothing is more disturbing to agricultural economics than the lack of permanency, consistency, and stability. The farmer who is constantly changing his agricultural business is usually "out" in times of high prices for that industry and "in" during the times of low prices.

Since 1850 the ratio between our population and our dairy cattle has remained practically constant. From 1890 to 1920 our population increased 89 per cent. If this increases at the same rate in the future, our population will need more cows to maintain the ratio. During recent years our consumption of milk has increased, and it will continue to increase as the value of milk as a food is realized.—B. W. Fairbanks, Colorado Agricultural College.

Balanced Ration Is Best for Producing More Milk

Twenty good cows were recently placed in an experiment at the Illinois agricultural experiment station, and the results are very definitely in favor of a balanced ration. The 20 cows were divided into two lots, and during a preliminary period, both received a balanced ration, which consists of 90 pounds of corn silage, 8 pounds of clover hay, 4 2/3 pounds of ground feed, 3 1/3 pounds of ground corn. The nutritive ratio of the ration is 1:8. After the first period, one of the lots was taken off of a balanced ration, and given the following instead: Thirty pounds of corn silage, 5 pounds of timothy hay, 9 pounds of clover hay, 8 pounds of ground corn; nutritive ratio of 1:11.

At the end of 131 days, lot 1, which had a balanced ration, had gained from 1.7 to 10.65 pounds of milk per day. The lot which was changed to an unbalanced ration gained from .09 to .305. In other words, even though the second lot was getting what many dairymen might call at a glance a good variety of feeds, it was failing to gain along with the balanced ration by a long way. This illustrates very well the point we have made before: Even though you may be feeding roughage and a grain you are not getting all the milk you could from the same cows unless you know that the feeds are balanced.

Producing Quality First Is Aim of Good Dairymen

The far-sighted dairymen has no trouble in realizing that one of the biggest factors in his business is to market a first-grade product. During the past few years, attention has been more forcibly paid to dairy products as an essential human food. Through the efforts of the National Dairy council, the great army of physicians, nurses, state and federal institutions, the consumption of dairy products has been slightly increased per capita.

This increase per capita can be advanced tremendously when each and every man who milks cows realizes that he is like every one else in business namely, that when he produces quality first, volume always follows.

The best butter made on earth cannot make first-grade butter from second-grade cream. This summer let us all renew our efforts to market a product of which we can be proud.

Get out the milk cooler, keep the barn and surroundings clean and sweet, wash the separator after every time it is used, wash the cow's udders and brush them off a little often; the details count, and attention to details pays.—H. R. Lascelles, Fieldman for the Colorado State Dairy Commission.

Solve Problem of Feeding

Ensilage when fed along with alfalfa hay or even native hay solves the greatest problem of feeding cows to keep them in milk flow. When a farmer has ensilage, alfalfa hay and some other good hay, the amount of grain necessary is greatly reduced.

Need Good Winter Feed

Dairy cattle need good winter feed. They do not carry as much flesh as beef cattle and therefore need more protection.

Rejuvenated

Prominent retired merchant says he feels like new man since Tanlac relieved him of his troubles. Can now outwalk men 20 years younger.

R. E. Boyd, 5000 Fourteenth St., N. W., Washington, D. C., for forty-eight years prominent hardware merchant in the national capital, but now retired, lends his name to further the cause of Tanlac.

"Indigestion and stomach weakness of a very pronounced type had troubled me for several months prior to last October fifteenth," said Mr. Boyd, recently, "but since that date the Tanlac treatment has made a new man of me. Now I eat heartily, never have a sign of indigestion, sleep like a log, and get up mornings feeling like an athlete. Today I can outwalk men twenty years younger. Tanlac alone put me in my present fine physical condition, enabling me to get more real pleasure than ever before out of meeting and mingling with friends. Tanlac has rejuvenated me completely, so to speak. It's the finest medicine I ever ran across."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Accept no substitute. Over 40 million bottles sold.

Take Tanlac Vegetable Pills.

Relief for Coughs

Use PISO's—this prescription quickly relieves children and adults. A pleasant syrup. No opiates. 35c and 65c sizes sold everywhere.

CORNS

Lift Off—No Pain!

Doesn't hurt one bit! Drop a little "Freezone" on an aching corn, instantly that corn stops hurting, then shortly you lift it right off with fingers.

Your druggist sells a tiny bottle of "Freezone" for a few cents, sufficient to remove every hard corn, soft corn, or corn between the toes, and the foot calluses, without soreness or irritation.

Loosen Up That Cold With Musterole

Have Musterole handy when a cold starts. It has all of the advantages of grandmother's mustard plaster WITH-OUT the blister. You just apply it with the fingers. First you feel a warm tingle as the healing ointment penetrates the pores, then comes a soothing, cooling sensation and quick relief.

Made of pure oil of mustard and other simple ingredients, Musterole is recommended by many nurses and doctors. Try Musterole for bronchitis, sore throat, stiff neck, pleurisy, rheumatism, lumbago, croup, asthma, neuralgia, congestion, pains and aches of the back or joints, sore muscles, sprains, bruises, chilblains, frosted feet, colds of the chest. It may prevent pneumonia and "flu."

To Mothers: Musterole is now made in mild form for babies and small children. Ask for Children's Musterole.

THE OIL SCANDAL

Right after the civil war Ulysses Grant was made president. He it was who accepted the surrender of Gen. Rob. E. Lee, at Appomattox when the Southern Confederacy failed.

He was so rascally that even his own party turned against him and the administration, to the day of his death, his reputation was ruined and his life a misery.

In after years, public sentiment had time to cool of and look at the matter with a fair and understanding vision and so far as he was concerned, the judgement of even his enemies was reversed and history rightfully refers to him as the innocent victim of his supposed frauds.

He appointed men as his official family who he felt like were responsible for his election. Men who, in the integrity of his own intentions, he trusted as he did himself. Through the influence of his confidence in them they staged the most scandalous regime of roguery and rascality that had ever been heard of before and hid their own vile villainy behind the confiding form of this unsuspecting soldier. They used him and ruined him that they might pile up wealth at the expense of an impoverished people.

Today it begins to look like history repeated itself in the election of President Harding. He died before the culpability of his trusted friends became public property and before some of his main anchors among the administrative force were proven crooks and caught with the goods.

President Coolidge seems to stand by each one of them as they go down but it is hardly probable that he is a party to any of the crooked deals that have been put over right under his nose.

His bosom friend, Senator Fall, seems to have been the main guy in pulling off the Tea Pot Dome oil scandal and fell under the first fire of the investigating committee, discredited and disgraced.

Next came Secretary Denby, another close friend of the president. He also fell as the light was turned on and had to resign. The president stood by him to the last and is even being sympathetic. Then comes Attorney General Daugherty, another pet of both Harding and Coolidge, who is already forever ruined as a public man by the evidence of his crooked deals. The president is still backing him up too, but it looks like the committee is certain to get his head also before they stop.

Then Gen. Forbes and several of his pals are under criminal indictment for stealing several million dollars from the disabled soldiers of the great war by their notoriously crooked management of the Veterans Bureau.

One by one these friends of the recent president's who were given fat jobs for their friendship, are being shown up as monumental crooks and grafters. History will again have to take care of the memory of both Harding and Coolidge and all because the men they trusted as true friends and honest citizens used them as an innocent means to enable them to rob the people and grow rich by rascality.

A GOOD MAN

Mr. A. L. Kimbrough, a life long farmer, is a candidate for the office of State Commissioner of Game and Fisheries, subject to the action of the Democratic primary in May.

Mr. Kimbrough does not belong to the political machine that shape things in recent years, but is an honest plain and competent citizen and a true democrat in whom there is no guile.

If he is elected to this office its affairs will be conducted with an eye single to a studios enforcement of the law and no favorites will be played. We know Mr. Kimbrough personally and endorse him as a mighty clever man.

Ex-Deputy Sheriff, Gillispie was here the latter part of last week. He is one of the Federal Prohibition Enforcement officers, and has headquarters at Montgomery. From the day he began his career as Deputy Sheriff in Chilton, until the present time he has always done his duty regardless of personal friendship, the station occupied in life by the higher ups, political influence of the violators of the law.

BIRTH OF A NATION

This wonderful masterpiece of the moving picture show will be put on at the Wadesonian Theatre here on March 27, 28, and 29, with matinees in the afternoon each day at 3 o'clock. The night performance will begin at 7:30.

This will be the only opportunity you will ever have to see this great artistic triumph, as it has been called in from the screen and the performance here will conclude its contacts.

We have seen this picture and can testify from our own personal experience, that to see it makes an era in the life of any person who sees it for the first time.

It teaches and pictures some facts in our own intimate history that are awfully worth while to remember and profit by in these present times.

We hope every man and woman who possibly can do so, will arrange to take advantage of this opportunity and go out and see this wonderful pageant.

People over 65 years of age are cordially invited to come out to the afternoon performance as the guests of the Ku Klux Klan. They will be admitted and given the best seats without the cost of a penny. They are earnestly requested to come out and see on the screen some of the scenes they remember from their youthful days when the disgraceful reconstruction period was on hand.

This show is given under the auspices of the local Ku Klux Klan.

Reserved seat tickets are on sale at the Alred Drug Store. Drop in and buy yours.

DOES CLANTON WANT INDUSTRIES?

The papers have told us of the trend of the Mills to the South. Twelve of the largest mills in the United States closed down at Fall River, Massachusetts because they could not meet Southern competition. Andalusia got busy and got one of these large mills to locate in their town. There are eleven others left to locate in some Southern towns. Will Clanton make an effort to get one or will she sit supinely and see the opportunity roll away?

A certain person who has been investigating the textile industry tells us that the main objection that is offered to coming here is the fact that Clanton has not proved her faith by her works. The mills say if Clanton is such a fine place for a manufacturing plant, why don't the business men put up one of their own and run it? Some of the towns that have secured the large mills have agreed to let the mills have money on good security in tight pin-mills turn loose money at 6% interest at the rate of six per cent. This seems sound policy when viewed for a long time. The mills turn loose money and keep it in circulation. The business men get back through increased business the loss in interest between six per cent and the legal rate. That is one of the big things that the State of North Carolina has to offer. The legal rate there is ONLY six per cent.

It seems to us that the business men could very well afford to get together and meet the advantages that the other places are offering. If by operating a small plant of some description, either Hosiery Mill or Over-all factory, other industries of a large capital could be induced to come to Clanton it seems to us that the merchants and real estate men could afford to operate such a plant on a very small margin of profit.

Ten thousand dollars would buy the machinery to start an OVERALL factory that would employ sixty people. Of course the finished garments are sold at a percent above the cost of manufacturing. The overall game is a safe business capital. The machinery could be bought for $12,000 that would turn out 100 dozen pair per day.

Industry begets industry. Will Clanton sit still forever or will she rise up and move in unison, laying aside petty jealousies and distrust? Echo answers, "Will she?"

BRANDON READY TO ABANDON LEASING

FIRST CHANGES WILL BE AT BELLE ELLEN AND FLAT TOP MINES.

WILL MINE COAL WITH CONVICTS

Later Changes Will Be Made At Banner Mines, Belonging To The Pratt Consolidated Coal Co.

Montgomery—Governor Brandon is ready to do away with the lease system in Alabama, so far as leasing convicts to coal companies and others is concerned, according to information given out here.

As was announced several weeks ago, the state will work the convicts in mines and elsewhere, having control over the wards from the time they are sentenced until they are released.

The first places where the change will take place will be Bell Ellen, in Bibb county, and at Flat Top, in Jefferson, according to the reports from Montgomery. The state will mine the coal and dump in on railroad cars at a stipulated price. The companies owning the mines will be represented only at the mines by engineers and men to weigh this coal. The state will have absolute control of the convict, inside and outside of the mines. All tasks and all care of the convicts will be directly in charge of the state, and no company will have anything to say as to the working of the men.

The information from Montgomery is to the effect that the first move in this change of operation will take place immediately. A little later, the mines at Banner, in Jefferson county, belonging to the Pratt Consolidated Coal company, will be taken over. So far as Weagra is concerned, the convicts employed there are leased to the company by the various counties which have no means of employing their own convicts. After Banner has been taken over, Alrich will be considered.

Chicago Wrecks Claim Thirty Victims

Chicago—More than 30 persons were injured in three train wrecks in Chicago and its suburbs, all due to a thick layer of fog that enveloped the city and tied traffic into knots. Twenty persons were hurt, five seriously, when two elevated trains crashed. More than 10 were injured when two Illinois Central suburban trains collided. One man was dangerously hurt when one Chicago and Northwestern Railroad train struck another.

AVERY Chilled Plows

Rightful Leaders

AVERY Chilled Plows are leaders simply because they are really better in many important ways. Avery design is the result of nearly a century of plow-making. Avery plows are built in the finest, most complete and modern plow factory in the world. Scientific accuracy in the selection and testing of materials insures strength, durability, and almost perfect work. Avery repair parts always fit perfectly any Avery Chilled Plow of same size ever made. And because they cannot work loose they seldom break. The Avery "lock that locks"—to be had only on the Avery—holds the plowshare in place no matter how long in use; and relieves strain on bolts. Guarantee tag as shown is attached to every genuine Avery Chilled Plow. This guarantee does not make an Avery Chilled Plow any better, but it is our written pledge of quality to all buyers and users.

Avery Chilled Plows are protected by important patents; therefore all repair parts we sell our customers are always genuine and always covered by the Avery Guarantee. Call on us for all the facts about this famous plow.

There is a full line of famous Avery walking, riding and tractor plows, tillage implements, and Champion harvesting and hay machines.

THE WAY HE SAW IT

To the Editor of the News—

I noticed your editorial in last week's issue of the News in regard to the location of the new B. & M. highway through this section of the county. You stated that if the road run out ten miles west of Verbena that it would run through a section of the county so sparsely settled that tourists would have to carry their drinking water in a thermos bottle.

I wish to ask what is the first and most important thing to cause this or any other community to become a thickly settled one? This is readily seen to be good roads. Did people move into and build up the communities that are now served by the present B. & M. Highway before or after the highway was built? Of course the people already living in the communities did their part and profited accordingly.

Now when the old highway was built it ran through Thorsby, Clanton, Cooper, Verbena, Mt. Creek, Marbury and on to Montgomery. That connected these towns with a good dirt road. Besides that they have at their immediate service the best railway transportation system in the south—The L. & N.

How many of the farmers of Chilton and Autauga counties living east and west of this road who do their trading in Jenison, Thorsby, Clanton, Cooper, Verbena, Mt. Creek and Marbury does this serve? A small portion. What is it that has put these farmers who toil day in and day out earning their living by the "Sweat of the Brow?"

Now just as the Highway Commission is about to give us a highway through this section of the county where it is badly needed you and some philanthropists of Verbena want it put right through Clanton and Verbena when you already have a highway supported by the state aid in addition to the railroad. That is unjust. It is a monopoly—a regular Tea Pot Dome right here in Chilton.

Now about the extra cost of putting the road there as planned by the engineers. A glance at the map of Alabama will show you that the distance will not vary much from what it would be if put by Wetumpka. The citizens of Autauga county and Prattville are willing and anxious to back it up to the limit.

From the point of view of the tourist the proposed route would become attractive. We must have a starter. The route is far more attractive than some parts of the old B. & M. highway. Give us the road and the tourists will come sure.

Now when the engineers get busy with their surveying the good people along this route will, to say the least, give them as good drinking water as you will find in Alabama.

Yours respectfully,
S. N. DAVIS

Mr. G. F. Summers, of Jenison, was here not many days ago. Mr. Summers for several years was a citizen in heat three, but is now an active booster of heat two and the excellent Accredited High School in Jenison.

Dr. C. N. Parnell and family were here last Saturday. Mrs. Parnell was one of the Democratic nominees as members of the County School Board in the last election. Mrs. Parnell is a graduate of the Alabama College at Montevallo. She was president of the Alumnae of that well known institution for several years.

Fonza Cunningham, one of Uncle Sam's navy men, was here the first part of the week visiting his mother, Mrs. A. F. Brown. He is located at Hampton Roads, Va. Mr. Cunningham is a graduate of the Chilton High. We are expecting him to become "Hobson the 2nd."

Among the recent visitors to Clanton we noticed Mr. W. O. Rich, of Birmingham. Mr. Rich now holds a responsible position with the Birmingham Age-Herald. We are delighted to know of his success in getting a good position with such a reputable paper as the Age-Herald.

Mrs. C. E. Marcus and little son, Jr. of Nashville, Tenn. are here this week visiting Mr. Marcus' Parents, Dr. and Mrs. T. J. Marcus.

BIG COTTON CROP

It is no trouble now to make a guess about the cotton acreage this year in this section. It is going to be equal to, if not greater, than it was last year. The fertilizer sales show this.

Unless the excessive cold winter has crippled the boll weevil seriously cotton will sell for about 15 or 20 cents next fall.

WILLIAM JOHNSON DEAD

On last Saturday night at the home of his aunt, Miss Monna Baker, Mr. William Johnson passed away.

Mr. Johnson, and his sister, came over from Coosa county about one year ago, to the home of Miss Baker, and even at that time, he was far gone with tuberculosis. Since that time he has gone gradually downward until Saturday night, when death came and the struggle was over.

The deceased was about 38 years of age and leaves an only sister to mourn and miss him.

The burial took place at the Hill hand cemetery Sunday afternoon, Rev. M. J. Parrish, assisted by Rev. T. J. Deason officiated.

Undertaker Martin was in charge of the funeral arrangements.

Air Records for Army Made With Old Planes

In the last year the army air service set 11 world records, most of them with obsolete craft brought up to date. Records for 500, 1,000, 1,500, 2,000, 2,500, 3,000, 3,500, 4,000, 5,000 and 5,500 kilometers were made at Dayton, O., and San Diego, Cal., and were made possible, for the longer distances, through refueling in full flight, a gas tank plane, the new supply being fed through a hose to the lower ship. A world's duration record of 38 hours, 6 minutes and 31 seconds was made over Dayton on April 16-17, by Lieuts. Oakley Kelly and J. A. Macready. Kelly was later surpassed on August 27-28 by Lieuts. L. H. Smith and J. P. Richter at San Diego, with a record of 87 hours 15 minutes 43.8 seconds. This was made in an army observation plane, seven years old in design, refueling in flight.—United States Army Recruiting News.

Why Pay the Penalty of Lying Awake?

MANY people spend hours at night, restlessly tossing from side to side, waiting for sleep. All because they drink coffee with their evening meal.

If the caffeine in coffee irritates your nervous system and keeps you awake when you should be asleep, recuperating your energies, why not stop coffee and drink Postum?

Postum is a pure cereal beverage, absolutely free from caffeine or anything that can disturb health and comfort. Many prefer Postum for its delightful aroma and flavor.

Lesson for March 23

THE REIGN OF SOLOMON

LESSON TEXT—II Chron. 1:17-12; I Kings 1:14-15.
GOLDEN TEXT—The fear of the Lord is the beginning of knowledge.—Prov. 1:7.

PRIMARY TOPIC—A Young King's Dream.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Solomon's Choice.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Solomon's Wisdom and Folly.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Lessons From Solomon's Reign.

Here again we must go outside of the particular text assigned and make a survey of Solomon's reign.

I. Solomon Anointed King (I Kings 1:15-40).

David had heretofore failed to show the people who should be king after him (I Kings 1:15). Through the combined appeals of Bathsheba and Nathan, he is now stirred to action. He immediately sent for the faithful three, Zadok, Nathan and Benaiah, and bade them to anoint Solomon king. They speedily executed their commission, and soon the people shouted, "God save King Solomon."

II. Solomon's Wise Choice (II Chron. 1:7-12).

1. God's Gracious Offer (v. 7). This offer followed Solomon's lavish sacrifice to the Lord. God said, "Ask what I shall give thee," thus placing very wide possibilities before the king. God, as it were, signed blank checks and turned them over to Solomon to fill in any amount that his heart desired. This offer to Solomon was no exceptional one, for opportunities equally limitless are placed before us. God is saying to every one of His children, "Ask, and it shall be given you." (John 15:7).

2. Solomon's Wise Choice (v. 8-12). The Lord's gracious offer brought the king face to face with the responsibility of making his choice. Solomon did not ask for wisdom for vain display, but for the good of others. He desired inward worth, not outward show. In this choice, he asked for two particular things:

(1) That God's promise to his father, David, might be established.

(2) That wisdom would be given to him to perform his duties.

3. God's Unstinted Gift to Solomon (v. 13). Solomon's petition pleased the Lord. Because he put wisdom first God saw that he could be trusted with material goods also.

III. The Glory of Solomon's Reign.

1. His Extensive Kingdom (I Kings 4:21-25). He ruled over the kingdoms from the Euphrates river to the Mediterranean sea, except the Philistines, and they were in alliance with him.

2. His Great Wisdom (I Kings 4:29-34). It excelled that of the Chaldeans, Persians and Egyptians. He had a singularly comprehensive mind. He was:

(1) A moral philosopher. He spoke three thousand proverbs.

(2) A poet. His songs were one thousand five.

(3) A botanist. He spoke of trees from the cedar tree, which was in Lebanon, even unto the hyssop.

(4) A zoologist. He spoke of beasts and of fish, and of creeping things, and of fowls.

3. The Temple (I Kings 5-6). This was an exact reproduction of the tabernacle, double in size, executed in marble and gold. The amount of labor, skill and money expended on the building was exceedingly great (I Chron. 22:14-10).

4. His Royal Palaces Adjoining the Temple (I Kings 7). He was nearly twice as long in building these as in building the Lord's house.

5. His Commerce (I Kings 9:26-28). Compare II Chron. 9 and 10:21. His trading ships went east as far as the Indian ocean, perhaps even to India; and west as far as Spain.

6. His Army and Navy (I Kings 10:26-29). This was for more than display. He put his nation into a state of preparedness.

This greatness was associated with the name of the Lord. It was known that his fame was due to his relation with the living God.

IV. Solomon's Failure (I Kings 11:3-12).

Because Solomon did evil in the sight of the Lord, the Lord was angry with him and assured him that the kingdom would be rent from him and given to his servant. However, for the sake of David, he would not bring this humiliation upon Solomon while he lived. Solomon's chief offenses were alliances with foreign powers through marrying kings' daughters. This compromise weakened his moral nature and he soon followed his wives in the worship of false gods.

MARY SUCCEEDS ON MAIN STREET

By LAURA MILLER

MOTHERING THAT PAYS DIVIDENDS

The profession of motherhood is not supposed to be a well-paid occupation. And foster mothers—who do for pay what real mothers gladly give from affection—are generally not highly regarded. Yet out in Phoenix lives a woman who mothers all the children in the state of Arizona, gets paid for doing it, and has been honored by nearly every organization in the state.

When Mrs. H. A. Guild was a girl she loved her younger brothers and sisters. When she grew up and taught, she loved her pupils—even in the huge machine-like system of the Chicago schools. And when marriage brought no babies of her own, she began to love and foster public movements for bettering humanity. Out of this last love grew her present mothering job. She was the first woman in Arizona to be appointed head of the department of state. Secretary of the Arizona child welfare board, she now has supervision of all child welfare measures, working through 65 county child welfare board members. And in addition she is a foster mother to a child for every day in the year, for there are 385 orphan children who live in foster homes or with widowed mothers, as wards of Arizona.

That's enough to keep any mother heart full to overflowing, isn't it? Even if the men and women of the state forget her, I imagine Mrs. Guild could keep happy. Furthermore, she's owner of a ten-acre ranch that has been turned from a sagebrush and cactus desert to a producer of roses and "long staple" cotton. The ranch owner organized the rural women of the state and brought them into association with their city sisters through district federations. Naturally the Federation of Women's Clubs made her state president.

Then Mrs. Guild decided that women who had the vote ought to use it politically. Not unnaturally she was the first Arizona woman sent to the national Republican convention in 1920. In 1922 she was nominated for representative to congress, and was defeated only because her whole party ticket was snowed under.

Knowing big city, small city, town and country intimately, Mrs. Guild declares that if a girl has ability there is always room on "Main Street" even though it may look crowded or empty of opportunity.

THE WOMAN PRO OFFICER

Back in 1873-4 when the first prohibition movement swept America, Mrs. Georgianna Hopley went out with the Bucyrus group to clean up that Ohio town. Her husband, John Hopley, was editor of the Bucyrus Journal. Of their children seven are now active newspaper men and women.

The eighth, Georgia Hopley, has graduated from newspaper work into a job that combines the ambitions of both mother and father. She writes on the letterhead of the United States Treasury department and signs "General Prohibition Agent, Constructive Information Bureau, Prohibition Unit," and with a flash of humor recently added, "That's all."

She is said to have been the first woman in Ohio to enter active newspaper work. In 1890 Governor Nash appointed her representative of Ohio women at the Paris exposition. She remained abroad for many months and has since made frequent trips to England and France. As women have become more and more active in politics she has given much of her time to political publicity campaigns. Whatever else Miss Hopley's business cards say they always have in the lower left-hand corner, Home Address, Bucyrus, Ohio. "It isn't city pride alone that makes up my loyalty to the old home town," she insists. "Bucyrus is always on the map!"

A large part of her work for the prohibition unit consists in public speaking. Reporters who have followed her meetings are astonished into commenting on the fact that she is broad-minded, with all her enthusiasm for prohibition. She comes with official power, they say, but she is content to let the question rest with the public. She is spending her time just "telling folks about it." She tells them what the enforcement forces are doing. She tells them what great obstacles have been thrown in the way. She pictures those who are used maliciously and those used by the uniformed and the un-intelligent.

Controlling the malicious wet forces isn't the part of the job that this skilled newspaper woman is interested in. Education of those who are uninformed and indifferent carries to Georgia Hopley the thrill of being as practical as a shoe-selling campaign and as idealistic as the dreams of her mother.

THE CONSOLERS BEING CONSOLED

By JANE GORDON

MOLLIE had quarreled with Richard, and the world was dark. It was a lover's quarrel, with the usual lover's cause—jealousy. Both were to blame, yet one could hardly blame either, for it happened in this wise:

From the moment of Richard's engagement to Mollie he lost interest in those social pastimes he had formerly enjoyed. So when "the boys" called Dick up for a friendly game of cards, or an evening at the club, he would pause, thinking out some plausible excuse and would, in the end, refuse the invitation.

"I am going your way, Dick," Betty said, "but as it leads past Mollie's door; perhaps you'd better not walk with me."

When chance meetings and chance walks continued several evenings Mollie, somewhat impatiently it must be confessed, asked of her lover, "Why are you so often with Betty, Richard? Are you very good friends?"

The wise lover read the signal and avoided happening Betty's way thenceforth.

"It wasn't that I was silly enough to care about your being out together," Mollie told him afterward; "it was Betty's insinuation regarding some past affair between you which made me resentful."

"Past affair?" exclaimed the annoyed Richard, "there never has been any kind of an affair between Betty Lewis and me. If she is trying to make trouble I shall avoid her."

It was not his fault when Ted Stratton, driving with the gay Betty in her car, halted Dick one summer evening, and shouted to him to wait, he wanted to see him about a club matter. Dick waited in the road; as the car came to a stop Ted got out; Betty, very charming in a pink frock, smilingly lingered. "Ted is going on to the library, Dick," she said. "I am going directly your way. Want to ride home?"—And Betty added—"Unless you think Mollie would mind."

He took his seat at Betty's side in the little car. He was taken decidedly aback when Mollie appeared at that very moment from an opposite store doorway. That Betty was not surprised was evidenced in the coolness of her waved greeting.

Mollie's mother, insisting upon knowing why Richard was in disparplore, suggested that as Dick could so enjoy himself she could not see why Mollie should continue to turn aside from the attention which Bob Edwards eagerly offered. The Edmonds were a family of much more to be desired of attainment, in the opinion of Mollie's mother, than a law practice not yet fully acquired. So as days passed, Mollie in her new loneliness accepted Bob Edwards' invitation to theater and elsewhere, which, of course, forced Richard, when his friends brought to him this news, to play an opposite part, selecting Hortense Warren as his companion. When the two couples met occasionally, they would greet one another with bows of studied formality.

And all the time Richard spent the hours at the office in unenviable mood, while the passing glimpse of a dark head resembling Richard's would cause Mollie to catch her breath, painfully.

Miss Hortense Warren, having accepted Richard's last invitation, sat, a frown creasing her fair brow. Richard's attentions seemed to lead nowhere beyond the spending of a pleasant hour in her society.

Richard, that same afternoon, remembering his engagement with Miss Warren for the play that night, decided to avoid the usual boresome visit with her family, asked Miss Warren down to the hotel dinner. He went into the Palace lobby prepared to enter one of the telephone booths. Before doing so he paused at the stand where telephone directories were displayed beneath bright lights. Then Richard's heart performed an acrobatic feat. Mollie stood beneath the light that was next his. She was absorbed in hunting a certain number; found it, her gloved finger, marking the place. Richard read it, deliberately—it was the telephone number of Edwards & Son, jewelers. Mollie looked up, smiled brilliantly and passed into a booth. Richard stalked into the next one—he hoped she would hear his message to Hortense Warren. She did—Richard was amazed at the answer to his message.

"Sorry," drawled Miss Warren. "I had already called your office to tell you that a headache will prevent me from keeping my engagement. Good night."

If Richard had been less amazed he would not have repeated—that Mollie might hear—"Then you will not go?"

He heard the tinkle of Mollie's nickel as central took her number. He also heard Mollie explaining to Bob that she would meet him at the Palace to go to the theater. Followed Mollie's incredulous tone—"You say you must break the engagement for tonight, Bob?" Then click went the receiver. Richard was sorry for the humilitia of Mollie's scarlet cheeks; impulsively he put out his hand, caught her sleeve, smiled pleadingly.

"We're both been turned down, apparently," said Richard. "Mollie, oh, my dear, come with me tonight; make me happy once more."

Mollie tucked her hand under Richard's arm. "It will be nice," she said, "to really be happy without pretending."

GOOD ROADS

ASK MOTORISTS TO PAY FOR HIGHWAYS

(By ROY D. CHAPIN, Chairman Highway Committee, National Automobile Chamber of Commerce.)

Highway engineers of the United States have carried their task forward to a point where the public can now obtain a visual demonstration of results in every state in the Union. At the end of 1918 there were 12.5 miles of completed federal aid projects in the country. Since then projects amounting to 29,772 miles have been completed, 15,318 miles are under construction, and an additional 6,000 miles have been approved for construction.

Virtually all of this work has been done on those main highways which constitute the selected federal aid system of 7 per cent of the highways of the country, and yet the funds so expended from both federal and state sources are less than one-half of annual expenditures made for rural highway purposes.

The other funds have been expended, first, under state jurisdiction, on the secondary roads, and, second, under county and local supervision, on the county and purely local roads.

The net result is that as we swing into 1924 there are approximately 430,000 miles of highways in the United States on which there has been some degree of improvement from those of sand-clay up to the heaviest and most durable roads known to modern engineering. The total mileage of all types of roads in the country is 2,941,294.

This achievement, which gives us a mileage of improved roads almost four times as great as all of the roads in the United Kingdom, has been attained just in time to take care of the swelling army of motor car drivers and it will be only by a continuation of the present program for the next ten years that we can finally arrive at a completed system approximating the needs of highway traffic.

The principal problem to the student of highway transport is that of how an undertaking of this size is to be financed, requiring, as it does, and will for a decade, an annual appropriation of at least $1,000,000,000 from national, state and local sources.

The answer has been obtained, in part, through conferences between officials of the American Association of State Highway Officials, the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, the Investment Bankers of America and the bureau of public roads.

The chief points were that all who benefit from highway construction join in paying for them, that maintenance of the interstate and state systems is justifiably chargeable against the motor driver, that highway expenditures should be based upon budgets and should not be out of line with other public needs, and finally that depending upon the comparative stage of the highway program, long term bond issues should be voted to provide for immediate construction of the principal systems which must inevitably cost the public less to build and maintain than to go without.

Records Give Wisconsin Longest Concrete Road

Where are the longest continuous stretches of concrete roads?

A recent search of highway records gives Wisconsin the honor with 93 miles. The contestants are from every section of the country and show how the good-roads movement is being carried out.

Wisconsin—Troy Center through Milwaukee—42 miles. Minnesota—Anoka to Belle Prairie, 23 miles. Iowa—Charles City to Algona, 17 miles. California—Yuba City to Chico, 40 miles. Delaware—Lewes to Dover, 20 miles. Colorado—Chico to Red Bluff, 20 miles. Minnesota—Duluth to Eveleth, 20 miles. California—Westmoreland to Indio, 20 miles. Florida—Jacksonville to Lake City, 20 miles. Colorado—Denver to Greeley, 20 miles. Arizona—Phoenix to Buckeye, 20 miles. California—Edison to Lancaster, 20 miles. Maine—Portland to Lewiston, 20 miles.

Miles of Paved Streets in American Cities Big

If the paved streets of 290 leading American cities—which in the first national census of city paving ever made in this country have reported officially their paving yardages last year to the Asphalt Association in New York—were merged in a single great highway eighteen feet wide that highway would more than twice encircle the globe. The survey, the results of which have just been announced, shows that, with an average of eighteen feet of width, there are 66,974.8 miles of paved streets in American cities of 10,000 or more population. This mileage by far exceeds that of almost every other country in the world.

Benefits of Dragging

What a difference it makes in frozen roads if they are dragged before the cold wave comes! It is evident in some of our own highways here in the county, says the Rochester (Ind.) Sentinel. Some that were dragged during the recent rains are now regaining their former condition. Others that were not are full of ruts and while passable, practically tear a car to pieces. The money spent in dragging those roads has paid the taxpayers many times over on wear and tear on their vehicles.

China's Speeding Up

Many of Peking (China's) fleet-footed rickshaw men—some 40,000 in number—will be driving trolley cars down her narrow streets and ringing up fares and keeping up the tracks by the spring of 1924, if all goes well.

The world's Forbidden city has raised by popular subscription the capital for financing a tramway system and only the objections of the rickshaw men who would be forced to meet the competition of cheap electric transportation has to be overcome. This can be done, it is thought, by employing most of them on the trams.

For Economical Transportation,

Will Your Family Be Happy This Spring?

If yours is one of the few remaining families lacking an automobile, no doubt you have finally decided to get one within the next four months.

A low-priced modern automobile like the Chevrolet has become indispensable to the family of ordinary income. A million other families can easily prove to you that the better way is with Chevrolet. The beauties of nature, the interesting and educational features of other places and ways of living, remain things to read about or seen dimly in cold photographs until you are free to get to them at your convenience and pleasure.

But, suppose you have definitely decided to buy a Chevrolet this spring. This does not necessarily mean you are going to get it. Anyone posted on conditions in the automobile business will tell you that thousands of families are going to be unable to get cars this spring. This has been true almost every spring for the last ten years. There are just two ways of making sure of getting your Chevrolet for use when the flowers and balmy breezes of spring lure you to the country roads—buy it now or order it now.

If you do not want to pay for it in full at this time, any Chevrolet dealer will arrange terms to suit your convenience. You will be surprised to learn how easy it is to pay for a Chevrolet and use it while you are paying for it.

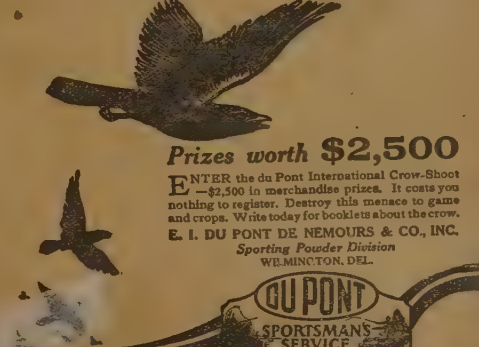

Please realize these statements are made by us in good faith and we mean just what we say about the possible difficulties of getting a car delivered to you this spring if you wait until then to order it. The only way to be sure of a Chevrolet this Spring is to order it NOW.

One of the Things Mr. Royster Discovered About the Feeding of Crops

Cured Fertilizer Has Increased Farmers' Earnings

Haven't you heard about the more thorough and scientific feeding for plants—hastening maturity and helping to grow crops that bring higher prices? Everywhere you find farmers talking about the remarkable results through the use of Royster's Cured Fertilizer.

Why Cured Fertilizer Grows Better Crops

Mr. Royster discovered that by aging or curing fertilizer for four to six months he could increase its value as a plant-food. He found that this curing brought about a certain chemical action which prepared the fertilizer for the use of crops and made food elements available at the very time they are needed.

Why Mr. Royster can Cure his Fertilizer

Naturally it requires vast quantities of material in order to anticipate a season's supply, half a year before it is needed. (This half year representing the aging period). It also requires strong financial resources. Thus—only a company like Royster's can offer this improved type of fertilizer.

Look for the Name on the Bag.

Don't guess about fertilizer. Look for the name "Royster's" and know that your crops will be well fed—for the sake of greater earnings.

The purpose for the selling of said above described lands, being for division of the same among the joint owners thereof, said joint owners being R. L. Sawyer, May Jordan Mathews, Annie Jordan Smith, Pearl Jordan Black, Carrie Jordan McDaniel, and Mollie Jordan.

This 4th day of March 1924.

JOHN P. PEARSON,
3-6-3t Commissioner.

Mr. J. E. Robinson, of Havannah, Florida, was here Saturday and Sunday.

SIDE LIGHTS OF NATIONAL CAPITAL

Calvin Coolidge, President of the United States, takes advantage of a section of the Fordney-McCumber tariff act—an unconstitutional section in that it takes from Congress the right to impose taxation—to increase the tariff on wheat.

As result, the people of the United States will pay for their wheat 45 cents a bushell more than they would pay were they permitted to trade with Canada. The sorry story of consumers of bread in the United States will be told in the price of flour. In order to please the farmers of one section of the country, the President increases the cost of living to the people of all other sections.

It is a political year. Thus it was natural that the President should throw a favor to a section which has been in revolt against the republican party.

The people in the other sections of the country, save the southern section, are getting their share of the general steal made possible under the tariff act. There will be very little complaint on the part of those influential enough to reach the newspapers or express themselves vigorously in the campaign.

The average citizen of this rich country can manage when the price of his food is automatically and unnecessarily increased by a few cents. There are many people, however, with whom each penny counts. They might tell the result of the election.

There is nothing in current history more fraudulent than the conduct of the republicans in Congress respecting the tariff protection offered farmers.

When the Fordney-McCumber tariff act was before the Senate, democrats made every possible effort to retain on the free list those things which the farmers must buy in order to dig a living out of the ground. Their efforts failed because the republicans were in a majority. In consequence, the farmers of the country pay the manufacturers of the east an unnecessarily large sum of money for their implements, their hoes and rakes and ploughs, their kitchen utensils, their household goods, the lumber and nails which go into their dwellings, and even their salt.

The farmers' protection is nothing compared to the additional amounts he must pay to the manufacturers of the east for his necessities of life.

A politician would have thrown a bone to the farmers who produce wheat in the form of an increased tariff rate. A statesman, however, would not in order to please the farmers in a campaign year increased the burden of all consumers whereas he could have done the farmers infinite good by decreasing the prices he must pay for his necessities.

But had Coolidge had resort to statesmanship, the profiteers of the east would have been all over his head and neck and shoulders, and they would have driven him from this modern temple of money changers. And he knew it, too.—Age Herald.

Robert Deason, of route three, was here Saturday. He is lamenting over the cold weather that we have had. He is afraid that it has destroyed the bol weevils.

FOR TREASURER

Mr. J. Bice, of Thorsby, announces this week as a candidate for County Treasurer.

FOSHEE-JOHNSON.

Invitations are out announcing the marriage of Mr. Morris Savage Foshee and Miss Margaret Mae Johnson. This marriage is to take place at Fairfield, Alabama March 28th.

Owing to the prominence of the contracting parties this is to be an event of much interest to people in this part of the state. Mr. Foshee is a son of Mr. J. W. Foshee of Maplesville. Chilton county has got citizens superior to Mr. Foshee.

With the home training that young Mr. Foshee has had in addition to his being well educated we feel certain that the young lady he is to marry has made a wise choice for her life companion. While we do not know the bride-to-be, we are sure that she is worthy of the young man she is to wed.

DANCE AT EXCHANGE HOTEL

Last Thursday night, after the entertainment at the High School, a number of young people, assembled at the Exchange Hotel and engaged in a brief dance.

We learn that the band boys, from Sylacauga, put on the festive occasion.

Mr. J. B. Penter spent Saturday with home people in Birmingham.

Penter is in charge of the civil engineering department in having the streets paved in Clanton. He has made friends since he came to Clanton and is a splendid example of the old adage, "Sour grapes make good wine."

HAT SNOW STORM

Last Thursday the weather man got on a lare and broke all previous weather records.

The first thing he gave us that morning was a real pleasant shower. He soon turned this in to a north-east gale, but, we suppose, he was short on hard ice so he changed the combination and began to pour out the snow by the bucket full.

All day long and until a late hour that night, he let the sifter work until everything was wrapped in a mantle of white.

The next morning a cold wind from the northwest froze everything up and we all shivered and shook, while the coal man raked in our shovels.

"The most of the farmers tell us they believe that the snow acted as a covering for the young fruit and vegetables and that not so very much damage was done.

We hope this is the winding up of the weather man for this year, and that he will sober up now and dish us out some real spring.

SOUNDS GOOD

The State Highway Commission has announced that they will build by June 1925, one hundred and seventy-four miles of highway.

Out of this allotment Chilton county is to get 34 miles, running from the Shelby to the Autauga county lines.

An Enviably Record of Service

On March 5, 1850, the Louisville & Nashville Railroad received its charter from the State of Kentucky.

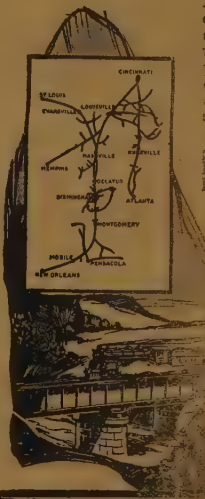

Since that date, ideas and customs have changed; panics have come; great wars have been fought; population has increased; the country has developed; and businesses have come and gone; but the "Old Reliable" L. & N. has survived all of the struggles and the ups and downs of railroading for this nearly three-quarters of a century—from purchasing a section of 185 miles to operating a system of 5,039 miles, spanning and serving thirteen states in the heart of the South.

Through all of these years, thru good times and bad, the L. & N. has weathered the financial storms; has never changed its corporate name, and is one of the few class-1 railroads in the country that have never been in receivership.

The L. & N. has never failed to meet its obligations to the public; every dollar due its workers, its creditors, its bondholders; and, a majority of these years, has been able to pay its stockholders something for the use of their money.

The management is earnestly striving to make the L. & N. a bigger and better railroad—more efficient and capable of better serving you. Your co-operation to this end is solicited.

Fact No. 36

New Year Greeting

The good old year of 1923 has become now a memory of the past. With all of its joys and sorrows it is buried and, as the days go by, it will become merely a misty dream.

We have all had to face some trials and sorrows, but in the main, it was a kind and gracious year to us all. In bidding it good bye, I wish to express my sincere thanks to the many friends and customers who have loyally stood by me with their friendship and patronage and have enabled me to wind up the old year with a feeling of satisfaction with my success and with a steadfast hope for the future.

I wish for you one and all, the successful culmination of your brightest hopes for the New Year. May good health, happiness and prosperity attend you through the days to come. May 1924 have for all of us happy surprises and untold blessings.

I am deeply grateful to every one who has favored me with their patronage during the year just gone and I respectfully ask that you will continue to give me the opportunity to deserve your confidence and trade.

Your friend,

G. C. Armstrong

Warrant your floors and this test?

Take a glass and see that your home floors are warranted. But don't stop there. Let the glass leave its mark on the floor. A drop of liquid that is warranted to dry and leave the same color as the floor.

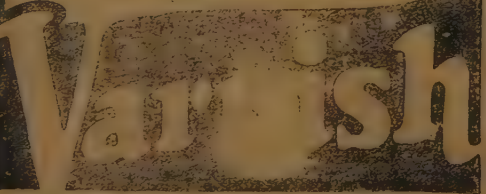

THE WATER SPAR

Look at the window. You can see visible water on the glass. Water can have no effect on the surface. Waterspar is waterproof. The hardy finish will not crack, will not turn white nor peel.

Besides Waterspar transparent there are eighteen different beautiful colors of Waterspar colored wood preservatives and enamels. You can see them yourself. Pittsburgh Proof Products.

CHILTON COUNTY NEWS

VOLUME 3

CLANTON, ALABAMA, MARCH 27, 1924

NUMBER 29

BEGINNING TODAY

This afternoon, at 3 o'clock, the first exhibition of that wonderful Southern picture, the Birth of a Nation, will be put on at the Wadesonian Theatre beginning the three day series that it will be put on here.

Every afternoon, Thursday, Friday and Saturday, at 3 o'clock, a performance will be given. To each of these three exhibitions every man and woman in this entire section, who is 15 years of age or more, there is a special and cordial invitation extended by the local Ku Klux Klan, that they attend as honored guests of that organization.

Your comfort and convenience will be especially looked after by members of this order and your admission will be cheerful and gladly taken care of by them. Your presence is desired by them as their esteemed and honored guests. Be certain to come out and enjoy this wonderful picture that will surely carry you back to the days of your youth.

The same performance will be repeated at 7:30 p. m. each day, as it is the desire of the Klan to give every one in this entire section an opportunity to see it.

We have seen this picture once several years ago and can certainly recommend and endorse it as much more than worth while.

TO ADVERTISERS

We are furnishing now, every month a lot of advertising cuts that are kept right up to the minute in the latest fads and styles adopted by fashion in every line of merchandise.

Easter this year arrives on April 21, and we have just received a supply of appropriate and beautiful display cuts for the Easter season.

You live business men will miss a splendid opportunity to do some special, artistic and attractive advertising if you fail to call and look our large display over.

It is not only attractive but is up to the very latest vink of the New York and Paris fashions.

A WONDERFUL INVENTION

One night last week we called upon Mr. Marvin Carter at his bungalow home on North Seventh street, to listen in at a radio performance.

Mr. Carter has installed a splendid radio service at his home, and, so popular has it become, that the neighbors through the home of Mr. Carter until a late hour every night.

The real concert service does not begin to show up much until about 10 o'clock.

Is it not passing strange that you can sit in the comfortable home of Mr. Carter and listen to real people singing from New York, to Havana, Cuba? Still it is a fact.

The night we were there was very windy with rain falling a little further north, and the atmospheric conditions were such that too much static electricity was loose and that made the action of the radio not up to its best. Still, it was plain enough to let you distinctly understand what was going on in a number of distant cities.

The next stride the electrical wizards will make will no doubt be to establish phone service with Mars or the moon.

SHOULD BE PUNISHED

There is not a single sane person who is now, and who has been heretofore, familiar with the traffic conditions on the down town streets of Clanton, who is not obliged to admit that since the parking laws have been enforced, the conditions are improved 100 per cent.

Another wonderfully useful regulation was the placing of "turn to the right" signals at the main busy crossings down town. They are a great help and safeguard to pedestrians in crossing the streets in safety especially when traffic is heavy.

When every car driver does his duty and is governed by these markers, the person walking has to watch only one way at a time to safely and promptly make the crossing.

To the credit of almost all of the people who drive cars through the crowded area, almost all of them live up to these regulations.

From that fact comes one great danger. The pedestrian depends upon the driver as being an honest and law abiding person, and he does not expect to be run over or knocked down by some irresponsible hoodlum who cuts a left hand corner at full speed regardless of his culpable and criminal responsibility.

It is to be hoped that the police will take special notice of this class of drivers and invite every one of them to visit the Mayor, who we trust will impress on their minds, through the medium of their pocket book, the advisability of recognizing the rights of other people.

CARPET RAG SOCIAL

Tomorrow, (Friday) night in the basement of the Baptist church, this unique and interesting Social will take place.

The ladies will prepare a ball of carpet rags, with their name on the inside and the gentlemen will purchase this ball for 50 cents, which entitles him to supper and to the lady, whose name it incloses as his hostess and companion.

The ladies will all bring a box lunch for tea and everybody is invited. No admission price.

GOING TO BUILD

Mr. W. I. Mullins tells us that he intention is to have erected on the vacant lots just north of the Exchange Hotel, a double building, 50 by 90 feet and will most probably make it a double story edifice.

An investment of that kind in the down town districts is a good one every time and we are all glad to see Clanton go on up the hill, step by step.

Four other nice brick business houses are going up on Second Ave. as soon as the weather opens up in earnest.

CHICKEN AND OYSTER DINNER

Circle No. 1 of the Baptist church will serve an Oyster and Chicken dinner at the church Tuesday April 1st.

The public is respectfully invited to come and participate.

Mrs. Ella Dewrie, of Edon Ohio, visited from Saturday until Tuesday with her friends, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Lawrence.

CLANTON COMMANDERY KNIGHTS TEMPLAR ELECT OFFICERS

At a regular meeting of Clanton Commandery, No. 27 last Tuesday night the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

Eminent Commander, Dr. P. T. Hinkle.
Generalissimo, Dr. V. J. Gragg.
Capt. Genl. J. S. Hubbard.
Senior Warden, H. T. Pipes.
Junior Warden, J. M. Martin.
Prelate, Dr. S. J. Ezell.
Treasurer, W. H. Sartor.
Recorder, G. C. Harris.
Standard Bearer, J. E. Rasberry.
Sword Bearer, J. P. Lawrence.
Warden, Dr. T. J. Marcis.
Sentinel, M. C. Broadhead.

NO EXCUSE FOR DELAY

Through the courtesy of Attorney Thos. A. Curry, we learn that the county has now filed condemnation proceedings against all of the land required for the right of way of the B. & M. highway for 17 miles south from the Shelby county line, which means, that as far as the county is concerned in furnishing a right of way, the job can be let now and work pushed right ahead.

These condemnations proceeding do not mean that all of the people who own land along the route of the road are opposed to the project and are trying to stop it. The majority of them are willing to donate the right of way, but, of course, there are others who feel like the location of the road will greatly damage their holdings, and they very naturally desire to be remunerated for the loss.

These proceedings will not at all interfere with any person who is willing to donate, or sell at a normal figure, the land required. Individual settlements can still be made just the same, but the suits were filed so the State could have no possible excuse for postponing the work for one minute to wait on the county for a right of way.

Mr. Curry is also of the opinion that within a very short time, this point above Lomax, will be ordered continued to the South Chilton county line. He feels sure that a definite will be selected right away now, that the balance of the Chilton contract will be let in a very short time.

He feels very certain that the road will pass directly through Clanton is scheduled, but he also feels like it will cross the railroad, near the home of Mr. Jasper Dennis and go from there, by way of White City, to Prattville.

According to his view point, work on the entire Chilton county project will be under way before summer passes away.

Owing to the fact that Mr. Curry has been employed to get up the right of way, he has, perhaps, more accurate and direct information from the Commissioners, than any other person in the county and consequently is in a position to give a fairly close guess as to their future intentions.

STREET IMPROVEMENTS

The Mayor and Council, having decided that the street grading and concrete work can be done by the city to a better advantage than by contract, turned down all bids on this work, and Monday started the work, on East Second Avenue with their own crew.

This street improvement work will be pushed by them and before long we are going to see the splendid effects that will follow this systematic program of work done on the lines required by an engineer with a plan of the entire city.

COUNTY ROAD MACHINERY

We learn that the county has bought a large Catapillar motor, and heavy road scrape to match, for the purpose of putting on some really effective road work in the rural districts.

This looks like business and we hope this machinery will be effective and will enable the road force to do some real road work that will last awhile.

The farmers of Chilton county need and deserve good roads and we rejoice at every move that is made to give them this much needed and merited service.

BAPTIST CHURCH LAST SUNDAY NIGHT

Rev. G. A. Hornady, a talented resident of the Soldiers Home at present, who is 77 years young, honored the Editor and family with a delightful visit last Sunday and Sunday night.

He is a member of the Southside Baptist church, of Montgomery, and has been a minister almost ever since the civil war. He filled the pulpit at our Baptist church here Sunday night and after the services was given a real ovation by the audience.

We have known Bro. Hornady for a number of years and we delight in the privilege of calling such an honest and fearless man of God our friend.

OUR THANKS

In February our business was so poor that two or three times per day we would go outside to see if we had not got transplanted to some cross road intersection in the Sahara desert.

But a lane is never so long but what it turns somewhere and so it has been with us this month. Our business has gone back up to normal and we have nothing to complain about.

We thank all of you business men for your patronage and we are doing our very best to give you the best of service in return. The more patronage you give us the more good we can do in our town and county.

TO MOVE IN THIS WEEK

It is a real pleasure to announce that our Methodist friends are going to move back to their own home this week, and in future their services will be held at their elegant new house of worship, now nearing completion.

For the present they will occupy the first floor only, but in a very short time their beautiful and spacious auditorium will be finished and they will be really at home for good.

They have been using the court house for some months while work was in progress on their church and we fully realize and appreciate how glad they will be to get back home and we sincerely congratulate them.

BASE BALL SEASON OPENED

Although old winter was blowing lustily through his whiskers last Friday afternoon, when the hands of the clock pointed to the hour of 3:30, a local base ball season was awakened from its long winter sleep when the Chilton Hi Tigers and teh Marbury Mascots crossed bats on the local diamond for the first battle of 1924.

The game only went for 7 innings, but it was interesting and spectacular and greatly enjoyed by the large bunch of fans who greeted the occasion even in the face of the biting winds that whistled across the park from up towards the port hole.

It soon developed that Chilton Hi had the visitors utterly outclassed and the final score of 13 to 0 in favor of the Tigers demonstrated the fact that the local team means business this season and are going out after the pennant in dead earnest.

Already their team is accumulating a good stock of team work and they have some real artists on the roll.

The Marbury boys made a good showing and took this defeat like real sportsmen, with a promise to make our team laugh on the other side of their face before the season closes.

One of the big features of the afternoon and one not included on the program, deserves special mention and if it had been properly advertised, we doubt if the Park would hardly have accommodated the audience.

We refer to a privately arranged, but publically pulled off, foot race around the quarter race track, by Dr. J. P. Hayes and Dr. N. S. Johnson.

You all know them both and any comment on our part would be superfluous. It was a neck and neck proposition for some distance, but when a soft track recently plowed up, was encountered, Dr. Johnson, not having been trained up in plowed ground, fell behind and Dr. Hays nosed out ahead a clean winner.

The fun was uproarious.

Get Ready and go to the Upchurch One Cent Sale today, Tomorrow and Saturday.

Mr. Clyde Williams, of Birmingham, was a Clanton visitor the latter part of last week.

COURT THIS WEEK

The regular spring term of the Circuit Court is in session this week.

Judge Smoot, Solicitor Bateman and Reporter McCary came up Monday and the machinery went in to operation on the civil docket on time.

Next week will be given over to cleaning up the criminal docket.

Following are the Grand jurors serving this term.

THE HIGH SCHOOL LAST FRIDAY NIGHT

As announced in the papers last week, the Senior class of the High School put on a benefit play last Friday night. The name of the play was "Safety First" and it was indeed a ninth producing affair from first to last, and all of the individual participants won the very highest praise for the wonderful histrionic art they displayed on the stage.

The audience greeted the young Thespian amateurs.

Later a cake was put up and voted to the prettiest lady present. Several nominations were made, which is perfectly natural when you consider the large number of pretty ladies in and around Clanton, and the sincerity of the friends of each nominee is plainly demonstrated by the fact that the cake netted the nice little sum of $72.00. Miss Minnie Fiquette, one of Clanton's lovely young girls, was the successful contestant.

Quite a neat sum was made and goes to the credit of the Chilton Hi Athletic Association.

One Cent Sale at Upchurch Drug Co. Thursday Friday and Saturday this week.

ORGANIZED SUNDAY SCHOOLWORK

In the natural course of the seasons, grim winter, with its inclement and uncertain weather conditions, has practically passed at last and springtime, with its pleasant sunshine and beautiful flowers, is right at the threshold.

Realizing these facts a concerted effort is to be made to boost and build the Sunday Schools in the land. This is a wise and meritorious movement—one that should appeal strongly to all good people.

Our Governor, some two weeks ago, issued a special proclamation calling on us all to do our very best next Sunday to boost and build up this splendid work.

The Sunday School occupies a most important and unique position in the world. Civilization has no more potent help than that which flows primarily from the Sunday School. It is not only a master factor in building up the churches of the land, and in spreading the precious plans of redemption to a lost world, but as a force for high class civilization and worthy citizenship, it hardly has an equal.

The man and woman, the boy and girl, who is a regular attendant at Sunday school it always the one who has the esteem and confidence of the people among whom they live. A business education, is a fine thing and to be duly prized by young people, but in the real and lasting issues of life, even the technical skill of the expert will not carry one through the vicissitudes of our existence here, like the solid foundation of a character built up by a long and consistent attendance at Sunday School.

Remember now that next Sunday is the day upon which all of the good people of Alabama are pledged to do their part, and upon which we all owe to ourselves, to our children, to our friends and to our citizenship to line up and make it the greatest Sunday School day in our history.

CHURCH NOTICE

Next Sunday the Fifth Sunday meeting of the Unity Baptist Association will convene at the Baptist church here.

From the program, carried in another column, you will observe that subjects of real interest are to be discussed.

Everybody is cordially invited to attend. The session will last all day.

NOTICE

I am making a SPECIAL REQUEST of all who owe me, on open account or on any kind of paper, that they arrange to make settlement by April 1st. Where amounts are larger than can be met by that time make as large payment as possible. Prompt attention to this request will be greatly appreciated.

Yours truly,
W. A. KEMP

Modern Science Rout

Flood Danger in China

Monster dragons swished their tails (so for 5,000 years the Chinese legend ran) and caused the Yellow river to inundate vast areas of fertile farm land. Some there were who averred that they had seen the giants at their destructive play. But the Chinese are a fatalistic folk, and they bowed to the will of their gods.

Not so modern commerce! At its beck came engineers of the Asia Development company, a New York corporation, to harness within its bed this unruly and ruthless torrent. The great break of 1921, which cost millions of dollars and untold suffering, was diverted to its original course, and chained there against the possibility of digging new channels or destroying its banks. The work was completed in four months. Not only adjacent farms, but commercial traffic on the river were made secure.

No longer do dragons disport themselves amid this sandy flood. Modern science, and modern industry have put them swiftly to flight.—Nation's Business.

That Explained It

An old farmer and his wife drove to market one very wet day. Large pools of water had formed in the roadway between the farm and the town. On the return journey he met an old friend.

"And how are you today?" was the friendly greeting.

"Very well, thank you," answered the farmer.

"How is the wife?" continued the friend.

"Fine," said the farmer. "She's behind there"—jerked his thumb toward the back of the wagon.

"She's not there!" exclaimed the friend.

Farmer turned and looked over his shoulder. Then he said coolly: "That accounts for it."

Tells of Being Captured by Horde of Cannibals

Sir Harry H. Johnston, explorer, linguist, diplomatist, who cut a large figure in the extension of British dominion in Africa, tells in his new book, "The Story of My Life," many interesting stories of his experience with wild tribes of the Dark Continent. On a canoe trip up the Cross river, he relates how "a horde of excited people, armed with guns and spears, waded out into the river and compelled the canoe to stop. In fact dragged it summarily into shallow water. Three or four lusty savages pulled me out of the canoe. They mounted me on the shoulders of the biggest, and carried me off at a run to the town, where I was put in a hut with the door open. Here I had to submit to be stared at for many an hour by hundreds of inquisitive savages, unaware as to the fate of my Kruboyas and Ekki servants. Almost over my head, hanging from the smoke-blackened rafters of the house, was a smoked human ham, black and bluish green. About a hundred skulls were ranged round the upper part of the clay walls in a ghastly frieze."

The explorer went through the form of making a treaty with the chiefs, but finding that "a great deal of palm wine had been drunk" cut short his visit after he had made presents of cloth and beads. The chief men of the town "insisted on giving a return present—a hundred yards or two sheep, and at parting an old chief or medicine man bestowed on me a necklace of human knuckle-bones from his own neck."—New York World.

ALABAMA NEWS HAPPENINGS

A Resume of the More Important Events of Interest Condensed To An Epitomized Form.

What is known as "Plan No. 1" for the development of the port of Mobile, was definitely decided upon and adopted following a conference between the docks commission and Gov. W. W. Brandon, who approved the plan. His approval was conditioned upon the commission being able to acquire the property involved at approximately the prices fixed by the board of appraisers, and to complete satisfactory agreements with railroads entering Mobile.

James Sibley, district club agent of the Auburn experiment station is mapping out the work of the ten boys clubs just organized in Etowah county. They will raise corn, pigs, cotton, cows and poultry, but owing to boll weevil conditions Mr. Sibley states most of them will devote their time to cotton, using Auburn fertilizing methods. It is the purpose to make such demonstration club an object lesson to the farmers of the county and district.

Encouraged by the passage of an amendment by the legislature giving Alabama public service commission right to require railroads to build adequate passenger stations where they do not exist, the city of Attalla filed a petition with the commission asking that body to compel the Southern, Alabama Great Southern, Louisville & Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis railroads to erect an entirely new union station at that place.

The Alabama public service commission has granted the petition of the Union Water company seeking approval of the transfer of all its properties to the Alabama Water company. The holdings involved comprise waterworks plants and system at Albertville, Russellville, and Boaz and certain franchises, rights and contracts to operate water plants at Hartselle, Leeds and Ironville.

Upon recommendation of Dr. John W. Abercrombie, state superintendent of education, the state board of education has appointed Miss Rosa V. Strickland, principal of the Powell School, Birmingham, and Mrs. R. L. Faucett, of Prattville, superintendent of education for Autauga County, members of the state text book committee, to fill existing vacancies.

The Alabama Water Company agrees to comply with the wishes of the cities of Albany and Decatur as touching improving water pressure for use in case of fires. The Alabama Public Service Commission, state representatives of the city of Albany, has given the water company until next August to put the agreement into effect.

Representatives from approximately seven states, as far west as Indiana, organized themselves into what will be officially known as the Associated Heirs of the Bibb-Key Estate at the Chamber of Commerce in Birmingham to push their legal claims to holdings valued at approximately $1,000,000,000 in New York City upon which a 99-year lease has expired.

Miss Elizabeth Walker of Andalusia, is to take the difficult leading role in "The Magic Flute" to be presented in Nashville, Tenn., during the May music festival under the direction of Mr. David R. Gebhart, of Peabody College, with whom she has been studying for three years.

Construction and installation of electric generating facilities on the Chattahoochee River at Bartlett's Ferry, Ala., is proposed by the Columbus Electric and Power Company, in a petition for a certificate of convenience and necessity, filed with the Alabama Public Service Commission.

Work has been started this week by the Fairview Methodist church on a new building. The building, when completed and furnished, will represent an investment of $40,000.

The O. Henry memorial prize annually awarded for the best short story of the year has been conferred upon a Birmingham writer, Edgar Valentine Smith, assigned city editor of "The News."

Repair Shade and Ornamental Trees

Suggestions on Proper Methods to Follow in Mending Damage of Winter.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The extensive injury and destruction of trees of all kinds during the winter season has brought many inquiries to the United States Department of Agriculture regarding the proper methods to be followed in repairing the damage done. The following suggestions are made by the department:

The first thing that should be done is to remove such large broken branches as are now, or may become, a menace to life and property; this is usually best done by cutting at the point where broken. Attention should then be given to injuries on the main trunk. If limbs have been split, or partially split, from the main trunk, all splintered wood about the wound should be removed with a sharp gouge and mallet, if not so situated that it can be sawed off. The scar should be smoothed in the manner indicated in Farmers' Bulletin 1178, Tree Surgery, and treated as an open cavity, or, as a large surface wound, as the case may necessitate.

Repair Larger Branches. Attention should next be given to repairing the injuries on the larger branches in a similar manner, and last of all to the smaller branches. Sometimes when a limb is broken away the tree is so weakened at the point of breakage that it may again break in a severe wind, and to obviate this the top must be pruned back more or less severely. In case of split crotches, the advice given in Farmers' Bulletin 1178 should be followed regarding the general treatment, including bolting through and above the crack.

In cases of estates where a great amount of injury has occurred, and only a comparatively small force is available for repairing the damage, the final cutting of long stubs can be conveniently left for a time, but wounds or breaks on the main trunk, or close to it, should be attended to promptly, in any case before warm weather arrives.

Leave Cavities Open.

It is not necessary to fill cavities. It is better in most cases to leave them open. All final cuts should be immediately covered with some good antiseptic and waterproof paint. It will not be necessary to specially treat the ends of long stubs that are to be removed close to the trunk later in the season.

In no part of repair work should climbing spurs be used on a tree. Spur marks cause injuries through which it is possible for disease and decay germs to enter and cause damage. In some cases more severe than would have developed from the original simple break. For details of treatment of all scars and wounds see for a copy of Farmers' Bulletin 1178, which can be obtained from the Office of Publications, Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Remember that prevention is better than cure. The open wound of today becomes the decayed spot of next year and the deep rotten cavity of ten years from now. It is better to spend a few days or dollars in careful repair work now than hundreds of dollars for extensive tree surgery in 1930.

New Disease of Peaches

Discovered in Indiana

Purdue university experts are seeking a remedy or prevention for bacterium pum, a new disease of peaches which has caused much loss in southern Indiana, and are asking orchardists to be on the lookout for evidences of the diseases in nursery stock. The disease is most pronounced on the leaves, causing irregular, purplish spots and causing the leaves to fall, weakening the tree. On the fruit the disease is in smaller spots but a more decided purplish color, and on the young-old or younger wood it appears purplish brown, often causing slightly raised cankers around the leaf scars. It is thought wind-driven rain spreads the disease. So far no remedy has been found.

Undesirable Flavors or

Odors May Be Prevented

Stale odors are absorbed largely through the body of the cow rather than from the air, according to tests made by the United States Department of Agriculture. However, these odors may be practically or entirely removed by the aeration of the milk while it is still warm. Rather heavy feeds of silage may be given to cows one hour after milking without any undesirable flavors or odors passing into the milk. When green alfalfa was fed in relatively large quantities one hour before milking marked flavors and odors were noticed in the milk, but when as much as 30 pounds per cow was fed after milking there was no effect on the milk from the next milking.

Potatoes Taste Sweet

The reason for potatoes becoming sweet and disagreeable to the taste is that they have been stored at too low a temperature. Below 40 degrees the starch in the potato is converted into sugar, according to John Bushnell, of the Ohio experiment station. When this occurs it is only necessary to store them for a few days at an ordinary room temperature to bring them back to normal.

Handbook Issued on Better Stock Feeds

Different Classes of Animals Considered Separately.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Practically all farmers in every section of the country should be interested in the new publication, a Handbook for Better Feeding of Live Stock, just issued by the United States Department of Agriculture, as a part of a recently organized service for better feeding methods. This book, let contains in condensed form practical and up-to-date information on the feeding of cattle, goats, sheep, horses and poultry, compiled as a result of a country-wide study of farm-feeding problems.

In this handbook all the different classes of animals are considered separately. For instance, there is special information on feeding young animals, dry cows, areas in service, weanling pigs and calves. Consideration is given to the feeding of farm wastes and by-products, the use of mineral feeds, the use of self-feeders, tonics, hogging down crops, commercial feeds, dehoring and castrating, with relation to feeding and management, mixing feeds and making up balanced rations, shelter for animals as it affects their production, water and salt. Sample rations are given for the various kinds of animals under different conditions. The importance of good breeding in obtaining maximum gains is emphasized.

"No set of specific feeding rules can be wisely applied throughout the country," says John R. Mohler, chief of the bureau of animal industry, in a foreword to the handbook. "Local conditions, seasonal changes, and many other factors," he continues, "combine to make the best feeding practices change from place to place and from time to time. This handbook discusses the main points most commonly encountered in feeding, but which should always be adapted to local conditions. More general discussions of feeding practices will be found in Farmers' Bulletins and other publications of the department, also in publications of the state agricultural colleges and experiment stations."

Copies of the handbook, which is known as Miscellaneous Circular 12 may be obtained free, as long as the supply lasts, by addressing the Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Grass Quite Essential for Starting Goslings

Goslings do not thrive in small bare enclosures as they are naturally grazers. A range abundantly covered with tender grass and shade is essential to their growth. During the heat of the day they need protection from the hot sun. A high mortality rate results when goslings are placed in bare fenced enclosures with the idea of protecting them from injury by other birds or animals, writes R. G. Kirby in the Farm and Ranch.

Tender grass can be used as the only feed for goslings for the first two days. Then use a moist mash five times a day. An easily made mash consists of two-thirds middlings and one-third corn meal, bran middlings and rolled oats moistened with skim milk. Some breeders steam the goslings on bread and milk. The bread is soaked in milk and squeezed nearly dry before feeding.

After the first week the goslings will relish scalded cracked corn. The goslings are grass eaters and not grain eaters, and if any part of their ration is ever neglected be sure it is not the regular supply of tender green grass which they can soon harvest for themselves on the right kind of range.

April Favored by Many for Sowing Red Clover

Many farmers seed clover as early as February, while others wait until April and sow with apparently equal success. Some sow half the seed early and half late, since a very light seedling will be sufficient under favorable conditions. The month of March is recommended by many. A honey-combed or dry, frozen condition of the soil is likely to exist at that time. A dry, cracked condition develops a little later and it is considered by these men as second choice.

FARM FACTS

Better seed, better crops.

Drilled oats outyield oats broadcast.

Swiss chard, kale and collards make fine greens and stand the heat of summer.

Sweet corn is one thing no one need be without if proper choice is made of soil and variety.

Old sheds or sheep barns can sometimes be used for poultry houses by using a straw loft for ventilation.

A farm without good live stock is poorly equipped. Generally they are unprofitable four years out of five.

If you feed rats they will make themselves at home. Make your buildings as near rat-proof as possible.

If a small amount of grain is fed while running on alfalfa, hogs will make a rapid and profitable growth.

The remarkable herb "Hobo" as analyzed by "Schwartz" was found to contain, besides other principles, a variety of acid which he named Galfrancic acid. He also found it to contain a peculiar acid discovered by Schwartz and Rochleder and named Ribichloric acid. This has been used in Dropsy, congestion of the spleen, Scrofula and Tetanus with good results. In recent years this herb has been discovered growing in East Texas and Louisiana and further experiment has shown that it is wonderfully purifying properties were due to its action on the kidneys. The Hobo Medicine Company of Beaumont, Texas, make an effective balm from this herb and call it Hobo Kidney and Bladder Remedy, this balm being said to be a Diuretic, Aperient and Anti-Scrofulic. Machiavelli Machiavelli was an Italian statesman, historian and man of letters (1469-1527). It is said the object of his book, "The Prince," is to show that all is fair in diplomacy. The term "Machiavellism" has come to mean political cunning and duplicity, the art of tricking and overreaching by diplomacy.

Guard Against "Flu" With Musterole

Influenza, Grippe and Pneumonia usually start with a cold. The moment you get those warning aches, get busy with good old Musterole. Musterole is a counter-irritant that relieves congestion (which is what a cold really is) and stimulates circulation. It has all the good qualities of the old-fashioned mustard plaster without the blister. Just rub it on with your finger-tips. First you will feel a warm tingle as the healing ointment penetrates the pores, then a soothing, cooling sensation and quick relief. Have Musterole handy for emergency use. It may prevent serious illness. To Mothers: Musterole is now made in milder form for babies and small children. Ask for Children's Musterole. 35c and 65c, in jars and tubes.

Suffering.

That little cold you took yesterday may seem a small matter to you now; but if you don't do something to check it and get it out of your system there's no telling how it will end. Many a severe, if not fatal, case of pneumonia or tuberculosis began in just the same way.

How foolish then to take any sort of risk by neglecting that cold till it fastens itself on your vitals, and becomes so deep-seated that nothing but the most severe treatment will serve to get you back to health.

You can stop it now with Cheney's Expectorant. A dose every few hours will knock it right out and end the trouble almost before it has begun. It expels the germs from your system and you feel fresher and stronger and better.

Three generations of people have been brought up on Cheney's Expectorant and have an abiding faith in its efficiency because they know what it will do. Cheney's Expectorant expels the cold by reaching and correcting the cause. It is equally effective for coughs, bronchitis, croup, whooping cough, and all other affections of the throat and lungs.

Epoch and Era

Epoch and era are usually used synonymously. In history either one denotes a fixed point of time, commonly selected on account of some remarkable event by which it has been distinguished, and which is made the beginning or determining point of a particular year, from which all other years, whether preceding or ensuing, are computed. Some writers distinguish between the terms epoch and era. According to them, both mark important events, but an era is an epoch which is chronologically dated from; an epoch is not marked in this way. The birth of Christ was both an epoch and an era, according to this view.

Wheeler Digging Up Lots of Stuff Against Daugherty—Oil and 1920 Campaign.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD
So comprehensive, discursive and "far flung" are the various investigations in Washington that only the Congressional Record could do them justice in the matter of space. In the Daugherty inquiry Senator Wheeler is having the time of his life and the witnesses, willing and reluctant, are numerous. Of these witnesses perhaps the most interesting of the week was W. A. Orr, one time secretary of Governor Whitman of New York.

From him was drawn a story of conspiracy to withdraw liquor from bond in which Howard Manningham, a close associate of Daugherty, played the part of "fixer" and Orr that of "collector." He also admitted that he had a share in the Dempsey-Carpenter fight and was supposed to have helped arrange things so that it could be exhibited free from prosecution.

Orr acknowledged that he had used his influence to induce the attorney general to appoint Col. William Hayward as United States district attorney in New York, but modestly disclaimed credit for having "put over" Hayward's appointment.

Further evidence concerning the fight film deal was given by G. O. Holdridge, former Department of Justice detective, involving Daugherty, Orr, Alfred R. Union, Jay Muma, New York representative of E. B. McLean's publications, Fred Quimby and others, and Senator Wheeler declared the evidence was conclusive of the existence of a conspiracy. William J. Burns denies the implications drawn from Holdridge's story so far as they affect the honesty of the Department of Justice.

THE Teapot Dome committee heard a sensational story linking Harry Sinclair up with the financing of the last Republican presidential campaign and related to the reports that oil interests, after vainly trying to enmesh General Wood, brought about the nomination of Harding. According to the information received by the committee, Sinclair turned over to Will Hays and Harry Daugherty 75,000 shares of stock in his oil companies which was to be sold and the proceeds employed in liquidation of the million-dollar deficit incurred by the Republican national committee under the chairmanship of Mr. Hays in the 1920 election.

A subpoena was issued for Mr. Hays. Tiffin Gilmore of Ohio related a lot of hearsay about the futile attempt to deal with Wood, and Carmel Thompson was called to tell what he knew about it.

From brokers' books the oil committee learned that these men traded in various stocks between Dec. 1, 1921, and Dec. 31, 1922: Attorney General Daugherty; C. Bascom Slamp, secretary to the President; Senators Curtis of Kansas and Elkins of West Virginia; Representatives A. B. Rouse of Kentucky, and former Representative Goodykoontz of West Virginia. T. J. Ryan of New York and J. H. Himes of Ohio.

BRIBERY charges against two members of the lower house have been laid before a grand jury in Washington, the special house committee appointed to investigate them is holding its sessions in secret in order to prevent or of the possible defendants. Among the witnesses heard have been the cashiers of four banks in the home town of Congressman Zihman of Maryland.

YET another committee, of the senate, is investigating allegations of inefficiency and irregularities in the bureau of internal revenue. Assistant Commissioner O. R. Nash told it in the last three years 796 revenue agents, inspectors and deputy collectors had been discharged because of dishonesty and graft. Commissioner Blair denied that appointment of principal employees in the bureau has been controlled by political considerations and told of his difficulties in that line with former Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Elmer Dover.

BY an overwhelming majority the house passed the new soldiers' bonus bill, and sent it on to the senate. That body will almost certainly pass either the house bill or an amended measure. What President Coolidge will do about it is not surely known. The vote in the house—355 to 54—insures the passage of the bill over a veto. It is not so certain that the necessary two-thirds vote can be obtained in the senate. Advocates of the measure are urging the senate finance committee to give the bill precedence over the tax bill now under consideration.

Regardless of the merits or demerits of the bonus bill, there is ground for criticism of the way in which it was jammed through the house. The rules were suspended so that all amendments were shut out and debate was limited. The representatives who voted for the bill undoubtedly have thus provided themselves with a strong argument for their re-election, whatever may be the final fate of the measure.

THE senate went on record in favor of another amendment to the Constitution by adopting the joint resolution to have presidents inaugurated on the third Monday in January and the new congress to take office on the first Monday in January after election. Only seven votes were cast against it. The resolution was introduced by Senator Norris, who thus explained it: "First—The congress elected in November will go into office on the first Monday in January following, and a session will then begin. This means that the new congress won't have to wait thirteen months before its members are actually sworn into office. This means the abolishment of the so-called 'lame duck congress.' The old congress will have no session after the election.

"Second—It abolishes the existing constitutional provisions a congress assembles in December after election and runs until the fourth of March, when it expires by limitation. It is in this so-called 'short session' of congress that all kinds of jokers creep into the laws.

"Third—Under the present Constitution, if the people fail to elect a President, and the election is thrown into the house, it is the old repudiated congress that elects the President, and not the new. This amendment will reverse conditions."

INCOMPLETE returns from the North Dakota primary show that Mr. Coolidge was the winner of the Republican endorsement, with Senators Johnson and LaFollette running neck and neck for second place. North Carolina's delegation to the Cleveland convention was instructed for Coolidge.

McAdoo won a big victory over Senator Underwood in Georgia, the returns making it certain that he will have the state's 28 votes in the New York convention.

To his close friends in Washington Senator LaFollette is said to have admitted that he desires to run for President this year on a third ticket. He wants to be nominated, not by a brand new third party, but by a convention of independent Republicans to be held after the convention in Cleveland has nominated Coolidge and to which members of all parties will be admitted. It is asserted that he has no hope of being elected next November but believes his plan would smash the regular Republican party, result in a Democratic victory and open the way for a third party that would be the leading party of the nation four years hence. Of course all this may be mere political gossip.

MAJOR MARTIN and Lieutenants Smith, Wade and Nelson, the army's globe-trotting aviators, who started from Overland Park, Santa Monica, Cal., have flown their four planes as far as Seattle without accident. There the machines are being equipped with large pontoons for what is regarded as the hardest part of the trip—from the United States to Japan by way of Alaska and the Aleutian Islands. He says the amalgamation was inevitable for economic reasons.

SIR ESME HOWARD, the new British ambassador, made his first public address at a dinner of the Pilgrim society in New York. The most important of his utterances was this: "An attitude of complete aloofness and lack of interest in the affairs of the other white continent cannot be wholesome for either of the two. I cannot but believe that America will unquestionably feel the impulse to work, in her own way and in her own time, for permanent peace in Europe, on which, to put it on no higher grounds, so much of her own prosperity depends. We in England have long ago realized that a policy of 'splendid isolation' was but an idle dream and a vain imagining."

IN AN important statement dealing primarily with the definite abandonment of the Singapore naval base project, Prime Minister MacDonald told parliament that the British government would do nothing to encourage the new race for armaments. He pointed out that the government stands for a policy of international co-operation through a strengthened and enlarged League of Nations, settlement of disputes by conciliation and judicial arbitration, and the creation of conditions which will make a comprehensive agreement on the limitation of armaments possible.

GENERAL DAVES' commission of experts, it is now said, will not report until April 3. The German elections are set for May 5 and those of France for May 11, and presumably there will be no decision as to acceptance of the report until the results of these elections are known.

Bears in the franc market, especially banks in Zurich, Amsterdam and Vienna, are in difficulties because they were caught short in the great squeeze resulting from the support that Morgan and Lazard of London gave the Bank of France. The latter institution bought all the francs offered and refuses to settle, demanding actual delivery.

THE Chinese government has refused to ratify an agreement with Russia which was signed by its representative and has ordered the soviet envoy to leave Peking because he wrote insulting notes to the foreign office. Moscow, therefore, has broken off the negotiations for a peace treaty. The situation is considered dangerous and correspondents say civil war in China is likely to break out again. The Chinese also are having disputes with Japan concerning the Shantung railway and two Japanese naval squadrons are in Chinese waters.

DOWN in Honduras, where a revolutionary movement has been going on for some time, the rebels have won a series of battles with the forces of Generals Arias and Busso, who assumed dictatorial powers after the death of President Gutierrez, and have occupied Tegucigalpa, the capital, and all the ports. There was wild disorder in the capital and the American ministers asked for protection, so a landing force from the cruiser Milwaukee was rushed to the city from Amampala.

GROVER CLEVELAND BERGDOLL, the draft evader, says he will soon return to America unconditionally and stand trial for draft evasion, pleading guilty. But he already is under sentence for desertion and presumably must serve five years for that offense if he comes back. G. W. Powell, director of the Americanization commission of the American Legion, says the legion has guaranteed the personal safety of Bergdoll if he will return and take his medicine.

IS OUR POLICY WISE?

Ever since we became familiar with and kept track of the local situation in Chilton county, there are some phases of it that have surprised us and mystified us.

So far as politics are concerned, every man and woman is absolutely entitled to exercise their own personal preference when it comes to belonging to any political party of faction and they have the right to exercise and express that preference at the ballot box. That is one right that we have never attempted to deprive any qualified voter from exercising in his or her own way, but there is another side to this question that it is impossible for us to exactly understand or appreciate the wisdom of it when it comes right down to handling the personal and specific affairs of our county.

As we see it, a dividing line on the issues that may arise between the two great national parties, when it comes down to handling the absolutely local affairs of our county, is about as absurd a proposition as the imagination could paint.

In the churches, in the lodges and in the personal business affairs of the town and county, no reasonable nor honorable person is ever heard of who allows the question of politics to sway his judgement or induce him to boycott or abuse his brother, neither religiously, fraternally nor in a business way.

The politics of a decent and intelligent person never means a thing on earth when, it comes to uprightness and honesty as a man and citizen. In his own mind and best judgement he may honestly differ with his neighbor and friend politically, but if he is half a man, it does not affect his confidence in the integrity and honesty of his neighbor.

Honesty and good citizenship is a distinctive characteristic that belongs to millions of good true and upright men in this great country of ours, who differ, as widely as the poles in their political faith. Some of them believe in a high protective tariff while others believe in a tariff for revenue only. Some of them believe in a strong central government at Washington, dictating, in a large measure, the policies of the states, while others believe in the constitutional rights of the states to govern themselves, and so on. But in the rank and file there is perhaps, as much honesty and patriotic love of country in one party as in the other. It has looked that way when an enemy has seen fit to cross the path of our common country. There was no politics involved in the common patriotism that swept the real people of this country when our boys were in the trenches.

What is the cause for the rancor of bitterness that is demonstrated in Chilton county? Do we not all have to live under the same conditions? Is there a citizen of the county, worthy the name, who does not wish for a common peace and prosperity to bless us all? We hope not.

When you go to talk about the other fellow, always size up your own short comings and crookedness before you start, for many times your audience will be "laughing in their sleeve" at how hard you are hitting your own self.

The latest model for flapper dresses seems to be cut out by a bed sheet pattern. They are then rakishly wound around part of the body. A gaudy cigarette hat and a fancy rat tan walking stick completes the full dress. It sure is a peach—but its rotten.

Eleven hundred heirs have been found to 34 acres of land situated in the down town district of New York. This property is now worth $34,000,000. It was leased out by its owner for one hundred years and the lease has now expired. What a fat plum for the lawyers.

Dr. Goodspeed is attempting to write the New Testament in our modern English. We have read a few chapters of his work, but it made us so sad to realize how much better language the writers used 1900 years ago than they do now that we quit.

A LIVE LETTER

An Interesting Communication From One Who Knows

Years ago I met a man who had lived in a certain county in the state of Georgia and who had never been fifty miles from the farm. He decided that he would take a trip to New York City. Naturally, he wished to see the sights. As he was walking through Central Park, he saw two men in conversation, talking about a game of base ball. As he approached them, he heard the word "base ball" used, and said to one of them, "Mister, is there going to be a ball in town to-night?" The man whom he addressed had a bat on his shoulder, and he said to him, "If you do not go on, I will wear this bat out on you." The visitor to the city was no coward, but considering "discretion the better part of valor" walked away from them about twenty feet, stopped and said, "You let me catch you down in Georgia and I will give you the d—!" Recently, a candidate for president was caught doing this, and if we are to judge by the returns, was given that in the end, he had from the country proposed to give the ball player." The best laid plans of mice and men gang aft a-gley.

In spite of the orators from Alabama, and their prophesies, their candidate, one year ago, had made but one grand slam. State, won by a landslide. But they say, "It was a landslide, and that idea gave us a landslide." Strange to say, the orators from the eloquent state, the orators and gave Mr. McAdoo a "dish of crow" and he received more than a majority out of about ten thousand votes.

To the thoughtless, the suggestion came, it was he who was in Alabama will "dish of crow" swallow after their unfatigued meditation in reference to the Georgia primary.

By insinuation and innuendo an effort has been made to belittle the candidacy of W. G. McAdoo, when all fairminded people know that he has had no personal scandal. To his credit, the Georgia Senator from Alabama does not stoop to such methods. He makes an honorable, open fight, and disdains the methods of small politicians. The time may come when the people alluded to may have to support Mr. McAdoo for the Presidency. Or not a palatable dish.

The folks in Chilton county are to be congratulated that during the efforts of the Ku Klux Klan they are to have the honor of seeing that most wonderful screen play "The Birth of A Nation." It portrays in no uncertain way the awful conditions that obtained during the days of reconstruction when "Carpet Baggers, Scalawags" and negroes were united in a most unholy alliance, seeking to destroy the civilization of the South and to bring about such conditions as exists in Hayti. But the Ku Klux Klan, heroically met the situation and brought redemption to a down trodden people. No man with pure Anglo Saxon blood in his veins can view the picture and fail to be a loyal to the cause of right.

As one who belonged to the Hoosier Knights in the days of tried men's souls, and who knows the issues that had to be met, I lift up my voice to-day, to-day, I greet the men who yearn to belong to the "Invisible Empire" for like the men of the 60's they stand for right and righteousness, and next to the Church of Christ, are the factors which shall help to redeem our land from evil forces that would make, not only the South but all of our Common Country, the subject of the domination of the "Hurrals" for the Ku Klux Klan. Through their influence, we will be for Americans.

On Friday night of last week the alarm was sounded, and the Mess-Hall was found to be in flames that had gotten beyond control. It, and all of its contents were destroyed. That left us with out ranges, cooking utensils, dishes, knives, and forks, tables and chairs. Breakfast time, not many hours away, and with fifty mouths to be filled the question was, where shall we eat? With their accustomed ability, Doctor and Mrs. Fowler shifted the coals and waiters to the hospital, and at the usual time the bell sounded the call, and we had breakfast.

We had three meals at the hospital Saturday a Mess-Hall was located in one of the cottages. All needed paraphanelia was brought and installed, and breakfast was served at the new place on Sunday morning. So much for knowing how to manage.

A HIGHWAY PICTURE

"The Road to Happiness," a motion picture designed to promote interest in better highways has just been completed at the Ford Motion Picture Laboratory.

It was produced by the Motion Picture Laboratory in conjunction with the Bureau of Public Roads, U. S. Department of Agriculture, the Highway Educational Board and the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce and carries their endorsement.

President Coolidge personally appeared in one of the scenes, and has expressed his approval of the picture. He is shown presenting a scholarship certificate to "Bob Preston" the farm boy hero of the story who is winner of a prize essay contest on better roads. The scene was taken on the White House grounds and with the President, others appearing in it include members of the Highway Educational Board of which Roy D. Chapin is chairman.

Principal settings of the film were taken around Fairfax, Va. fifteen miles out of Washington, and the chief characters were portrayed by people residing in that vicinity.

Copies of the film are being sent to branches of the Ford Motor Company in the United States and the picture will be shown generally. Highway Commissioners, County engineers, road officials, schools and all interested in the promotion of improved highways may obtain use of the film free of charge.

An L & N Train 530 Miles Long

The distance, "as the crow flies," from Cincinnati to Montgomery is about 500 miles. The rolling stock equipment of the L & N—62,000 freight cars, 1,350 locomotives, 820 passenger cars, 2,000 cabooses, and various units of work equipment—coupled together makes a solid train 530 miles long.

To visualize this huge train, think of the normal pace of 25 miles an hour. It would require over 21 days for a man to travel from one end of it to the other.

Think of the tremendous money investment—$100,000,000 represents—$100,000,000. Imagine the expenditure to maintain and operate it, scattered all over the L & N system, and to keep roadway and tracks in good and safe condition—about $110,000,000 per year.

Think of the help to keep clear your mind the importance of the L & N Nashville Railroad—serving the people of 13 states with $75,000,000 annually in freight, 100,000 employees, fostering industry, farm and factory and contributing to state, civic and educational progress through the payment of $1,000,000 in taxes. Preserve these things in your memory and you will appreciate more fully the individual and the public benefits that result from the undisturbed operation of the great transportation system.

THE FORD OUTPUT

Swinging into its big spring production, the Ford Motor Company, Wednesday, March 12, reached its highest mark in its history when its domestic assembly plants produced a total of 7,456 cars and trucks. This record-breaking figure does not include the daily output of cars and trucks for export, now the production of the Manchester, England, and Ford of Canada plants, which manufacture most of the products.

The new production record is of special significance as it indicates enormous demand being made throughout the country for Ford cars and trucks and the company's endeavor to bring its output up to the requirements as to avoid repetition of the shortage which existed last season when thousands of persons were disappointed in not being able to secure delivery of cars.

WHY NOT MAKE A FIGHT

It is the announced policy of the Federal Highway department to make the State Highway as nearly straight as topographical conditions will permit. This has been their policy from the first.

An approximately straight line from Prattville to Shelby county line, at the point where the highway now building up there will cross that line, passes through White City, in Autauga county, and from there, to the connection with the Shelby county road, will miss Clanton some four miles to the west, or out in the neighborhood of the Baker School House.

Don't understand us to say now that we are expecting a deal like that, but the following out of the air line proposition would follow a route like that.

Taking in to consideration all of the peculiar and erratic actions that the engineers have been noted for, ever since this joint road building proposition was taken up in our State, you can never tell what may happen next.

Be that as it may, it is a fact that the route of the Highway South of Clanton has not been established. There have been several surveys made but none of them, so far as we can learn have ever been finally accepted and settled upon.

This being true, it looks like there is at least an opportunity to stage a fight before the Commission that will either win the location of the highway for the purpose of 90 per cent of the citizenship between here and Montgomery, or we can demonstrate the fact that the classes and not the masses, in Alabama, are receiving consideration by our Highway Commission.

The citizens around Clanton have never made any concerted effort in regard to Highway construction at all. The disposition has been to sit idly by and let the machine run it.

There is where we have consistently been in our own light. The machine generally runs things as they want them, but they do so because the real people never offer any organized objection.

The voters of Alabama have an influence, even greater than the machine when ever they set their hands to make a fight and in large numbers, demand a service, the machine is afraid to either ignore or deny them.

Machine politics only succeed here or any where, else by allowing the masses to remain in ignorance of their projects and by conspiring together to keep them so busy about other matters they never have time to go in to facts.

The right propaganda is given out to the papers and scattered broadcast to the people, assuring them of the absolute efficiency of the machine, and singing them a lullaby of supposed service. But you all know how it is.

Have we the time and the inclination to wake up on this Highway issue and go down before the Commissioners in such strength that they will be compelled to set up and take notice?

Miss Clara Holley is now a student in the Jacksonville, Alabama Normal. Miss Holley graduated at the County High School last year and has had one year's successful experience in teaching. Miss Holley was one of the leading students during her High school career. We predict she will hold her reputation in the Normal.

Among our very best farmers and citizens of Clanton county here last Saturday, we saw Mr. W. W. Williams. Mr. Williams resides on route seven and no family in Clanton is better provided for than his. If you don't believe it drop in and eat dinner with him unexpectedly.

We are delighted to learn of the rapid progress that Herbert Davis, son of Prof. H. L. Davis, is making at the University of Alabama. He pulls an A on all of his studies. He not only takes high rank in class, but the teachers regard him as brilliant in English and mathematics.

Fonza Cunningham, who is located in the U. S. Navy at Hampton Roads, Va., has been here several days visiting his mother, Mrs. A. F. Brown. Mr. Cunningham is a former graduate of the Clanton High. He made quite a good record as a student.

IMMIGRATION AS SEEN BY DR.

WARD OF HOWARD UNIVERSITY.
A Profound Student for Years of This Question

Cambridge, Mass., Feb. 23
Editor Manufacturers Record:

Immigration legislation is in a critical state in Congress. The protests of various European governments against the Johnson bill are to say the least inappropriate. To base the quotas on the 1890 census is fair and logical. Under the Johnson plan southern and eastern European countries would have quotas giving them roughly the same proportion of the total immigration as the persons from those countries now in the United States bear to our total present population. In other words, the Johnson plan would tend to keep the status quo of our population so far as racial stocks are concerned.

Before the War southern and eastern Europe were contributing over 80 per cent of our immigration. The present census base, that of 1910, gives us an immigration whose racial composition is not fair cross-section of our population. To continue on the 3 per cent 1910 census base means that we are deliberately changing the racial character of our people.

If we have no right to regulate immigration we have no right to exist as a nation. Certain foreign countries have given passports to such of their nationals as they wished to get rid of and we have been taking them. Naturally Roumania and other countries do not want to see the United States closing the door against such immigration. We have far too long been the dump-heap for European undesirable, it should be noted, from the point of view of European governments as well as of the United States.

The Johnson bill is not perfect but it does go a long way in the right direction. To allow foreign governments to dictate to us in this matter and to let foreign "blobs" in this country frighten Congressmen into postponing immigration legislation or into voting against a good restrictive and selective measure is to confess that Americans can no longer decide what is best for their country.

Dr. Ward has seen what the rush of foreigners has done to that section, how Massachusetts has 66 per cent foreign stock, Rhode Island 69 per cent and all New England 60 per cent, and how the very existence of this element is drawing many of the New England leaders of Anglo-Saxon stock and millions of capital, out of New England to escape the power of this alien element. And yet many short-sighted men are willing to see that conditions duplicated in America—Manufacturers Record.

VOLUME 3

CLANTON, ALABAMA, APRIL 1921

NUMBER 30

REV. G. A. HORNADY

On Monday of last week, Mr. Littlejohn, the Sheriff of Chilton county had business at the "Soldiers Home." Coming down the highway in his car he found the hill leading from the church in such state that he was forced to foot it from Culver's store to the Home and return.

I found the Sheriff to be a pleasant and affable gentleman, and it was a pleasure to meet with him. The folks who know him say that he is "faithful" and fearless in the discharge of his duties, and it was but natural for me to wish that some other county officials deserved the same encomium. If he was responsible for the conditions of public roads, we think that the hill which he was compelled to dodge would be put in such shape that the people in cars would not have to park there and walk to the "Soldier's Home."

On the 27th day of April, "Memorial Day" will be observed, and it is to be hoped that the visitors on that day will be able to come in comfort.

Friday the 28th, the Ku Klux Klan sent five new nice cars to carry the members of the "Home" to Clanton where they were to be their guests at the "Birth of a Nation." We awaited their coming at Culver's store (Necessary Parking place), and after a safe and pleasant trip were furnished with tickets of admission by the "Klan."

It has been several years since the writer saw the play but, as before, it revived memories of the days that tried, men's souls and aroused new impulses to the traditions of the soldiers.

When the scene portraying the effort to establish social equality was thrown upon the screen, men and women went wild, and from the expression heard, there were no "black and white" in the audience. It was a revelation of such conditions as served to make men stand together and swear that "Come weal or woe" there should be "White Supremacy." But for the efforts of the Klan in the days of Reconstruction, we who are living would be trodden under foot by black brutes and their leaders.

One man said to me, "if that picture is true to life, I am a democrat as long as I live." And yet it did not tell the whole of the awful story. The "Klan" of the 60's is no more, but it has a worthy successor in the white robed men of today. As those who are now were inspired by the purest patriotism and love for country so do men who wear the white robes today stand prominently forth as the exponents of those principles which are the guarantee of the very best for civilization and native land. The folks from the Home have not done singing praises to the fine body of men who have to them this most enjoyable entertainment.

In their behalf permit me to express in no uncertain way, the thanks of each and every one of them.

The Ku Klux Klan! Long may it, the church of Christ, present those teachings of truth and righteousness which tend to make citizenship mean something, including in no uncertain way loyalty to America.

G. A. HORNADY

Messrs Leslie and Jekes Maddox, of Marbury, and others, were in Clanton last week attending the picture show, "The Birth of a Nation," at the Wadesonian Theatre.

A WONDERFUL SHOW RECORD

Under the Auspices of the Ku Klux Klan, the Wadesonian Theatre Sorens With "The Birth of a Nation."

A new and distinctive record for picture shows in Clanton was made by the Wadesonian Theatre last week, when they put on, for eight performances, that wonderful historical picture, "The Birth of a Nation."

Last Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock the first performance was given and a capacity audience was on hand. At 7:30 that night came the next performance, and before the hour arrived every seat was sold and many anxious visitors were turned away.

The same program was put on Friday. At the 3 o'clock show on Friday the Ku Klux Klan had sent autos to the Old Soldiers Home at Mt. Creek and brought every inmate who was able to make the trip to the show as their special guests.

These old heroes of the 60's, both male and female, enjoyed the show to the limit, and many of them told of having lived through the very scenes portrayed on the screen.

The Klan also invited every man and woman over 65 years to attend the show as their guests at any performance that suited them. Many old people availed themselves of this invitation and were taken special care of by Mr. Wade himself and all of the other employees.

Friday night there was such a large overflow crowd that the management put on a second run of the picture beginning at 10:30. Again on Saturday night it was necessary to have two performances to take care of the crowd. The attendance was phenomenal all the way through. It was the most universally popular show we have known of.

One thing that was a most noticeable feature of every performance was the fact that every time the name of the Ku Klux Klan was flashed on the screen, or any member of the hooded band appeared in the picture, round after round of applause swept the large audience. It seemed like a very popular sentiment prevailed in their favor.

Many of the old people who attended testified to the truthfulness of the historical data portrayed by the picture in regard to the awful days of reconstruction that were forced upon the southern people after the civil war.

It is almost unthinkable now to realize that such a bitter spirit could live in the heart of any Anglo Saxon man, as that which dominated such men as Sumner, after the great Lincoln was assassinated.

It looks like the lessons taught by this picture would be taken to heart by our people of the present day, especially so when we have a man in the presidential chair right now who is doing his utmost to have the 15th amendment the civil rights amendment and the Dyer anti-lynching bill put through Congress and rigidly enforced in the South. The old spirit of hate still lives.

GOT THEM SOME HOW

Last Monday the fishing fever broke out in full epidemic force in Clanton and the creeks, branches and the river were literally thronged with victims, armed with every kind of tackle, lure or deceptive device for enticing the finny denizens from their watery haunts.

The epidemic was no respecter of persons, for the hungry anglers came from every walk of life. Preachers, Doctors, Lawyers, Druggists and laymen galore were stricken.

One quartet deserves especial mention, not alone for their prominence, but mainly for the reason that they came back with their catch and went on exhibition down in town. The pictures made, in fact, for the purpose, we suppose, of corroborative evidence of their skill as they relate their exploits later on.

They brought back a wonder string of fish, about 86 in number and over 50 pounds in weight.

This particular party of sportsmen was made up of Dr. L. L. Gwaltney, Editor of the Alabama Baptist, Dr. S. J. Ezell, pastor of the Baptist church here, and Messrs E. E. Upchurch, and M. L. White.

SERVICE IN NEW CHURCH SUNDAY

The Methodist congregation worshipped in their new church.

Each department of the Sunday School was given its part of the excellent equipped building.

Future years will show the wisdom of those who looked into the future far enough to see the paramount importance of building this magnificent edifice so well equipped for Sunday School work as well as for other services.

Dr. Wilkerson, the pastor, filled the pulpit at eleven o'clock last Sunday to a large and appreciative audience.

Dr. M. E. Lazenby, Editor of the Alabama Christian Advocate published in Birmingham, preached at the Methodist church Sunday night. In addition to being an able writer, he is quite an effective speaker and his message Sunday night was interesting and enjoyed by the large congregation present.

Miss Hazel Covington of Montgomery, will be here next Sunday to assist in organizing the Methodist Sunday School. She is a very capable Sunday School worker and all people interested in the Methodist Sunday School are earnestly requested to come and aid in this work of such far reaching nature.

A LATE EASTER

It has always been said that a late Easter denotes a late spring.

If there is anything in that, our spring this year will be unusually late, for Easter Sunday does not arrive until April 20.

It is also said that it will frost in April on the same dates that it thunders in February.

Now, if there is any gum in that old saying, we are due to have frost on April 23, for the lightning and thunder was in evidence in earnest on February 28.

But, some how or other, we believe more in our own premonitions than we do in these old signs and we have felt all this year, just exactly like the God of the harvest was going to smile upon us this year and grant a propitious season for all of our endeavors.

Put a smile on your face and contentment in your heart and remember that the "sun is always shining" and that blessings wait upon those who trust in God and do their duty.

SERIOUSLY ILL

The many friends of Mr. Guy Higgins will be grieved to learn that he is quite seriously ill at this time.

His conditions grew worse last Sunday night and on Monday he was transferred to the Hospital where, it is feared, an operation will be necessary to put him back on his feet.

Our best wishes for a speedy recovery are extended and we will certainly be glad to see him on his feet again and on the job.

Dr. C. C. Wilkerson, our esteemed Methodist pastor, took Dr. W. E. Lazenby, Editor of the Alabama Christian Advocate, on a motor trip Monday morning to the Soldier's Home to visit the honored inmates of that splendid institution.

THE WEATHER MAN SCORES

Talking about an April fool that was a real corker, the weather man put one over Tuesday morning that can't be beat.

March went out Monday night like a real gentle lamb and fishermen thronged the streams like swarms of locusts.

We all gulped down the spring zephyrs like hungry hogs and even straw hats crawled out of their winter quarters and flashed about, on land in the limpid spring sun.

It's all when we woke winter was back on the job in full regalia. The cover was too tight and the coal man bowed over the situation.

The straw hats hid instantly and the carded overcoats were hunted up in the Old Boreas was in his glory and whistled melodies of jazz right to the north pole.

A ghastly joker on personal sport the weather man is a winner, pulled off his April fool and we bit like suckers.

RUMMAGE SALE

The ladies of the Baptist Church are having a Rummage Sale on now every day in the Reynolds building, recently vacated by the Cowart-Barber they have some wonderful values the line of clothing that looks as good as new.

Mr. P. D. Wilson and Prof. Ira Pegues have formed a partnership and opened Real Estate and Insurance offices in the Wilson Building.

Mr. Wilson, is a Clanton Pioneer and Prof. Pegues has taught both the City and High School here. Both are good business men and hustlers and we predict for them a large share of the business in these lines here.

See them if you want to buy and list your property with them if you want

CARD OF THANKS

Allow me the privilege of expressing through the columns of your good paper to all who were responsible for tendering to us the use of the Court House for worship during the construction of our church, our appreciation. It has met our every need and enabled us to carry on our work unhindered.

C. C. WILKERSON, Preacher in Charge

Rev. J. W. Gibson, pastor of the Methodist church at Pittsview, was here Monday and Tuesday.

A "TACKY PARTY"

Circle No. 1 and 5, of the Methodist church, will entertain at a "Tacky Party," Friday night at 7:30 o'clock, at the home of Mr. W. A. Reynold.

Every one is cordially invited to come, especially young people.

Admission 10 and 20 cents. Those who do not dress "tacky" will be charged 25 cents. A prize will be awarded the tackiest costume. Refreshments free.

The judges will be the Methodist and Baptist pastors and the principal of the High School.

CATTLE DIPPING

Dr. Jackson, the Federal official who represents the general government, was in Clanton a day or so last week in the interest of that work.

In this connection we desire to point out a few facts and to make a few suggestions that appeal to us as being just and right to everyone in the final settlement of this troublesome question.

In the first place, Autauga county has already cleaned out her ticks and is tick free. Bibb is cleaning out now and will be tick free right away. In Shelby the same thing is true. So now if Chilton will only finish up the work here, there will be no point for infection to reach us.

Another important thing is that you will only have to dip in infected districts. Much of the county is already tick free and in these areas you will not be requested to dip. Dr. Jackson assured us of this fact.

In conclusion allow us to entreat you every one to not make of this matter a political issue. It is not nor ever has a thing on earth to do with politics. No political party can possibly be blamed for tick infection and no political party is responsible for the fact that cattle dipping is a necessity and a law.

This is merely a matter that has to be met by every one face to face and must be recognized by all citizens as an absolutely necessary work for our common protection.

We beg of every citizen, no matter what your politics are, that you lend every bit of your cooperation towards cleaning up ticks in our county. It is a plain matter of business and should be met as such. No politics are involved, and no citizen worthy the name, will undertake to drag any kind of a political issue into the matter.

HOSPITAL NOTES

Rev. W. W. Robinson was discharged from the Hospital Tuesday.

Rev. P. G. Carter who was operated on for appendicitis Wednesday is doing well and enjoying visits by his old Clanton friends.

Miss Ernia Thomas was operated on Wednesday for appendicitis.

Mrs. Geo. D. Miller, nee, Vera Mae Pinson, of Cooper is the happy mother of twins, a boy and a girl, Hugh and Hulett who arrived Saturday morning.

Mr. Guy Higgins who is in the hospital is improving.

Mrs. Willis Parker who was operated on for appendicitis went home today.

Mrs. J. M. Bridges and daughter left the hospital Wednesday.

Mrs. W. T. White was in for a local operation last week.

FIFTH SUNDAY MEETING

Last Sunday one of the fifth Sunday meetings of the Unity Association met, according to announcement, with the Baptist church here.

A large attendance was on hand and the program as advertised, was carried out.

There was one fact in evidence detracted from the full enjoyment of the occasion. Only a very few of the preachers who belong to this division of the Association were on hand and were missed in discussion of the various questions brought up by the program.

Dr. L. L. Gwaltney, Editor of the Alabama Baptist, was present at the 11 o'clock hour delivered a lecture on the general European conditions that was deeply interesting, instructive and entertaining.

At the noon hour the ladies served an ample and delicious dinner at the church which took care of all present and was greatly enjoyed.

The afternoon program was carried out and at about 3 p. m. adjournment came and the large crowd, departed for their homes, unanimous in their opinion that the service was a success and with a determination to avail themselves of every opportunity to participate in all of the Fifth Sunday meetings possible in the future.

TEACHERS' EXAMINATION

The next regular State Examination for teachers will be held at the courthouse on April 21st, 22nd, and 23. All applicants not known to me must be properly identified and no applicant will be permitted to take who does not live or teach in this county, or who does not present a permit from the State Department of Education if living in some other county to be transferred to this county.

No one will be permitted to take for Second who has not finished at least two years of High School or its equivalent and no one will be permitted to take for First who has not had the equivalent of a full High School course.

All applicants should be present at 9 a. m. on Monday except the turn in valid certificates to take for a higher certificate. Those turning in Third's to take for Second should report at 3 o'clock Monday p. m. those taking for First and submitting valid Second's need not report until 1 o'clock Tuesday p. m.

HOWARD L. BOWEN

County Supt. Education.

MILLER-MUIR

Mr. W. M. Miller and Miss Velma Muir were married Sunday morning March 30.

Rev. A. B. Baxley performed the ceremony at his home near Samaria.

TO GET THE LOOSE CASH

Another tent show is billed here for next week. It is called the Georgia Show and the hand bills claim that they travel in Pullman cars.

If it has the usual luck in Clanton they will rake up most of the spare change circulating among the young folks.

Mrs. P. T. Hinkle is at Wetumpka this week on account of the illness of her mother.

MY DAUGHTER WOULD CRY AT EVERYTHING

Nervous and Irritable. By Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Became Entirely Normal

Clinton, Wisconsin.—"My daughter was in a very run-down condition, and was irritable, and would cry at every little thing she was so weak and nervous. As Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had helped me when I was a girl I gave it to her to build her up, and the results were all that we could wish for. I wish that every mother with growing girls would try it for these troubles girls often have. It had taken it myself before my girl was born, and she was one of the nicest babies any one could wish to have. I recommend the Vegetable Compound to women and girls and cannot praise it too highly."—Mrs. L. A. HOLFORD, Box 48, Clinton, Wisconsin.

Mothers can depend upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to relieve their daughters of those troubles they so often have. They know from experience the value of the Vegetable Compound in the treatment of these complaints and many, like Mrs. Holford, give it to their daughters.

Zebu for Farms

The outlandish-looking zebu, reminiscent of zoological gardens and the circus, soon may be seen in many American farmyards. It has been found that by crossing the zebu with our familiar breeds of cattle an animal is produced which is immune to the diseases and plagues to which cows are heir. The milk yield is equal to that of a normal Holstein.

The zebu is a native of India, and has lived for centuries under conditions which would prove fatal to ordinary cattle. It is immune to the most intense heat, and thrives when ordinary American cattle quickly would succumb. It will withstand long periods of drought and consequent lack of fodder.

Many a man's voracity is unimpeachable until he acquires the fishing habit.

The DAIRY

MILK SUBSTITUTE IS EASILY MIXED

Dairy experts at the United States Department of Agriculture experimental farm at Beltsville, Md., have worked out a calf meal milk substitute which is practical, and easily mixed and which contains a greater proportion of home-grown feeds than is used in most calf meals.

The department's recommended ration is as follows: Take 50 parts finely ground corn, 15 parts linseed oil meal, 15 parts finely ground rolled oats, 10 parts dried blood flour, 10 parts skimmed milk powder, one-half part salt. Stir up with warm mixture at the rate of one pound of the meal mixture to about six pounds of water. Increase gradually as the whole milk is decreased, until at the time the calf is 50 days old it should be getting only the grain. At this time $\frac{1}{4}$ to 2 pounds of the meal mixed with water will constitute a day's feed. The total quantity of milk used is about 300 pounds; if less is fed the calves are likely to be thrifty.

The time at which calves can be put on milk substitutes alone, say department dairymen, depends upon the same factors as in the use of separated milk, namely, the breed, development, and vigor of the calves, etc. It is hardly safe, as a rule, even with the most vigorous ones, to attempt to put them on milk substitutes alone within one month after birth; and with calves below normal in vigor some milk for two months or more may be necessary to raise them.

The department suggests, as a guide for feeding the above substitute to large, vigorous calves, the following schedule: First 10 days, 10 pounds of whole milk daily; second 10 days, 8 pounds of milk and 4 pound of meal (mixed up in 6 times its weight of warm water); third 10 days, 6 pounds milk and 0.8 pound meal; fourth 10 days, 4 pounds milk and 1.2 pounds meal; fifth 10 days, 2 pounds milk and 1.6 pounds meal; after 50 days, 2 pounds meal and no milk. Smaller and less vigorous calves should be fed somewhat less, and the milk feeding should be continued a little longer. In any event, a total of 300 pounds of milk should be sufficient. Grain and roughage should be fed with milk substitutes the same as with separated milk.

Whole milk is the best food for a calf; skim milk ranks second. Calves fed the substitute as stated above have been subject to no more digestive troubles than the skim milk fed calves and the gains in weight have not been materially less.

Dairy Calf Is Subject to Digestive Disorders

It is best to let the calves stay with their mothers for two or three days after birth. Then they should be taught to drink from a bucket. Care should be taken to see that the calf is clean for, as every farmer knows, calves are subject to digestive disorders.

The calf should get from 6 to 12 pounds of whole milk daily for the first three weeks and then may be gradually switched over to skim milk and a little grain. Most feeders find it best to give the calves their grain immediately after they have finished drinking their milk. A good concentrate allowance will contain muscle and bone-building nutrients and will contain some fat to replace a part of that abstracted from the milk.

Here are three rations recommended:

1. Corn, 8 parts; bran, 3 parts; oats, 3 parts; oil meal, 1 part.
2. Corn, 5 parts; oats or bran, 3 parts; oil meal, 1 part.
3. Oats, 3 parts; bran, 1 part; oil meal, 1 part.

The calf should be kept hungry, rather than overfed. Overfeeding causes digestive troubles.

Ringworm on Calves Is Very Common in Spring

Ringworm or bran itch is very common among calves in the winter and spring months. It is a skin disease and easily distinguished by the bare and crusted spots it causes. These are white or yellowish in color, first appearing on the head and neck and moving back over the forequarters. If no treatment is used it causes an irritation or itching and spreads by contact with other calves.

It is caused by a fungus or vegetable parasite which is under these crusts or scabs. In order to get the seat of the trouble the scabs must be washed off with hot water and soap and the spots painted over with tincture of iodine. Repeat this treatment every two or three days as long as necessary.

Difficulty With Hubam

It may be said that the culture of hubam as a farm crop encounters more obstacles than does any other legume grown in the Middle West. That explains why there is such a difference of opinion among farmers and others.

Acid phosphate, one of the most valuable sources of plant food for farmers, is now close to the pre-war price.

HEART INTEREST WAS HER THEME

By JANE GORDON

(©, 1924, Western Newspaper Union.)

JANET sat in the cheerless room and her eyes overflowed in hopeless tears. She could not write home for money—the little sheltering home of her parents was now a memory only—an aching memory of the time when Janet had not been alone. The city had seemed so promising; she knew she might have made her way in business had not that foolish, dominating urge forced her to write. "Write!" Janet whispered the word contemptuously.

Who was she, that she had fancied she might succeed where others worthy had failed? And yet, where had she read—that success is a fickle dame, smiling when least expected. And the editor of the Glenville Star had so praised her stories. One had run on in the village paper until Janet herself scarcely knew where to end it. Her friends had eagerly bought the Star, interested to learn the fate of Janet's heroine.

She had a small legacy to start with in the city, and had moved when the stories failed to sell, to a less pleasant location; then on farther down to the dingy house, where now the rent of the cheerless room was due. She decided to end her dream that had long beckoned; to go out in the morning to seek work, for she was untrained in business. Wiping the tears from her eyes, Janet aimlessly picked up an evening paper, an interesting headline caught her attention:

"Mary Manners' Council Chamber"—Mary Manners, pictured in a side cut, was very attractive herself, apparently able to advise in questions of the heart. Janet read on enthralled.

Janet's thoughts went back to Joel, in the village; Joel, who had been so true, who had frowned upon her dream of a career, had tried to discourage her from it, and had offered in place his honest heart and solitary home. Joel lived alone since his father, the last of the parents to survive, was also gone. Janet had not stopped to consider the possibility of love where Joel was concerned; if she had stopped she was afraid it might have interfered with her enthusiasm in the career. So she turned from Joel's discouragement indignantly and went her determined way to the city. Joel, in injured pride, perhaps in hopelessness, had not written—while Janet told herself that he was but part of a past—forgotten.

But Joel's discouraging prophecy had indeed come true. Here she was, stranded in a friendless city. Impulsively she took up her pencil, wrote pages, cut her effusion down to the accustomed length of column letters—Janet had told in her loneliness and heart-burning the story of her discarded love, and her failure in the career which had falsely lured her. She signed the letter "J. A." for Janet Anderson, which had to be written out in full at the top of the manuscript, for Mary Manners' identification.

Some way, the outpouring of her grievous problem had strangely comforted Janet. She slept so refreshingly that she was out early the following morning answering an advertisement for "help wanted" that she had read in the same newspaper. The doctor's wife happened to be very busy that morning, with the cook just left and no new maid engaged—so Janet was hired on the spot, to admit patients and to answer doctor's telephone, at a modest wage. She found, however, that after a substantial dinner at the doctor's house she could do with little supper—so the rent might be ready for the cheerless room.

Upon the bleakest night of Janet's return from the office she found a long envelope awaiting her; before the grate she read the letter inclosed. The letter was from Mary Manners, and it told her, like the unraveling of a fairy tale, that she, Janet Anderson, had won the newspaper prize offered for the best letter in heart interest submitted to the Council Chamber. The letter inclosed the ten-dollar prize said Miss Mary Manners, who was about to be married, was so pleased with Janet's remarkable epistle that, looking for a successor to carry on her column, she wished to see Janet Anderson in person.

Breathlessly Janet ran to the newsstand to procure the paper, turned to the "Council Chamber." Yes, it was there, her name published in full, as prize winner. There were none in the city who read, probably, who would consider the problem a true case, but just a clever effort to win a literary prize. But there was one, reading in his lonely village home who would know the story to be true; know now that Janet regretted the love discarded; know, too, that here now lay a part in the career in writing. She had not considered the possibility of having her name published.

Janet's cheeks grew very pink as she thought of Joel. Her untidy landlady climbed the stairs. "A telephone message for you, Miss Anderson," she said. "Long distance."

It was Joel's voice. "I found you at last, Janet," he said. "After reading your letter to the paper. You are on your way to success—your story was sympathetically told—but I wish—I wonder if you might be persuaded to come back here—to visit my sister, while we talk things over. Oh, Janet, how will you decide your problem?" Janet's happy laughter answered. "I have no coming home," she said. "I am coming home—to stay."

ROAD BUILDING

FEDERAL BUREAU IS STUDYING HIGHWAYS

In the field of highway economics important investigations are being carried on by the United States bureau of public roads. The re-emergence of the highway as a factor in the transportation of people and goods has brought forth problems to be solved, if the use and development of the highways are to be along the most economic lines. Observations have been made in Connecticut to determine the character and amount of commodities hauled by highway, the method of hauling and length of haul for commodities moving over the roads of the state.

It is estimated that 1,019,688 net tons of commodities were transported over the Connecticut highway system during the three months' period beginning September, 1922. A large part of this movement was distinctly a service that could be rendered only by improved highways, as more than a third of the tonnage moved only from one to nine miles, and nearly another third from ten to twenty-nine miles.

In recent years there has been much discussion as to methods of highway financing. In some quarters there has been expressed a feeling that the distribution of the cost to property owners and motor vehicle operators has not been equitably adjusted. To ascertain the facts, the bureau has undertaken to make a thorough study of the source of highway revenue. Attention has first been given to county and local road funds, four counties in Wisconsin being selected for study.

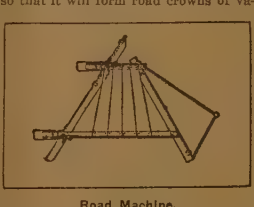

Among the significant findings, some of which are at variance with opinions widely held, are the following:

1. The major portion of the total highway funds is raised by township and county units rather than by the state.
2. Real property taxation produces 62 per cent of the highway revenue derived from these counties.
3. Vehicle license fees produce 9 per cent of the total funds raised in the counties.
4. Significant reduction of real property taxation could only be made by reduction of county and local taxes.

Much progress has been made during the year in researches to supply data for use in the designs of roads. Sections of bituminous road have been tested under truck traffic to determine the cause of the familiar "washboard" wrinkles which sometimes appear in bituminous surfaces. A great many road slabs are being tested by means of an impact machine which duplicates the pounding action of a truck wheel after it strikes a small obstacle on the road. In another experiment a circular track of many sections of concrete, each built of different materials or in a different way, has been tested under traffic to determine the amount of surface wear.

Road Drag Machine Has Adjustable Crossbar

The drag here is provided with means for adjusting the rear crossbar so that it will form road crowns of various slopes. This is done by fastening the bar to the under side of the runners in such a way that either end can be lowered or raised by levers situated upon the runners at the point of attachment. Otto Helms, Colby, Wis., is the inventor.

"Good" Road Should Not Be Judged by Surface

When is a bad road a good one? And when is a good road a bad one? Many motorists think of a road with a macadam, concrete or asphalt surface as "good," without considering any other feature of travel over it. A road should not be judged by its surface alone. Some of the so-called bad roads with their cleaner air and picturesque scenery loom up as vastly more desirable for enjoyable motoring than the over-travelled highways that parallel them. In these modern times when the motorist rides on long flexible springs and his car is equipped with efficient devices for checking spring recoil, he can essay gypsy trails and country turnpikes with complete confidence. If his automobile is properly equipped he will ride in comfort at most any pace he chooses.

Highways for the Future

The National Motorists' association, with 374 automobile clubs in support, is developing a program under which it will ask congress for such legislation as will solve the automobile problems of tomorrow as well as today. An important feature will be the urging of highway appropriations for durable roads, not merely mileage. From every section of the country come reports that legislation for highways to meet present needs will fail to provide adequate roads for the future.

MARY SUCCEEDS ON MAIN STREET

By LAURA MILLER

(©, 1924, by Laura Miller)

COMUS IN COLUMBIA

Columbia, Mo., claims Athens, not Gopher Prairie, as its model. To live a half block from the University of Missouri is a very different thing from living round the corner from Main Street, Miss Gladys Wheat assures me with healthy scorn for my ignorance. Such students and faculty folk, "experts in many redins," as work with her, writing her plays and acting in them, are not to be found in quantity certainly—on any happenstance Main Street. Yet it is significant for other arts as well as that of the theater, so thoughtful artists tell me, that Miss Wheat's Theater studios should be on Missouri avenue, rather than on Broadway. To many mature women, themselves happily busy in some small town, I've put the question: "Do you advise the average girl, just starting to work, to go to a big city?" And over and over they reply: "No, indeed, if she is the average girl. But, if she is entering an art or profession, she will have to go."

Yet here is Miss Wheat pursuing a profession that calls on the arts of acting, dramatic writing, and costume and scenic design, a thousand miles from the center of theatrical production. She is not merely copying others' successes, either. "My aim," she says, "is to interpret and reflect the child's world in drama as the drama of grown people reflects their world. My personal contribution is the visualization of plays written by others. I direct, design and make the costumes, the sets, and the properties. Up to the present time we have produced only plays written for children, and for production in this theater."

She is frank enough to say that financial support does not as yet equal the intellectual, histrionic and literary aid she has received. Even so, her conclusion carries a message for others artistically inclined, who wonder if they must become needies in the haystacks of New York in order to attain. Here is an enterprise, she declares, "carried on in a little community, but based with ease and pleasure by big people."

Since I'm anything but an expert in the arts of the theater I can't decide whether such experiments as this at Columbia have, geographically speaking, a fair chance of success. But Miss Wheat has set me wondering. Wasn't Comus an Athenian god of drama? And were Comus and his followers worried by the population statistics of Athens? Or were they, like Gladys Wheat, content to build for big people?

SHEKELS VS. PSYCHOLOGY

A famous psychologist once told me the difference between a woman's and a man's mind. "Throughout the ages," he explained, "man measured success by the property he could amass in one form or another. Woman had to gain the approval of a man. His surplus provided for both her physical and spiritual needs."

"These two traits run deep. Woman is more conventional, that is, more interested in community approval than man. However advanced a feminist, she usually gains pleasure from intangible approval rewards, while a man on the same job counts the cash."

Pure theory? Perhaps. Yet in hundreds of letters from women in the working world, the intangible factors do seem to make for contentment. The truth seems to be that these women just haven't bothered to be materially "successful," because they're "happy" in their work.

This little letter is a case in point. Is Julia Wossman a success or not? Her name was sent by a member of the Louisiana board of health, who thought her was a successful force in her town. "What do you think?" "Dear Mrs. Miller: "I covet very much the honor of being written up as a woman who has succeeded on 'Main Street,' but such a write-up about me wouldn't be at all according to the facts in my career. It would be pure fiction. "I am principal of an elementary school of twelve teachers, drawing a salary of only $1,800 a year. I'm a very obscure person, living on a 'side street' in a sweet, sleepy old Southern town. "If you had asked for a story of some one who has been happy in a small town, I could fit into your plan. I middle into nearly everything that happens in my little community, far more often than I succeed, but enjoy the contact meddling gives me. "Please, when you finish your plan of writing about women who have succeeded in small towns, turn to the 'needles in the haystacks.' I shall be glad to be used. "Sincerely yours, (Signed) "JULIA C. WOSSMAN."

Where Speed Makes Beauty

Wherever crystals form rapidly their shapes will be more beautiful in all likelihood than when they form slowly. When they form rapidly they assume fantastic branching forms in some instances, but where they take a leisurely course of freezing or solidifying they tend to become more solid. This is one explanation of the beauty of the snowflake, which is a form of crystal.

WHEN DIZZY--- BLACK-DRAUGHT

Arkansas Lady, Learning From Parents, Says Black-Draught "So Easily" Corrected Her Constipated Condition.

Farmington, Ark.—"I have been keeping house for nineteen years," says Mrs. O. J. Guilliams, of near here, "and since I began housekeeping I can't remember a time when we haven't used Black-Draught, for my parents used it before me. "I had suffered so much from constipation and, finding that Black-Draught corrected this condition so easily, I just keep it and use it. When I get dizzy and everything goes round, I know then that I must take Black-Draught. It regulates me, my head doesn't feel so heavy and I get all right. "My husband has found it so beneficial for sick headaches. "Poisons which may cause great pain and much danger to your general health are re-absorbed by your blood when not properly eliminated. Don't neglect your health. "Theodore's Black Draught acts on the liver and stomach, bringing on elimination, and, by regulating the action of the liver, when it is torpid, helps to drive out the poisons and tends to leave the digestive organs in a condition of healthy activity. "Keep Theodore's Black-Draught in the house. Take it at the first sign of constipation or liver trouble. Millions use it. You should."

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Attorney General Daugherty Resigns at the Request of President Coolidge.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

AT LAST President Coolidge has rid himself and his administration of the incubus of Attorney General Daugherty. Last Thursday the President in writing asked the resignation of Daugherty from the cabinet. The resignation was received at the White House next morning and was immediately accepted. It went into effect at once.

Mr. Coolidge's immediate reason for requesting Daugherty to get out was the position the latter had taken in refusing to open the confidential files of the Department of Justice to the Brookhart investigating committee. Daugherty made good in his expressed determination not to leave the cabinet unless the President directly asked him to do so. Now he and his supporters feel that he has not been fairly treated, in that the investigation into his conduct has not been completed.

AL JENNINGS, evangelist, politician and former train robber, presented to the senate oil committee his promised "white of a story." It was to the effect that in 1920 the late Jake Hamon, then Republican national committeeman from Oklahoma, told him that Harding was to be nominated for president and that it had cost Hamon $1,000,000. He said that $250,000 of this was given to the late Senator Penrose of Pennsylvania and $25,000 to Will Hays. Hamon told him, continued Jennings, that he was to be made secretary of the interior and was to share in public lands. However, he was killed soon after the election.

Jennings also quoted Hamon as having said that with the money he would make he eventually would become president of the United States.

"Wasn't Hamon for Wood at the start?" asked Senator Bursum.

"He never liked Wood," Jennings replied. "He said Wood was too much impregnated with the d-d fool honesty of Theodore Roosevelt."

Roxie Stinson told the senate committee investigating Attorney General Daugherty a lot more alleged facts damaging to the reputation of him and his associates, and some of them were confirmed from other sources. Her most sensational story was about a "$33,000,000 oil stock deal" carried out in the fall of 1922 by five men of national prominence, whom she declined, for the time being, to name. She said Daugherty and Jess Smith, her divorced husband, were so because they were not in on it. This alleged deal was in Sinclair stocks, but Roxie's story was so vague that it was regarded generally as fanciful.

Harry Sinclair's refusal to answer any more questions of the Teapot Dome committee was reported to the senate and that body, by a vote of 72 to 1, decided to turn the matter over to the federal grand jury. The question is one of the constitutional limitations of the powers of congress, and it will ultimately be carried to the Supreme court for decision. C. C. Chase, son-in-law of Albert Fall, also refused to testify, and as he held the position of collector of customs at El Paso the senate voted for his impeachment for conspiracy by the house. It was informed that Chase had already resigned, but, as Senator Heflin boomed, "too late, too late, the day of judgment has come."

The President still, to all appearance, is not disconcerted by the oil and Daugherty revelations. Last week, at the suggestion of the general board of the navy, he appointed a commissioner to determine the best means of conserving the nation's oil supply. The members are George Otis Smith, director of the geological survey; Rear Admiral Hilary P. Jones, U. S. N., president of the general board and former commander in chief of the United States fleet, and R. D.

Bush of the bureau of mineralogy of the state of California.

REPRESENTATIVE LANGLEY of Kentucky and five other men were indicted in Washington for conspiracy to interfere with the operation of the prohibition law and to defraud the government.

JUST as plans for the peaceful settlement of the reparations and other post-war troubles of Europe were beginning to move steadily toward accomplishment, M. Lasterie, French minister of finance, "pulled a homer" last Wednesday and compelled Premier Poincare and his cabinet to resign. There was considerable dismay in diplomatic circles, but this was allayed when M. Poincare, after consulting the presidents of the senate and chamber of deputies, yielded to the request of President Millerand and consented to form a new ministry. The incident, after all, turned out advantageously, for the premier was enabled to get rid of several ministers whose unpopularity had hampered him.

Lasterie's failure to control the financial situation had made him the object of frequent attacks, and when on Wednesday he demanded an immediate vote by the deputies on the government's pension bill the chamber sent it to a committee for investigation. Lasterie thereupon called for a vote of confidence—a parliamentary blunder—and this was refused, 264 to 271. The resignation of the cabinet followed as a matter of course. Poincare, however, felt that he must retain the reins of government until the report of the committee of experts has been published and also believed he should carry on the series of conversations with Prime Minister MacDonald concerning French security. Therefore he undertook the formation of a new cabinet.

THERE seems to be ground for the hope that the Anglo-French conversations will lead to an agreement giving security to France and, in conjunction with the Dawes plan, to a settlement of the reparations problem. It is taken for granted that Germany will accept the experts' report, but it will urge that the German railways be heavily mortgaged and put in the control of a board of trustees instead of being internationalized. The Berlin government announced that the agreement between the Ruhr industrialists and France, which provided France and the allies with coal, in exchange for which the manufacturers were allowed freedom of operations, could not be renewed on April 15, when it expires, because the government could no longer pay for the products delivered. The Association of Rhineland Industries therefore offered the following basis for a new agreement:

The German industrialists will deliver 12½ per cent of the coal output, as called for in the previous agreement, provided France and Belgium in turn facilitate Ruhr production by reducing the reparations coal tax and the cost for the transportation of freight on the Franco-Belgian controlled railway system in the Rhineland and Ruhr.

Poincare, according to Paris dispatches, has an ambitious program by which he hopes to save Europe. If a pact for French security can be arranged with Great Britain, he will soon meet Premier Theunis of Belgium to consolidate their positions, and then will call three great conferences. The second will include the allies, the second the allies and Germany, and the third, intended to make a complete settlement of the European tangle, will include the allies, Germany, the United States and the larger neutral nations.

Prime Minister MacDonald appears to be working along the same lines, for it is stated that he hopes, soon after the experts' report is submitted, to bring about a new allied conference, in which the United States would be asked to participate.

AT THIS writing the incomplete returns from the South Dakota primaries indicate that Hiram Johnson has defeated Coolidge for the Republican preference by a small majority. Belated reports may change this, but in any case the Coolidge campaign managers profess indifference. They assert the President already has 250 delegates in hand and 350 more in sight, outside of contested states, and that with this minimum total of 600 votes he is assured of nomination on the first ballot in the Cleveland convention.

Some of the Coolidge leaders are talking quietly of the advisability of nominating John Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, for the vice presidency. They believe this would be good politics and would in a measure offset the influence of Samuel Gompers, who each year comes nearer to becoming a Democrat. Lewis is held in high esteem by all union labor except the rabid radicals and by the people of the country generally. There is good reason to believe that he would accept the nomination.

TEN million dollars was voted by the house last week for the relief of hungry women and children in Germany. Only 97 members had the nerve to vote against the measure, 240 voting for it. The bill stipulates that the money is to be expended for foodstuffs in this country and the food is to be transported in shipping board vessels. Wherever possible the supplies are to be bought through farmers' organizations. Since the house repeatedly has been informed that there is no real food shortage in Germany, only a failure of proper distribution, it must be admitted that Representative Tucker of Virginia had reason for his assertion that the measure was designed to consolidate the German vote.

TWO more monarchs have been deposed—King George of Greece and the shah of Persia. In the former case the Greek national assembly voted for the deposing of the entire Glucksborg dynasty and its exile, and in favor of the establishing of a republic, subject to the decision of the people in the coming plebiscite. George is quoted as saying that he will not abdicate because he believes the Greeks want him and will vote to keep him on the throne. In Persia the assembly deposed the shah, who has spent most of his time in Europe of late, but the republicans were for the present outnumbered so the shah's infant son was proclaimed ruler under a regency.

WITH all the pomp and splendid ceremony that surrounds such occasions, Archbishops Mundelein of Chicago and Hayes of New York were elevated to the cardinalate by Pope Pius XI. First came the secret consistory, in which the pope proposed the names of the two Americans to the sacred college and the cardinals formally acquiesced, after which the new princes of the church were notified, appeared and delivered addresses. Three days later, in public consistory, the pope invested them with the purple cloaks and red birettas. Seated on his scarlet draped throne, the holy father delivered a long eulogy of America in which he declared that America's "miracle of charity saved millions from starvation, just as the entry of the United States into the World war decided the fate of Europe and the world."

GROVER CLEVELAND BERGDOLL, draft dodger and deserter, is said to be on his way from Germany to America, ready to serve his sentence in order that the estate of his family may be untangled. Maybe he will be met by a reception committee from the group of half-baked student pacifists of Northwestern university who so gratefully listened to an anti-American lecture by a youth who served time in prison for refusing to serve in the army, and then blessed the American flag and its bearer, an ex-service man. But the less said about these young creatures the better, for they are untouched by denunciation and thrive on publicity.

MEXICO'S revolution has almost wholly collapsed. De la Huerta, its leader, has fled the country aboard a small vessel which may have been sunk in a recent storm. Nearly all the other chieftains have run away or surrendered, and the government forces are proceeding to clean up in Frontera, Chiapas and some other localities where there are still bodies of rebels.

Your New Home

should be made artistic, sanitary and livable.

These walls should be Alabastined in the latest, up-to-the-minute nature color tints. Each room should reflect your own individuality and the treatment throughout be a complete perfect harmony in colors.

The walls of the old home, whether mansion or cottage, can be made just as attractive, just as sanitary, through the intelligent use of

Alabastine

Instead of kalsomine or wallpaper

It is absolutely necessary if you expect Alabastine results that you ask for and secure Alabastine.

Avoid kalsomines under various names and insist on the package with the cross and circle printed in red. That is the only way to be sure you are getting the genuine Alabastine.

Alabastine is easy to mix and apply, lasting in its results, and absolutely sanitary.

Alabastine is a dry powder, put up in five-pound packages, white and beautiful tints, ready to mix and use by the addition of cold water, and with full directions on each package. Every package of genuine Alabastine has cross and circle printed in red.

Better write us for hand-made color designs and special suggestions. Give us your decorative problems and let us help you work them out.

An Eye for Business

It was remarked that a shrewd manufacturer of mechanical devices took six poultry journals and read them assiduously.

"Isn't that sort of thing a little out of your line, John?" asked a friend one day.

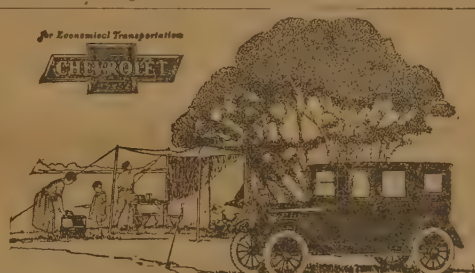

"Not at all. Helps me in my sales."

"As to how?"

"As soon as I learn a man has gone into the chicken business I call to see him about a tabulating machine."

Land Granted to Lafayette

In 1803 Lafayette was given ten different grants of land along the Mississippi river, and in 1824 he was granted one township which comprised 36,000 acres of land in west Florida. Tullahoma is now located on this site. It is impossible to give the locations of the other grants, as the land was not surveyed at that time except by special surveys, which were indicated by special landmarks.

Will Your Family Be Happy This Spring?

Suppose you have definitely decided to buy a Chevrolet this Spring.

That does not necessarily mean that you are going to get it.

Anyone posted on conditions in the automobile business will tell you that thousands of families are going to be unable to get cars this Spring. That has been true almost every Spring for years, but the shortage in April, May and June, this year, is going to be more serious than ever before.

The only way to be sure of a Chevrolet this Spring is to order it NOW.

If you do not want to pay for it in full at this time, any Chevrolet dealer will arrange terms to suit your convenience, so you can pay as you ride.

You will be surprised to learn how easy it is to pay for a Chevrolet.

Will Chevrolet Advance Price? Ten makes of automobiles have already advanced in price. In spite of increased costs of materials, the Chevrolet price is still the same. How long—no one can guarantee. To make sure of your Chevrolet at present low price.

Dogs for Food

The dog meat which enters into the dietary of the Chinese is obtained from a special race, raised for the purpose, of which the characteristic is the color of the tongue. That organ should be of a blue-black color. These dogs are fed on milk and rice for about two months until they reach a certain weight. The number of edible dogs eaten annually in China is estimated at 5,000,000.

Experimental Arithmetic

Teacher (to boy's mother)—Why, what's the matter, has Johnny got the toothache?

Angry Mother—No, Johnny hasn't got the toothache. His suffering comes from your foot teaching. You told him he was to tell you how long it would take him to eat twenty apples if it took one and a half minutes to eat one apple—and he's got stuck on the fifteenth.—Boston Transcript.

Entered in the Post Office at Clanton, Alabama, as Second Class Mail Matter Under Act of Congress.

April the first—all fools day—ought to be popular in the world.

The Senate investigating committee are preparing to cut a "Mellon" next.

A good deal of corn is being planted now and much land put in readiness for King Cotton.

When the modernist can show you something better it will be time enough to pay him any attention.

Corner cutting by some especially "independent" citizens of both colors, calls for an interview with the Mayor.

How about getting out an injunction not allowing the Highway Commission to spend any more bond money at all?

Since the oil scandal broke out in the Coolidge household, we hear very few slurs made at the Wilson administration.

Cat and perch fishing is all the go now. Any trout or bream that hits in and gets caught has only itself to blame.

Two of the big Falls River cotton mills have secured homes in Alabama but neither of them are coming to Clanton.

If all of the money gobbled up by the present administration had been properly handled we could pay off the bonus spot cash.

Some of our money says, "In God we trust." How does that sentiment chime in with recent developments in Washington?

The oil speculators and Wall Street money Kings are going to have to pay more than $12,000,000 for the government this next time.

There are a great many human hearts that are tender and all right until money is involved and then they freeze harder than the north pole.

Several parties went out fishing during the recent spring weather we had. We did not see any fish but we certainly heard some fish stories that sounded natural.

Mr. J. M. Bowman, of Birmingham, is a candidate for President of the Public Service Commission. He is said to be a splendid democrat and mighty fine citizen. Primary April 13.

The longer you live the more you learn about the absolute inconsistency of men. Just as you think you know a friend he flies off, at an unexpected angle and you have to reform your opinion of him.

If LaFollette had kept his name out of the race your Uncle Hiram Johnson would have given Mr. Coolidge quite an interesting fight. The Coolidge support is rather backward in developing.

They are preparing to make a new calendar for the world. It looks like its time to do something, as winter is already running two months ahead of schedule and trying to hog the whole twelve months.

Remember, now, and don't fish for any trout or bream during April or May, but if one happens to bite your cat bait and gets his mouth torn up, don't throw him back to die in the creek. He ought not to be wasted either.

A modernist preacher in Boston told his hearers last Sunday that hell was just ten and one quarter miles from the earth's surface, being situated inside the world. We some times feel like it is not more than half a mile away.

It is conceded that children learn meanness from evil associates. If atheism, infidelity and other "scientific" issues are taught in the schools why wont they learn them? Have you done your child good or evil when you protect him from evil associates and ideas?

MORE DISGRACE.

"Vanity, vanity, all is vanity saith the preacher."

We turn from the annals of high class, official roguery at Washington to the State Capitol at Montgomery and visualize similar conditions at home.

The State Highway Commission has been operating under a cloud of suspicion ever since it was organized and have spent fabulous sums of money belonging to the people of Alabama without really effecting any wide spread service.

Their system has been a wasteful and selfish proposition from the very first, so much so that the last legislature endeavored to eliminate part of the inefficiency at least, by reducing the Board from 15 to 3 members.

Now, it appears, that no benefits are to be derived from this drastic and suggestive reduction of the force. Just as much, if not more, failure to give the people honest service exists now as before.

This triumvirate of autocrats does not appear to have any more desire to build us some real connected roads, for service than did the whole bunch.

Hundreds of dollars spent in junketing trips over the country ostensibly to induce some abolitionist nincompoops away up North to endorse our State Bonds, when in reality, the 7,000,000 worth of bonds had already been sold in Alabama at a profit of 102,000 don't appeal to the common people as a very efficient piece of road building.

Then last week the people over at Epps, Alabama, went into court and secured an injunction against the Commissioners, who had decided to detour a highway, some 20 miles out of its legitimate route, to carry it through a town where one of the Commissioners resides. In their injunction they also propose to test out the constitutionality of the act of the legislature which established the present Commission.

The real cause of all of this rottenness, from Washington right on down to the county governments, is what is known as machine politics. The real people do not rule any more. The tricksters and professional tit suckers, have organized a system that defrauds the people out of their rights of self government. Elections these days do not mean the voice of a free people. They are juggled up and twisted around until a fair expression of the honest public will is almost impossible.

The free people of the United States must either awake to the danger that threaten us right now, or real freedom and a government of, by and for the people will be a farce.

Too many political crooks and too many hyphenated nabobs of wealth are allowed to handle the affairs of this entire country.

We need more red blooded Americans on the job. We need the ports closed to questionable aliens. We need to grow from the inside and not from across the sea for awhile. We need an awakening of true Americans citizens and a united movement upon their part to reclaim this birth right of their very own land.

STILL CLOSIN GDOWN

The cotton mills in the far north east are still gradually giving up the fight and closing down those immense plants that have, for so many long years, supplied the cotton goods and fixed the price of the same to all the world.

They can not meet the competition of the Southern mills, that are rapidly becoming more numerous in the South. We have a big advantage over them as to climate, labor and the saving of freight on the raw material. None of these advantages can be taken from us. They are natural and belong to us on a basis that man can not undermine. Logically the place for the manufacturing plant is always where the raw material is produced.

Hence, the future is going to see our cotton spun, woven and put on the market for the ultimate consumer, right direct from the cotton fields. In just a few years northern spindles will be silent, or will be dispensing their music on Southern breezes.

Now is the time for Clanton to look forward. With a big cotton mill here our future progress would be assured.

What will the answer be

RULING WILL NOT HURT WARRIOR

Mobile To Be Terminus; Capt. E. V. Pickley To Be In Charge of Alabama Division.

Mobile, Ala.—The interests of the Birmingham district and on the Warrior river from Cordova and Birmingham to Mobile will not be injured in the least, in the opinion of those concerned, under the separation of the Warrior and Mississippi rivers in the operations of the federal barge service, additional floating equipment for the Warrior to bring about profitable business, it is believed.

Capt. E. V. Pickley, who is at present superintendent of maintenance at New Orleans, will be transferred to Mobile as operating manager of the Warrior river, though Col. T. Q. Ashburn, at Washington, will continue as chief of the service. Mobile will be the terminus of the Birmingham to Mobile route. Capt. Pickley is well acquainted with the conditions on the Warrior river. Before the government took over the river in 1920, Capt. Pickley owned a boat which came up to the Birmingham district and hauled some of the freight from this section. He became interested in the federal barge service and took position in the management.

"Nigger and Mule" For Road Work. Montgomery, Ala.—Modern ingenuity has not produced anything to equal the "nigger and mule" combination for road building, according to Judge L. F. Sessions, probate judge of Dale county, who was a visitor to the capitol. Judge Sessions stated that while tractors can be used with good results under certain circumstances, the combination referred to above is still the best of any for road construction.

Convicts Kidnap Warden And Escape Little Rock, Ark.—Reports from the Pulaski county sheriff's force said Emory Conlin and Joe Sullivan, convicted of murder in connection with the killing of two Little Rock policemen, had kidnapped Warden Hamp Martin and escaped from the penitentiary.

Fifteen Convicts Given The Lash Birmingham—Fifteen convicts in Jefferson county convict camps have been punished for infraction of rules by being whipped with a lash within the past two months, according to the report of Dr. Glen Andrews, state prison inspector, which was made public at a meeting of the board of revenue.

World Cotton Supply 18,185,000 Bales Washington—The world supply of cotton November 30 last was estimated by the department of commerce at 18,185,000 bales. The department's estimates of world cotton consumption during the four months ending November 30 was 6,210,000 bales.

Carrier Pigeons Used In World Flight Seattle Wash.—Carrier pigeons, as well as wireless, will be used by the four United States army aviators who will leave Seattle about April 1 on their globe-encircling flight, it was announced by Lieut. Clayton Bissell, advance officer of the first division.

Canadian Communication On Canal Washington — A communication from the Ottawa government, understood to be in relation to the project proposed to connect the Great Lakes and the St. Lawrence river, has been received by the Washington government.

Episcopallians Would Curb Divorces San Francisco—Endorsement of the Bok peace plan and consideration of plans to curb easy divorce were leading subjects before annual Episcopal church conventions on the Pacific coast. Resolutions favoring the Bok plan were passed at conventions in Los Angeles and San Francisco.

Last Of Counterfeiting Gang Caught Chicago—With the arrest of Nicholas Gloria and Frank Reubeto, federal operatives believe they have taken the last members of a gang of counterfeiters who plotted to circulate more than $1,000,000 in spurious $20 notes on the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago.

Smoke Fumes Kill Man And Wife New York—Theodore Bauer, manager of a fashionable cabaret in East Fifth street and his wife, Louise, who, before her marriage, was Miss Louise Hurt of Atlanta, Ga., died when overcome by smoke fumes as they were attempting to escape from a fire in their apartment over the cabaret.

Russellville Petitions For New Depot Montgomery—Petition of citizens of Russellville, Ala., for a new and adequate passenger depot at that place has been set for hearing by the Alabama Public Service Commission, to the Chamber of Commerce auditorium, Birmingham, on Tuesday, Feb. 19.

Kaiser's Health Is Cause For Worry Doorn, Holland—Former Kaiser Wilhelm's health has broken down and members of his immediate household fear the worst.

Russia Protests Against U. S. Entry Moscow—Russia has protested to Secretary of State Hughes against alleged unlawful entries of United States ships to Russian ports. It cited the entry of the American cutter

Charity is one of the most blessed sentiments that ever actuates the human heart, but when it becomes a matter of business, and is systemized to save the conscience and to save time and money, we feel just like it ceases to mean anything except selfishness.

Mr. R. M. Smith, of best mine, is here this week acting as a juror. He is the type of man who will do his duty.

Some of the New Jersey legislators missed the majority the other day when a bill passed allowing the Bible to be read in the public schools. New Jersey is to be pitted unless they call an election and dispose of these heathen members.

Dr. M. E. Lazenby, Editor of the Alabama Christian Advocate published in Birmingham, filled the pulpit in the beautiful, commodious and elegant new Methodist church Sunday night.
